AMONG THE JEWS

Interesting Items Concerning Them From Far and Near.

In the presence of the high military and civil officials a tablet was unveiled last month at the synagogue in Pressburg (Austria), commemorating the visit paid to this house of worship by the Emperor a few months ago. The tablet was unveiled at a special service held in honor of the Emperor's eightieth birthday.

On the 23rd of August the Chief Rabbi of Salonica paid a visit to Djavid Bey, the Minister of Finance, who was in Salonica. The interview was extremely cordial. In the course of the conversation, the minister inquired as to the quality of the Turkish language which was being given in the Jewish schools. The Chief Rabbi assured him that the utmost care was being taken of this branch of education. Djavid Bey expressed the desire that German should be thoroughly taught in the Jewish educational establishments. It is worthy of note that Djavid Bey has just returned from a visit to Berlin.

It will be remembered that some time ago the Governor of Jafia made same outrageous remarks concerning the Jews. In reply to protests the Governor sought to excuse himself with the plea that the remarks concerned foreign, and not native Jews. The Chief Rabbi of Turkey, made representations to the Government about the matter. As a result of these representations, the Minister of the Interior has dismissed the Governor, and replaced him by Halil Bey, Governor of Alexandretta.

Last week a by-election for the Reichstag was held in the Zschopau-Marienberg, district of Saxony, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Herr Zimmerman, who was returned as an Anti-Semite at the last general election. A Socialist, Herr Goehre, captured the seat at the first ballot polling 14,831 votes against 4,417 cast for a Liberal and 4,630 for an Anti-Semite.

A great sensation has been caused in St. Petersburg by the revelation that M. Stolypin only recently promised Baron Gunzberg that, whatever M. Schwartz might do in all other institutions, he would not violate the privileges of the Jewish schools. This promise has been flagrantly broken by M. Schwartz's last circular. In the meantime the principals of several Russian private institutions have reduced their fees. Hoping to attract more Russians and thus be able to admit more Jews, from whom they expect to make up the loss.

The outcry against the educational policy of M. Schmartz is assuming unusual dimensions. People who were at one time indifferent to his efforts to reduce the number of Jews in the schools are no longer content to witness the downfall of the great institutions of which Russia has always felt proud. With eight hundred vacancies at the St Petersburg University, and an alarming diminution of applications from Russians, the people are asking themselves how far they will be expected to accompany M. Schwartz in his crusade against the entry of Jews into the higher institutions.

Considerable discussion is going on in both West Australia and London over Mr. Zangwill's latest scheme (a Jewish colony in West Australia). The latest news is that the nearest available land is at a great distance from Perth and Freemantle, the ports of debarkation in West Australia, and that it would therefore be a very expensive business to transport any considerable number of colonists to the inland agricultural country. It is said that the government is inclined to look favorably on the proposal. In connection with Jewish immigration to West Australia, it is expected that the Labor party will have something to say about such a scheme, and will effectually kill it.

It is announced that the arrangements for the establishment of the Education Bureau of the New York Kehillah are in full progress. The bureau will be opened in a few days, and in connection with it two model Jewish schools, one for boys, and the other for girls, will be opened. The Education Committee of the Kehillah is arranging a series of lectures on Judaism and Jewish history during the coming winter.

Councillor Emanuel Basch, J.P., has been re-elected Mayor of Bulawayo for the fourth time in succession.

The first Chamber of Commerce in Persia was informed recently at Tabriz Herr Ludwig Grunberg, a Hungarian Jew, who has long lived in Persia, and is the founder of the Chamber, was elected its president.

The report of the Jewish Colonization Society (I. C. A.) contains an interesting account of the little Jewish community in Uruguay, South America. There are about a hundred and fifty Jews in Montevideo the capital of the Republic. As there is no Jewish congregation, the majority of the Jews go to Buenos Ayres for the Jewish festivals. The Jews who remain at home meet at one another's houses for prayer. They have a corner of the English Nonconformists' cemetery for their burial ground. A large number of the men are in the army of the Republic.

A profound impression has been created at St. Petersburg by the announcement that the United States ambassador to Turkey, Mr. Oscar Straus, has been given permission to visit the Russian capital. That plenipotentiary minister of a friendly great power should have to solicit permission to stay in St. Petersburg, because he is a Jew, is a matter which not even Russians, who are accustomed to most striking anomalies, can easily digest.

