SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON XI.

A NATION NEEDS RELIGIOUS HOMES

(Deuteronomy 6: 1—9; 11: 18—25.)
Printed Text—Deuteronomy 6:4, 5; 11: 18—25.
Golden Text—Train up a child in the way he should go. And even when he is old he will not depart from it. Prov. 22: 6.

The Lesson In Its Setting

Place—All the early chapters of Deuteronomy record discourses given by Moses on the east side of the Jordan River where the Israelites were encamped in what are known as the plains of Moab (see Deut. 1: 1).

Time—B.C. 1459.

"Hear, O Israel: Jehovah our God is one Jehovah. And thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might."—There is hardly a greater passage in all the Old Testament than this, recognized by the Jews as "the great commandment in the law," "the first of all commandments," and called by the Lord Jesus himself "the great and first commandment" (Matt. 22: 36, 37; Mark. 12: 29; Luke 10: 27).

"Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul."—Solomon well said:—"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life" (Prov. 4: 23). Our Lord said that "out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh." "The good man out of his good treasure bringeth forth good things, and the evil man out of his evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things" (Matt. 12: 35). If we lay up the words of God in our heart and soul, then the fountain of our life will be holy, for the word of God is holy; our heart will be right, for the word of God is right (119: 75, Authorized Version). As David himself said: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Ps. 119: 11). "Blessed are they that are perfect in the way, who walk in the law of Jehovah. Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, that seek him with the whole heart" (Ps. 119: 1,2).

Arm and Forehead

"And ye shall bind them for a sign upon your hand, and they shall be for frontlets between your eyes." —The Jews took these verses quite literally. The passages (Ex. 13: 1—16; Deut. 6: 4—9; 11: 13—21) were written on parchment rolls and placed in cases, so that they could be bound on the arm and forehead during morning prayer. These were called phylacteries. The phylactery was a leather box, cube-shaped, closed by an attached flap and bound to the person by a leather band. It was bound to the inner side of the left arm and near the elbow, so that with the bending of the arm, it would rest over the heart, the end of the string or band firmly wound around the middle finger of the hand as a "sign upon thy hand." They were to be worn by every male over 13 years of age at the time of morning prayer, except on Sabbaths and festal days, such days being in themselves sufficient reminders of the laws of God (see Matt. 23: 5). The phylactery for the forehead was bound on after the one bound upon the arm. The typical significance of all of this was that the hand should do nothing contrary to the law of God, and the mind should never contemplate anything except what was in accord with the law of God.

"And ye shall teach them your children, talking of them, when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." —As the family is the most intimate bond of fellowship among men, it is of the utmost importance that it should be hallowed by religion. All the relations of parents, children, and domestics are purified and are strengthened when the whole household is statedly assembled, morning, and evening, for the worship of God. The character of the church and of the state depends on the character of the family. If religion dies out in the family, it cannot elsewhere be maintained. A man's responsibility to his children, as well as to God, binds him to make his house a Bethel. If not a Bethel, it will be a dwelling place of evil spirits.

Significance of Home

We hear a great deal these days about the loss, in modern life, of a real appreciation of the value and significance of home. The toil of every day, and attendance at school, keep the members of our modern home apart through the day; attendance at the movies, or driving out in our automobiles in the evening, more and more is depriving our children of the privileges of fellowship with their parents at home. What we need today, for the strengthening of the church, for keeping our children from ultimate disaster, as far as we are able, for building up a mighty wall against the waves of atheism that are coming to us with increasing force, for saving our nation from an utter dissolution of moral integrity and uprightness, is a return to the sacred precepts here laid down by God himself regarding the teaching concerning God and the word of God at the hearthside of our own homes. Nothing can ever take the place of this.

"And thou shalt write them upon the door-posts of thy house, and upon thy gates."—The word here translated "door-posts" is, in the Hebrew, the word "mezuzah," and this very word is the name of the little case or glass tube which is nailed to the door-posts of the house, and in which a piece of parchment is folded, on which is inscribed on one side the verses found in Deut. 6: 4—9 and 11: 13—21, and, on the other the name for God, Shaddai. On leaving or entering the house, a pious Jew touches the mezuzah with his finger, and puts the finger to his lips, repeating the words of Ps. 121: 8.

