BURNING GHATS.

Now, They Dispose of the Dead at Benares.

I have been present at these burnings. The bodies are brought in on a frail litter. A pile of logs is built up, held in place by four iron stanchions. The body with the head uncovered is placed on the logs, more logs are piled on top, the fagots underneath, and the fire lighted. There are various ceremonies connected with the rite. The body is carried several times around the pile before being placed upon it. The nearest relative walks around the pile with a jar of water, letting it drip down as he goes, till of a sudden he dashes the jar to the ground, breaking it to pieces. A symbol of all life, everywhere. At a certain moment, too, the skull is fractured by the nearest relative, to allow the easy escape of the spirit to another world. Where the deceased is rich, the fire is made of costly and sweet-smelling wood, sandal-wood and the like, and the ceremonies are more elaborate and more prolonged. No doubt it is the ideal way to dispose of a dead body, but when I have seen it done here it seemed to me a callous and a careless rite.

It is true, if one have faith death should not be a cause of mourning, but parting from those one adores is a poignant sorrow, even if there is to be another meeting here on earth. So far as I have studied the faces of mourners here, I could see nothing. In these matters they are either behind or very far in advance of us. No doubt Mrs. Annie Besant who has her Hindu college here at Benares, would maintain the latter. But I have noticed all over India the absolute indifference of the natives themselves to the pain, and deformities, and maladies that are displayed as an excuse for alms. It is not the stoicism of our Western Indians, who thought it dishonorable to show fear, or to shrink from pain, but an imbedded indifference, a numbness to this particular influence.—From "Religion and Caste in India," by Price Collier, in the March Scribner.

BRITISH DRINK AND SMOKE BILL

The highest consumption in the United Kingdom was in the year 1907, which was about 2.057 pounds an individual, taking the whole population as a basis; while in 1909 it fell to 1.975 pounds an individual. Of the amount paid for tobacco in 1909 the Government received $74,307,254.

The total cost an individual per annum in 1909 was about $2.00½, and counting a family as consisting of 4.62 persons (which is a census basis), the annual expenditure of such family was $13.43, which amounts to a weekly expenditure of 25½ cents.

The annual average for intoxicants for a family of the size above mentioned is estimated at $77.51. The two expenditures combined would indicate that the average by each family in the United Kingdom in 1909 was $1.74 a week.—From Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

THE LONDON FEATHER MARKET.

The London market for the importation of plumage for ladies' hats is the largest in the world, and it is estimated that 5,000 persons are employed in the manufacturing and other work incidental to this trade. The value of the imports is said to be $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 a year.—From Forest and Stream.

THIN, FRAIL WOMEN WITH PALE CHEEKS.

Now Rapidly Learning the Way to Health by Vigor by the Use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Thousands of half-dead, emaciated, worn-out women are dragging out their weary lives simply because they don't know what ails them. Nine times in ten it's indigestion, which directly leads to anaemia, poor circulation and eventually invalidism.

How can you expect to be strong if the stomach is overloaded by sour, putrid, undigested food? There can be no nourishment supplied by any stomach that isn't working right up to full time all day long.

The first step towards relief is to flush out all wastes and unhealthy matter. Loosen the bowels—stir up the liver—stimulate the kidneys. Once this is done Dr. Hamilton's Pills will quickly manifest their health-restoring qualities.

"The best way to correct impaired digestion, to cure constipation, headache, liver trouble and other ailments of the stomach and bowells," writes Mrs. Uriah A. Dempsey, from Woodstock, "is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I didn't know what it was to enjoy a good meal for months. My stomach was sour, I belched gas, was thin, tired, pale and nervous. I simply house-cleaned my system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and have been robust and vigorous ever since."

To keep the machinery of the body in active working order, no remedy is so efficient, so mild, so curative as Dr. Hamilton's Pills—good for men, women and children, 25c per box, at all dealers or the Catarrhobone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A COFFEE RECIPE.