In formation of a most unpleasant character has been received from Galilee. The animosity between the wandering Bedouins and the Jewish colonists who are settled in that area is growing daily and all too frequently. The authorities have not sufficient troops to restore order at the present moment, but reinforcements have been ordered to the scene by Talaat Bey, Minister of the Interior, who has telegraphed to the Governor of Beyrout, directing him to take vigorous steps for the restoration of order in the colonies.

MODERN CORPORATIONS.

Their Formation Not Popular Until About Fifty Years Ago.

The corporation in business is no modern institution. The Romans formed ecclesiastical corporations, and the idea was carried to England, where the instrument which created the corporation was originally granted by the King. Later it was granted by acts of Parliament, a separate act for each charter.

In America the State Constitutions require that in all possible cases the legislative body pass general acts whereby, by simply filing a prescribed instrument, persons may form a corporation without applying to the Legislature for permission. The State creates the corporation, which possesses power only such as the State permits.

The Dutch East India Company, organized in 1602, was the first great joint stock company whose shares were bought and sold. The first record of a corporation in America was in the Colonial times, when the colony of Connecticut in 1731 chartered the London Society for Trade and Commerce. In 1735 the Connecticut Land Company was organized and dissolved in 1809.

The formation of corporations was not popular until the middle of the nineteenth century; in fact but few were organized until fifty years ago. The modern corporation having stock and stockholders came into general prominence since the days of Blackstone and Kent and can only be governed by modern laws. To-day the corporation is an absolutely necessary form of business organization, and its use is constantly increasing and extending.

There are but two forms of business combinations available for the conduct of a comercial enterprise, namely, partnership and a corporation. The one is easily entered into and as easily dissolved; the other if formal and permanent. —National Magazine.

Worth Knowing.

Never try any brass or silver polish on lacquered ware. It will mean relacquering if you do.

When cooking dried peaches rub or cut off the skin. They will have when cooked a totally different and more delicate flavor.

If the flavor of onions is unpleasant afterward—they are not digestible with everyone—use soda mint or a pinch of salt on the tongue.

The secret of keeping chamois skin soft and supple is to hang it up to dry while still soapy. Remember this when washing chamois gloves.

If there is no regular day for silver cleaning the hostess will frequently be mortified by that sign of bad housekeeping, dingy table silver.

The cook who knows how to make good soup clears it with the white of an egg. It gathers together all small solids, as it does when dropped into coffee, thus making it clear.

Do not use either bread or cracker crumbs without seasoning. No amount of seasoning in the interior of a croquette or other dish will make up for this omission.

Try putting horseradish through a meat chopper instead of grating it. It is much less trying to prepare. Bread crumbs are also more easily prepared if run through the finest cogs of the meat chopper.

Wick of a Phoenician Lamp.

There has recently been found in Tunis a Phoenician lamp which still contained the wick. This lamp could not be later than the second century before our era. The discovery is interesting, for we learn that up to now it has never been decided as to what material the wick consisted. There have been divers hypothesis—older still, tow and various threads, lint, papyrus and even skins of animals. The wick now found will settle doubts at rest, for, under microscopical and chemical analysis M. Eugene Colin has established the fact that the wick was originally lint. M. Eugene Collin has made his report to the French Academy of Sciences.

WITH THE GREAT FLOCKS.

Reading is the Solace of the Lonely Sheep Herder's Life.

Most of the sheep herders are great readers. There is a big book store in Casper, Wyo., which, instead of returning to the publishers unsold periodicals, sells them to sheep herders at 5 cents each. One of the owners of the store is a sheepman.

There is an attorney practising law in Cheyenne at present that studied his books while herding sheep. College men have been known to take a profitale post-graduate course on a sheep range, to their ultimate success in life; but the general run of sheep herders doesn't average up very well.

It is the illiterate sheep herders that go crazy, says Everybody's. In the sheep country sheepmen will tell you that herders do not go crazy, and that there is nothing more elevating than association with sheep, or more broadening than life upon the range. Peculiarities generally are not marked there. It is noticeable in Wyoming, for example, that most men draw the upper lip back from the teeth, exposing them, rabbit fashion—a habit doubtless due to the strong white light upon the vast stretches of treeless land. They go grinning along through mirth and tragedy alike, and the white plain grins back at them, nobody counting it peculiar because it is common.