"That your days may be multiplied and the days of your children, in the land which Jehovah sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of the heavens above the earth. For if ye shall diligently keep all this commandment which I command you to do it, to love Jehovah your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him; Then will Jehovah drive out all these nations from before you and ye shall dispossess nations greater and mightier than yourselves."—To fulfill this promise to Israel, God promises that he himself will drive out the nations possessing the country which he intends Israel to have.

Israel's Tragedy

"Every place whereon the sole of your foot shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness, and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the hinder sea shall be your border. There shall no man be able to stand before you: Jehovah your God shall lay the fear of you and the dread of you upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath spoken unto you."—If the Israelites would be faithful to God, God would faithfully fulfil his promise to them, and no power on earth would ever be able to keep the Israelites from the blessings which were in the heart of God to bestow upon them. The great tragedy was that Israel did not keep these commandments, and consequently she nearly subdued the pagan and idolatrous people whom she found inhabiting Palestine upon her entrance into that land under Joshua.

Lieutenant-Governor Joins Safe-Driving League

With His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor, the first motorist to enroll, a drive to enlist Ontario automobile owners in an informal league devoted to sensible driving is being launched in connection with the safety exposition at this year's Canadian National Exhibition Motor Show in Toronto. The emblem used is a white cross, to be carried above the motor car's rear license plate as a continuous reminder that care at the wheel will cut highway tolls. Photo shows Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce with G. Harrison Smith, prominent industrial executive, examining the white cross emblem.

Conquer Britain's Highest Peaks In 27 Hours

Trio Sets New Endurance Record

LONDON.—Three young Britons set up some kind of a new endurance record when they climbed the four highest mountains in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland within 27 hours. They began with Ben Nevis in Scotland, highest of the four. Starting the ascent at 7.20 p.m., they reached the 4,406-foot summit and were down again before dark. In an automobile they drove 150 miles into Cumberland and scaled Scafell in the darkness.

Then they drove on to Snowden in Wales, climbing it the next morning. From Wales they flew to Killarney. A car took them to the foot of Ireland's highest mountain Carrantuohill. They reached the summit by 10 p.m. and come down the mountainside in darkness.

The hardy trio consisted of Dr. David Ainsworth, Keith Porter and Donald Glegg. Ronald Glegg, brother of Donald, climbed the first three but was too exhausted to tackle Carrantuohill.

Around The Dial

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

G. C. MURRAY

The annual Canadian Golf Championship matches at St. Andrew's, on September 9th, 10th, and 11th, will have two or three broadcasts daily from the course which will keep fans who are unable to attend, posted with the latest happenings. On the final day there will be a broadcast of the final scores and the presentation of the Seagram Gold Cup, and the prize money of $1,000 to the winner.

To Start New CBS Show

Starting Friday, September 10th, a smart 45-minute musical variety show will be aired from 10 to 10.45 p.m. The show, "Coca-Cola Presents the Songship," will have the charming Kitty Carlisle, lyric soprano of stage and screen, as its star. Frank Crumit will act as Master of Ceremonies. Reed Kennedy, baritone, and Alice Cornett, rhythm singer, will also be heard. The widely known Songsmiths Quartette were re-christened "The Songship Quartet" for this series and a 22-voice glee club under the direction of Kenneth Christie, accompanied by a 47-piece orchestra with Gustav Haenschen wielding the baton will be something to listen to. In our opinion, this series should be one of the radio highlights each week. 92 Columbia Stations will carry this series.

Jolson Back With Larger Show

Al Jolson returned to The Columbia network Tuesday September 7th, with an enlarged musical variety program. The time is the same as in the past —8.30 to 9.00 p.m. In addition to Martha Raye, Parkyakarkus, and Victor Young's big orchestra, the programs in this series boast the appearance every other week of a prominent guest star from the entertainment world. When no guest stars will be on the program, Jolson will present a series of fast-moving dramatic skits, in which the "Mammy Singer" will take the leading role.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND

BY CORTLAND FITZSIMMONS

Synopsis

[illegible] the United League season op[illegible] Pop Clark's New York Blues are [illegible] 1 shot, Terry Burke being the [illegible] sports writer to give them a [illegible] at the pennant. In the Blues' [illegible] game Whitper, Philadelphia's [illegible]shon, is killed with a bullet [illegible]ugh the heart after smashing out [illegible] run. Both Burke and Larry [illegible], the Blues' rookie short-stop, for [illegible] Clark's pretty daughter Frances [illegible] shown her preference over Whit[illegible] suspected at first by Detec[illegible] Kelly. Death or injury cripple [illegible] than the Blues meet, and al[illegible] always Burke gets a beat for [illegible]ggor on these sensational happ[illegible]gs. It is Burke who discovers it [illegible] notorious gunman who sent four [illegible] players to the hospital with [illegible] through their taxi tire. Dir[illegible] Chicago star, dies on the diamond [illegible] poison on a phonograph needle [illegible] the handle of his bat. Pietro, [illegible]'s boy, disappears. Clark [illegible] Doyle to Newark but he is soon [illegible] to Boston. The Blues are in [illegible] place when they go to St. [illegible] where Scotter, pitching ace, is [illegible] dead from gas given off by a [illegible]ious powder in the box with a [illegible] puzzle sent to him anonymous[illegible] gunman truss Burke up, [illegible] him and warn him he knows [illegible]ch. Rawlins, the Chicago man[illegible] hanged in a hotel room ad[illegible] his own. Penny, Detroit's star [illegible] refuses to play against the [illegible] Baseball's czar temporarily [illegible] the playing schedule and at [illegible] of club owners Terry agrees [illegible] helping them uncover the [illegible] gang.

"I can't provide you boys with [illegible] the detective said amiably. [illegible] the lay?" Mullins asked. [illegible] thing happened to Planer." [illegible]" they chorused.

"[illegible], I guess."

"[illegible] dead?"

They think they got him in [illegible] he is pretty bad. The doc[illegible] he had an overdose of some[illegible] other. Our job was to find [illegible] was done and who did it. [illegible] hold of the kids at the stand [illegible] said there were a lot of [illegible] the stand when Planer was [illegible] we went for the cops who [illegible] duty and they said a bunch [illegible] from the press box had gone [illegible] and when the field was about [illegible] the kid recognized you—"

"[illegible]ere we are," finished Craven. [illegible]ere questioned singly and in [illegible] Each man was asked to [illegible]ription of what had happened [illegible] and, how many of the frank[illegible]ner had eaten, who was [illegible] while he was eating them, [illegible]mber of other questions. [illegible]tories were amazingly alike, [illegible]cause they had been trained [illegible] what they saw. There was [illegible]est discrepancy about the [illegible] the report when the smoke [illegible] out on the field.

[illegible]nd Craven agreed on the [illegible] said it was at the moment [illegible] as handed the first frank[illegible]ore it happened. Reynolds said he thought Planer had had several. The two boys did not agree.

The poison was found in the mustard pot and a little of it would undoubtedly have killed Planer. The police could not understand the slip-up made by the murderers. They surely knew Planer's weakness where hot dogs were concerned. He always ate four or five and that day he had taken six. It was the overdose that saved his life; had he eaten one or two he would have died. They were very anxious to fix the time of the small explosion on the field, as they believed that had important bearing on the case. It was Mullins who remembered that the boy had produced a clean mustard-pot for Planer.

The boy was questioned and with tears in his eyes said they didn't change the pot every day, but they always had a fresh one for Planer.

The boys insisted that no one had been behind the counter and they swore that the mustard pot Planer had used had been freshly filled that afternoon and had not been used by anyone else.

If the boys were right and no one had been behind the stand, then the poison must have been put in while the mustard pot was on the counter. The important thing was to know when it had been put in. The murderer would know all about Planer and his habits or he would not have selected that means of killing him. Why, then, was the poison put in before Planer had eaten two or three frankfurters? The puff of smoke on the field must have had some bearing [illegible] but what?

[illegible] were asked to recall the num[illegible] people at the stand at the time. The boys knew that some men had been there, but they had no idea who they were.

The chief of police apologized to the press men for bringing them out, thanked them and let them go. As they were leaving he said to Terry: "You're Burke, aren't you? Do you mind waiting a moment?"

Terry smiled back at the jovial-faced man.

"Do you know anything at all?" the chief asked.

"Not a thing."