Yes, a good chunk of money can be saved in a year by roasting your own coffee, and it is not so hard, at that. All that is needed is a good, big heavy skillet. Before roasting a pound of green coffee, put in a chunk of butter the size of an almond, mixed with a teaspoonful of sugar. Roast on the stove or flame, steadily shaking and stirring in the old-fashioned double-shuffle way until all is a uniform rich brown. Shake fast when coffee "pops" or smokes. Please don't burn. The butter and sugar barely help the flavor, aroma and bouquet of the delicious drink. But the butter must be good, and not too much used at one time; the smaller the quantity to do the job right the better.—New York Press.

Are You Subject to Lumbago?

To watch an attack coming on makes one think lumbago is mischievous. The whole system is all but paralyzed—exercise or manual labor are impossible. The surest and speediest relief is found in Nerviline, which should be thoroughly rubbed over the back, sides and shoulders. Lots of Nerviline and plenty of rubbing can't do anything but good. Of course, if permanent cure is desired, a Nerviline Porous Plaster should be applied to relieve all strain and latent inflammation from the muscles of the sore part. This will absorb all the deleterious secretions through the relaxed pores and effect a certain and lasting cure. Every nurse and physician who has watched the Nerviline treatment says it can't be beaten in Lumbago, Neuralgia, Rheumatism and all aches, pains and stiffness in the muscles.

NAMING THE BABY IN JAPAN.

Such lovers of picturesque ceremonies as the Japanese do not let an important event like the naming of the baby pass without proper observance. The infant's birth is immediately announced to the relatives and friends, who hasten to send congratulations and presents. Visitors used to insist upon seing the mother and child, but the spread of medical knowledge is gradually changing this. On the seventh day after birth the child is named. The first born son is frequently called "Ichiro," which means "First." Others, as in Latin, are named "Second," "Third," and so on. Girls are more lucky, receiving picturesque names like "Snow," "Chrysanthemum," "Glory," and the like.

MINE FATALITIES.

Death Rate in America Less Than Any European Country.

It has long been the general impression that American mine owners are grasping individuals, careless of the safety of their workers and thinking only of profit. Their methods are compared with foreign methods, usually greatly to their advantage.

The following reports taken from an article published in the January 7th issue of the American Engineering and Mining Journal tell quite a different story. They prove conclusively that the United States system, measured in human life, is apparently far in advance of that of the old world.

For every million tons of coal mined the loss of life in the various countries is estimated as follows:

United States	3.34
Great Britain	4.15
Germany	6.35
France	6.56
Belgium	5.71
Austria	8.16

With the evidence so overwhelmingly in favor of the United States, European contemporaries might study American mining practice to great advantage.

Mining is necessarily a hazardous business, but it always has been conceded that wage and working conditions were far more favorable in this country than abroad. It is a satisfaction to know that American owners are succeeding in cutting down casualties to the minimum.

ON SKIS IN THE ALPS 6 DAYS.

Two young Swiss Alpinists, Fritz Pfeiffer, of Geneva, and Fritz Strasser, of Zurich, members of the Alpine Club, have concluded a splendid feat of climbing on skis, remaining six days and nights in the Alps of the Bernese Oberland. They ascended the Jungfrau (13,670 feet) for the first time this year and several other peaks.

They returned safely without having seen a human being for 144 hours. They were equipped to fight against the great cold. Each carried fifty pounds of food and drink in his haversack, as well as ropes, ice axes and crampons, and they were warmly clad. The Alpinists were on their skis from ten to fifteen hours a day, and the average temperature was between 25 degrees and 30 degrees below freezing point. Messrs. Pfeiffer and Strasser started from Gampel, in the Valais, and ended their Alpine holiday at Andermatt. They crossed numerous passes and glaciers.—From the London Express.

THE BLACK SLEEVE BAND.

The custom of wearing a black band on the sleeve as an indication of half or second mourning invites remark. Black bands were first worn by living servants in England, when it was not thought necessary to fit them out in complete uniform of black. It is usually considered better form abjure entirely the livery of grief if one cannot afford or does not approve of wearing black, and as nearly every one has at least one black suit, or should have, the necessity of the band is not quite apparent.—From Browning Magazine.

I CANNOT WEAR THE OLD HAIR.

(Lippincott's Magazine).