CRIED DAY AND NIGHT.

Mrs. R. E. Sanford, Inverary, Ont., writes: "My baby was sickly for over a week with bowel and stomach trouble and cried night and day. Nothing I did helped her in the least till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. They helped baby right away and now she is a big healthy child with fine rosy cheeks. The Tablets are certainly a wonderful medicine and I recommend them to all my friends who have children in the house."

What Baby's Own Tablets have done for Mrs. Sanford's baby they done for thousands of other little ones, simply because they go to the root of so many childhood ailments—that is, they drive all impurities from the stomach and leave it sweet and healthy. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Lubricant for Ropes.

A good lubricant for hoisting ropes, according to Mines and Minerals, is made by mixing one bushel of freshly-slaked lime to a barrel of coal tar, or a mixture of pure tar and tallow can be used. When pine tar, which contains no acid, is used as a base, lime is unnecessary, as tar is solution-proof to ordinary mine water. Another good mixture contains tar, summer oil, axle grease and a little pulverized mica, mixed to a consistency that will penetrate between the wires to the core and will not dry or strip off. The lubricant should not be so thick as to prevent inspection of the rope, and after the first application should be used sparingly, so that the rope may be kept clean and free from grit. Graphite mixed with grease is another lubricating mixture that is used successfully, and sometimes pulverized asbestos is used instead of graphite.

Finding Temperature of Stars.

By aid of an apparatus devised by Professor Charles Nordmann the heat of the suns which we know as the fixed stars can be told by a comparison of their spectra. The highest temperature so far found is in one of the smaller stars of the constellation Taurus, which shows 27,000 degrees. The temperature of our sun is less than one-seventh of this, being only 9,605 degrees. Even that is quite warm, for the electric furnace is only 6,500 degrees. Many of the stars are very much hotter than our sun.

On Chicago.

Dr. Heinrick C. G. Hirsch, the Viennese conductor, said the other day that New York's musical taste was much better cultivated than Chicago's.

"A New York and Chicago girl," he went on, "met at the seashore. In the twilight, while the sky flamed pink in the sunset and the hotel orchestra played Massenet on the terrace, the New York girl said to the Chicago girl:

"'Do you like fugues?'

"The Chicago girl sighed and answered wistfully:

"'No, but I adore clams.'"

STOP POISONING YOURSELF

Headaches and Neuralgic Pains Promptly Cured by "Fruit-a-tives."

Where there are frequent attacks of Neuralgia and Headaches, there is always Constipation, Weakness of the Kidneys and Blood Poisoning.

Non-action of the bowels compels the blood to absorb foul matter which should have passed from the body.

Weak Kidneys fail to filter from the blood the necessary amount of waste.

The blood thus becomes poisoned and it is this poisoned blood which hurts the nerves and causes Neuralgia and Headaches.

"Fruit-a-tives," made from fruit juices, acts on the bowels and kidneys and is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

Fever in Plants.

Not only animals, but plants may suffer and die of fevers, says M. Leclerc du Sablon. When a human being has a fever he loses flesh on account of the increased combustion, the quantity of carbonic acid respired from the lungs being augmented from 70 to 100 per cent.

A plant attacked by a fever, which may be caused by a wound, rapidly consumes its reserves of organic matter and becomes enfeebled, sometimes sufficiently to cause its death. M. Leclerc du Sablon has experimented with potatoes rendered feverish by cutting them. The temperature soon rises about one degree, and the quantity or carbonic acid given off increases several hundred per cent. If the potato survives, its "respiration" after a few days becomes normal, but it falls into an enfeebled state, resembling that of a person convalescent from a long fever.—London Globe.

The Teeth.

Aren't they neglected?

Some show it.

Others will in course of time.

And what a sin it is to shirk duty!

Even brushing once a day does wonders.

This brushing should take place before retiring.

A tooth powder is necessary to a thorough brushing.

And quite as important as brushing is the thorough use of dental floss.

Every particle should be removed from between the teeth once a day at least.

It's well worth while, for both comfort and beauty, to clean the teeth after evry meal.

But if this is not possible they must be thoroughly cleaned with floss and by brushing every night the last thing.