"I thought you might have seen or heard something that you didn't want to say in front of the others."

"No. I wish I did know."

The boys were shouting the extras on the streets when the men arrived at the hotel.

Fiend Tries to Kill Planer

was the scarehead. There was very little news in the paper about the crime, but the wires to New York were kept busy for about a half-hour as each man frantically wired his paper whatever scraps of news he could find.

They talked of nothing else at dinner and Reynolds said, "You boys are a bunch of saps. I telephoned my story in and I bet we have a beat."

The whole country was in an uproar over the attempt on Planer's life. Every paper had something to say about it. The police were upbraided unmercifully for negligence. Button was severely criticized for permitting Planer to leave his sight.

In the meantime the series went on and the Blues left Cleveland with one out of three games to their credit, which upset calculations considerably.

On the third day after the poisoning it was announced that Planer had a better than fifty-fifty chance to recover. Then the bulletins became less frequent, until finally the doctors announced that, thanks to his magnificent constitution and clean mode of living, Planer would recover. But it was six weeks before he was able to put on a uniform again.

Strenuous Diet May Injure Eyes

Vision is Affected by Lack of Necessary Vitamins

Streamlining the figure by strenuous diets prescribed by persons with no scientific training in food values or nutrition, may cause permanent impairment of the eyesight. The reason for this is that three foods particularly important to eye health are either taboo or are put at a minimum in most of these diets.

Just recently scientists have discovered that the substance in the eye which is sensitive to light and which they term "visual purple" is really a protein that is bleached by the action of strong light and renews itself by returning to its original color in the dark.

Whenever there has been slowness in color restoration, scientists have found it due to a deficiency of a particular vitamin in the food of which the best sources are butter, cream and milk, and in a lesser degree, egg yolk, liver and fresh vegetables. Cod liver oil is richest of all in it. Dr. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University points out, however, that by drinking a quart of whole milk daily butter may be omitted.

Night Driving

When the eyes are exposed to strong light, the "visual purple" protein changes rapidly to yellow and then slowly becomes colorless. If the system is plentifully supplied with essential elements, regeneration takes place as soon as the eyeball is removed from the glare, but when the elements are lacking, the process is slow and defective. Recent experiments have shown that it is dangerous for certain people to drive at night because the "visual purple" in their eyes is not restored quickly after having been bleached by the glare of oncoming headlights.

When a deficiency of the essential vitamin continues for any length of time, actual damage to the membranes covering the eyes takes place. Other important considerations for eye health are: Protect the eyes from strong light glare by wearing dark glasses. Never read while facing a strong light.

Indian Angels In Arctic Church

Decorations Designed to Appeal To Dusky Worshippers

FORT GOOD HOPE, N.W.T.—Black haired, brown-skinned angels, cherubim and seraphim, make the Oblate Order's mission church at this little post, 19 miles inside the Arctic Circle, the Mackenzie River's most noted show place.

The little wooden building housing the dark-hued heavenly beings was erected 70 years ago by Father Petitot and Brother Ancel, French missionaries. It has a night blue ceiling studded with gold stars. All wall space is covered with murals, pictures and other decorations made by the two almost entirely from materials available at the fort.

All lumber was sawed by hand and the original church, before repairs were effected in later years, contained no nails. It was pegged together. At first it contained no ornaments, but the two men, working for years, produced murals in reds, browns, yellows greens and blues, using native materials and paint powders shipped to them by canoe and dog sled from "outside".

Brown Cherubim

It was Father Petitot who thought of the brown-skinned cherubim and seraphim. The Indians he reasoned, would be more likely to consider themselves candidates for a joyous hereafter if they saw the heavenly population reproduced in their own colors.

With Brother Ancel, the priest went to work, producing during the many years they lived here, decorations that make this the north's most ornate church. Near the altar, carved at Fort Good Hope, are large murals of the Holy Family and the Temptation. The figures are white.

Three fathers and a brother staff the mission now. Father Jean-Louis Michel, the superior, and Fathers Gabriel Houssais and Victor Philippe came from France. Fathers Houssais 42 years ago. The lone brother, Henri Latreille, is a Canadian who calls Coteau, Que., his home.

Brother Latreille says: "I am the woman of the house. I do the cooking and look after the place." He is going home for a holiday this fall and will be back on the first boat next spring.