I can not wear the old hair
I wore some months gone by.
I've laid it on the topmost shelf
With many a weary sigh.
No longer are wearing puffs.
And rats are quite de trop;
I can not wear the old hair—
Oh, what a cruel blow!

I can not wear the old hair.
For which good gold I paid,
Red hair is so expensive when
One gets the proper shade.
I felt so dreadful when it was coiffed,
All little puffs and curls;
But I can't wear the old red hair,
Alas for Fashion's whirls!

I can not wear the old red hair.
For switches I must buy
And wind them round and round my head
As flat as they will lie.
My face is far too plump for this;
My nose is much too long;
But I can't wear the old hair.
It's altogether wrong.

AN INVALUABLE MEDICINE FOR ALL BABIES.

Mrs. R. McEwen, Thornloe, Ont., writes: "I think Baby's Own Tablets an invaluable medicine for little ones. I used them for my own child when he was small and last summer when I had a baby visitor whose food did not agree with him, I sent for another box of the Tablets and they quickly helped him." It is testimonials such as this that have made Baby's Own Tablets popular—they have shown them to be an invaluable medicine for little ones. The Tablets always do good—they can never do harm. Once a mother has tried them for her little one she will have nothing else. For with the Tablets she feels safe. They are sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no harmful drugs. Baby's Own Tablets may be had at any medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

(Kingston Standard.)

To deprive the children, therefore, of attendance at these moving picture shows would be wrong. The remedy does not lie in that direction, but rather in making regulations that shall prevent the showing of pictures which may have a bad influence upon children. Repressive legislation is never good when it aims at killing rather than curing. Let us by all means have these moving picture shows, but let us have them properly regulated. If that is done they can be made a very potent influence in improving the children both intellectually and morally.

THE STRANGER.

Serious-minded little maid,
Wondering and half afraid,
Half inclined to [illegible],
Half disposed to let me [illegible],
Hesitating yet, and shy,
Half a twinkle in your eye,
Half in doubt and half in fear,
Staying neither far nor near,

How I wonder what you see
With those eyes that question me,
What the instinct bids you know
If I may be friend or foe;
Fawnlike, full of grace and awe,
Ready with fast flying feet,
In the orchard's deepest shade
To find cover, little maid.

Grave and curious little lass,
Like a wild bird in the grass,
Still intently watching me,
With your wings half spread to fly
If my smile bodes good or ill
Willing to make friends and still Undecided if they stay
Here and near or fly away.

Serious-minded little maid,
When, with smiles and unafraid,
O'er the lawn you come to me,
Strange to you though I be,
When your curious eyes have tried
Soul with mine, and satisfied,
Looking still into mine and smiled,
Blessed am I, little child.

Blessed am I to be just Worthy of your childish trust,
More than conqueror of kings
When the wild bird of your wings
Bids you fly not forth, but see
Something tender, kind in me:
Oh, the gladness you have laid
At my heart's gate, little maid!

LITTLE HELPS FOR FURNACE MAN; HOW TO HEAT THE "COLD ROOM."

In these winter days the home with the furnace heat, the hot water radiator, or the steam radiator may find the heating apparatus, of whatever kind, balking occasionally and leaving the house cold.

Traditionally, every house that is heated by the hot air furnace has "one cold room." This cold room most frequently is that particular upstairs room against which the cold winds are blowing most directly. Likely this room is the northwest room upstairs, as the northwest wind is keenest. What should one do to bring up the hot air from the furnace?

The simplest thing is for the furnace attendant to discover the cold pipe leading to the room and cut off for a few minutes the heat to every other pipe leading from the furnace. At once this forces the combined heat from the furnace into the one open delivery pipe whose cut-off remains wide open. This body of heat forces out the heavy, cold air that has been blocking that particular pipe as effectually as if the pipe were full of frozen water. After a few minutes in which the pipe warms and warmth permeates the room, the "cold" room is rendered comfortable thereafter.

Presuming that one has an electric fan, however, the fan is one of the easiest instruments for correcting the stubborn hot air register, the hot water radiator, or the steam radiator in the cold room.

To use the electric fan on the hot air register, place the fan with its back close to the register and turn on at full speed. This acts as a suction pump, pulling the cold air from the furnace pipe and drawing the heat into the room.