Confession of an Old Error.

An unsigned letter, unique in the history of the Post Office Department was received yesterday at the Postmaster-General's office, telling of a violation of the postal laws committed twenty-five years ago.

The writer says that "more than twenty-five years ago, when employed as a clerk in the post office, I one day made out a money order, and after the letter was sealed and ready to be mailed I remembered that I had not filled out the blank quite right, and I opened the letter and made the proper correction. I sealed the letter at once and forwarded it by the first mail. Although no harm was done I really broke the law, and wish to confess my error."—Washington Herald.

Gratified Fanmakers.

Queen Mary's acceptance of a fan, to be presented by the Fanmakers Company on the occasion of the coronation, has given that ancient body the liveliest satisfaction. On the occasion of Queen Victoria's jubilee and at the coronation of Queen Alexandra the comapny was privileged to make similar gifts, and thus to bring to public notice the fact that fan making was once a great industry in the City of London. The Fanmakers is probably the only city company which may be said to directly concern itself with women's finery, and it is most appropriate that it should make an offering to the Queen on her coronation.—From the Lady's Pictorial.

Mistakes of Life.

One of the judges of the city of London court in England has drawn up a list of "Mistakes in Life," gleaned from his experience on the bench with all sorts and conditions of people who have come before him. There are many rules of success in life, but those presented by the London authority are somewhat unique, in that they point to success by showing where failure is likely to be sustained. The "Mistakes of Life" are thus sumamrized:

1. To attempt to set up your own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform to it.
2. To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.
3. To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.
4. To look for judgment and experience in youth.
5. To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.
6. Not to yield in unimportant trifles.
7. To look for perfection in our own actions.
8. To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.
9. Not to alleviate, if we can, all that needs alleviation.
10. Not to make allowance for the weakness of others.
11. To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.
12. To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.
13. To live as if the moment, the time, the day, were so important that it would live forever.
14. To estimate people by some outside quality, for it that within which makes the man.

A Primitive Clock.

There has recently been placed on exhibition in the prehistoric saloon at the British Museum a very fine specimen of an early British clepsydra, or water-clock, which was discovered some time ago near Baschurch, Salop. These primitive clocks, of which the museum possesses five other specimens, were large bowls of very thin metal, perforated with small holes at the base and furnished with handles. They were placed in a larger vessel containing water and allowed gradually to fill through the holes at the bottom. In a certain number of hours they would fill and sink, when they would be emptied and refloated by an attendant whose duty it was to keep watch over them. This form of timepiece was known from the earliest ages, and was in use in Egypt, India, Ceylon and other countries, and finally found its way int oBritain in Druidical times.

History of a Wedding Ring.

The ring used in the wedding of Sir Harry and Lady Verney is a ring which has been used for centuries in the wedding ceremonies of the family, and is cherished as a precious heirloom.

It contains an exquisite miniature of Charles I., encircled with diamonds, and was given by that monarch to Sir Edmund Verney, his marshal and standard bearer, who fell at Edge Hill on October 23, 1642. Sir Edmund's body was never found, only a severed hand bearing on one of its fingers this very ring, which was soon identified as his. The hand was buried in the family burial place, and the ring has during succeeding generations been religiously treasured by the owners of Claydon House.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Collars Made of Milk.

Imitation celluloid collars made of goat's milk are used in Paris by artisans, tradesmen, waiters and coachmen. The milk collars are said to be as serviceable as the celluloid and to have less polish, which makes them a great improvement.

In preparing the milk for collars the curds are drained off the whey and subjected to high pressure, resulting in a substance that looks very much like celluloid.

Milk curds have been used in Europe for some years for the making of billiard balls, combs, imitation bone knife handles and collar buttons.—Popular Mechanics.

Definition of a Gentleman.

There is only one strictly technical definition of gentleman, a man entitled to bear coat armor. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries it was used with this significance, and the second-hand bookstall hunter will occasionally find Soandso, "gentleman," written on dusty and stained flyleaves.

But this definition has dropped out, for now any one may use arms who chooses to pay an arms license. The inland revnue takes your guinea or two guineas without inquiring as to your right to bear arms. And though the Herald's College has the right to grant arms to those who can afford to pay the necessary fees it cannot prevent people from using arms to which they have no right.—London Chronicle.