Kept Promise 70 Years

ADELAIDE, Australia.—Mrs. J. B. Curry, 90, has held a local department store to a promise made to her 70 years ago.

At the age of 20, Mrs. Curry was the first customer of the Rundle St. department store. She went in to purchase some linen damask and to "christen" the store. The management, to honor its first customer, presenter her with a long-sleeved frock, a red flannel petticoat, white stockings and a white crinoline with fancy frills.

"When you are 90," she was told "come back and we will give you another dress."

Mrs. Curry returned to the store, reminded the management of its promise of 70 years ago, and chose a plain black dress.

Peach Moth Is Here

The peach moth is reported to be the latest pest that is giving commercial fruit growers worry in this summer of many insects and fungus diseases. R. R. Waddle, Dominion fruit inspector, is investigating local orchards to learn if there has been an invasion by the moths. A commercial grower from the Leamington district informed Mr. Waddle that considerable damage by the moth is feared in that great peach-growing area.

YOUR FAVORITE DESSERT ICE CREAM — EASILY MADE

Ask any Canadian what his favorite dessert is and the answer will be "ice cream." Some may say ice cream and cake, others ice cream and apple pie, but ice cream is the favorite throughout the country.

You all remember the old methods of making ice cream. You cooked the custard foundation, boiled the sugar, melted marshmallows and did a whole lot of tedious tasks to get a quart of the family's favorite dish. In fact, we know of one "horse and buggy" era recipe which required 14 different steps. But that is all over and hundreds of housewives are getting a big thrill out of the ice cream powder which can be purchased so cheaply and easily now. There are all kinds of flavors and even one unflavored powder which gives you the chance of adding your own favorite flavor. From ice cream powder you can now make delicious desserts in a few easy steps.

When serving ice cream let your imagination do the decorating. There are many tricks that add novelty and finer flavor to this old favorite. Sauces, for instance, are particularly good to pep up ice cream and either chocolate or butterscotch is always popular. Maple syrup, nuts, coconut and whipped cream will enable you to make very professional looking sundaes right at home.

Here are a few recipes using the new ice cream powder and we'll guarantee that you and your family will be more than pleased with the results.

COFFEE CARAMEL ICE CREAM

4 tablespoons sugar
½ cup strong coffee
½ cup milk
½ package (scant 1-3 cup) unflavored ice cream powder.
1 cup cream whipped.

Caramelize sugar until golden brown. Add coffee gradually and stir until dissolved. Add milk very gradually to ice cream powder, stirring until dissolved, then add coffee-caramel mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze as rapidly as possible. Stir when frozen ¼ inch thick on sides and twice more at 20-minute intervals. Freezing time: about 3 hours. Makes ¾ quart.

For 1½ quarts, double the recipe above, using full contents of package. Freeze in one or two trays 3 to 6 hours.

RASPBERRY SHERBET

2 cups crushed red raspberries
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons lemon juice
1 package strawberry flavored ice cream powder.

Force berries through sieve; add sugar and lemon juice. Measure and add enough water to make 5 cups. Add this mixture very gradually to ice cream powder, stirring until dissolved. Freeze in freezer. Makes 2 quarts sherbet.

Baked Alaska is the last word in fancy ice cream deserts, but you can get the same effect with a lot less effort by placing small squares of cake on a board, top with ice cream and mask with meringue. Place the board in hottest oven to brown the meringue quickly and serve at once. This dessert will call forth cheers from the family and because it is so quickly and easily made, it can be served often.

Police May Adopt Homespun Dress

QUEBEC—Snappy homespun uniforms may replace the traditional blue serge which has garbed Quebec City policemen for generations, if a suggestion made by Quebec Mayor, J. E. Gregoire, is acted upon.

His Worship feels that the grey homespun uniforms would not only provide a decided contrast to the ordinary order of things, but would also encourage French-Canadian industry. There is a possibility of the law also being adorned with colorful woollen belts, such as those worn by snowshoers and "Coureurs des Bois" centuries ago. This is suggested as a tourist attraction.

To ensure that postmen will deliver particular letters only into the hands of persons to whom they are addressed, Czechoslovakia has issued a special triangular stamp.