In the case of a balky steam radiator, especially, open a window and turn the fan blast of cold air against the radiator. Whatever slight heat is in the radiator will be contracted by cooling and the tendency toward a vacuum will serve to draw upon greater warmth down the pipe. As the steam (or water) moves up into the radiator, the continuation of the cooling and contraction forces the further impetus of the heat until the desired warmth is attained.

One further statement may interest the reader. Hot water and steam heat are the driest of all forms of heat diverted into the modern house. The hot water and hot, moist steam in the radiator are sealed there. One cannot bring an artificial heat of 70 degrees, Fahrenheit, by means of the hot radiator without making the Chicago winter atmosphere too dry. Evaporating water on these fixtures alone will make the atmosphere of the house moist enough to be satisfactory to the lungs. And in moistening the atmosphere, it becomes a more constant and effective deliverer of the heat from fuel. Dry air is the least capable of retaining heat, even if the air's dryness otherwise were satisfactory to the lungs and breathing apparatus generally.

No Excuse for Round Shoulders.

Being round shouldered is a moral flaw. It is caused, maybe, by poor eyesight, wrongly constructed chairs, and heredity, but the ways of curing it are manifold. You may if you choose practice walking with a brick or a cup of water on your head; you may walk with arms folded behind you; you may try to keep the upper section of the backbone perfectly flat; you may try to push against your collar with the back of your neck. You may practice any of the 17 other schemes to stand erect. Undoubtedly one of the best habits is that of deep and leisure breathing. To be round-shouldered is to be guilty of moral failure, since it can be cured—Collier's Weekly.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W., 8, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

THE HEALTH CHILD.

We're sleeping on the northeast porch,
and when the blizzard flies
The neighbors have to dig us out before we can arise.
The drifted snow they shovel from our breezy beds and cool—
No heat for ours since Mary brought the health fad home from school!
We haven't had a slice of steak since
I can't tell you when,
We'll never get potatoes fried or sausage
meat again;
And pie and cake and candy now are barred by household rule,
We're sticking to the bill of fare that Mary brings from school.
"Take time," she says, "about your food
and don't forget to chew,
Don't make your stomach do the work
your molars ought to do.
You mustn't nibble all the day, like horse
or cow or mule;
Eat one square meal and stop awhile,
[illegible] says at school."
We run the window curtains high to let the sun come in;
We never eat an apple till we've washed
its dirty skin;
We take no chance of poison germ or deadly molecule—
We've even cut the growler out since
Mary's gone to school.
The old man's pipe is put away and
Charlie's cigarettes,
And mother's quit her chewing gum and grandma's quit her frets.
And if you think we're silly and fit for ridicule,
You ought to hear those health talks that Mary brings from school

THE LAND OF OPPORTUNITY.

It is a mighty stride from laborer in a wire mill, at $4.65 a week, to the presidency of the United States Steel Corporation at $100,000 a year. The man who has accomplished it is James A. GERMAN RAILWAYS.

It is now 75 years since the first railway was introduced into Germany. The experiment was naturally on a modest scale, from Ludwigsbann joining up Nuremburg to Furth. The six kilometres of 75 years ago have increased to-day to 60,00 kilometres, a kilometre being five-eighths of a mile; and it is claimed that Germany to-day possesses the finest railway system in Europe. The first locomotive used on the Nuremburg-Furth line was named the Adler, and was made under the superintendence of Stephenson in England. It cost $4,300.

ROYALTY IN A BUS.

In these democratic days, when a royal personage, as I once heard a country girl say of the late King, "walks about just like a gentleman"—or a lady, it is interesting to note a quaint little story in the current number of that useful magazine National Health. Referring to the desirability of travellers by tube railways and other popular means of conveyance being particular about cleanliness in their dress and habits, the writer says:

"Lords and laborers must travel side by side. Not very long since we ourselves saw the Duchess of Argyll riding in a Hammersmith bus, and her Royal Highness was so familiar with such conveyances that when she reached Kensington Palace, the conductor being engaged in collecting fares, she herself gave the correct pull to the bell to notify the driver to stop."—Lady's Pictorial.
