The prevention of the breeding of flies is a more effective way of fighting them than swatting them, though this need not be overlooked where they have already made their appearance this year. They are produced by filth and corruption, and cleanliness is a deadly foe to the pests. The best plan of campaign is to clean up the premises and keep them clean. This has other advantages one of which is that it promotes the public health generally

AMEM!

If I should die to-night
And you should come to my cold corpse and say—
Weeping and heartsick o'er my lifless clay—
If I should die to-night,
And you should come in deep grief and woe
And say, "Here's that ten dollars that I owe"
I might arise in my large white cravat,
And say, "What's that?"

Yes, if I should die to-night
And you should come to my cold corpse,
Kneeling at my bier to show your grief:
I say, if should die to-night,
And you should come, and there and then
Just even hint about paying me that ten,
I might arise the while
But I'd drop dead again.

The growth of vegetation in the past three or four days is remarkable. Trees which had seemed scarcely in bud have burst into foliage and blossom and grass and shrubbery has made marvelous progress. The warm refreshing rains during the week were beneficial.

A renowned clergyman lately preached rather a long sermon from the text: "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." After the congregation had listened about an hour, some began to get weary and went out; others soon followed, greatly to the annoyance of the minister. Another person started, whereupon the parson stopped in his sermon and said: 'That's right, gentlemen; as fast as you are weighed, pass out! He continued his sermon at some length after that, but no one disturbed him by leaving.

An attempt to commit suicide is in the eyes of our law a crime; but it is also in the eyes of most people of modern views a pretty good evidence of disordered nerves or intellect. The distressing scenes which accompanied the arrest and taking to jail lately at Hamilton of a young woman charged with this offence were such as to suggest that some unsuccessful would-be suicides may be very different from ordinary criminals. How would it be, for a change, to act on the assumption of derangement rather than on that of crime, and to defer the prosecuting of the unfortunate victim until the doctors have had a chance to say whether he or she was responsible.

Friend, stop a moment. Is this paper worth two cents a week to you? If so let the editor know it. Tell him you could not do without it. It will please him and better still give him his hard earned cash he deserves it. If on the other hand, you feel you do not derive any benefit from it pay what you owe and stop it, but keep straight with the printer. If you toiled from week to week without any recompense from your employer, even if you had asked for your back salary, would you like it? Your employer means well enough, but is probably negligent. Is it so, friend, in your case? If so, make it right to-day with the printer. If you knew the steady toil of the editor you would not begrudge him a paltry dollar for a paper you receive about fifty two weeks in a year.

Store advertising in Jarvis is getting better, getting more interesting, all the time. THIS MONTH'S ADVERTISING is better, completer, more important to you, than the advertising a year ago was.

Teach your daughter to read more ads than novels. Not that novel-reading is harmful. It is good—like dessert after a substantial meal. Reading ads will make her practical in her ideas, and will make romance-reading wholly harmless.

It was easy money, and this is how it came. A traveller, the representative of a merchant tailor in an adjoining town, struck a town not long ago, and solicited orders for suits. He had his tape and samples and understood his job. More than that, he had a sample book of this season's styles and one could have his suit made right up-to-date. And he got some orders. There was a deposit of $5, if the purchaser did not have $5 he took less. The deposit was necessary as a guarantee of good faith, and of course if the suit did not fit the money was refunded. Well that is all some time ago now, and the people are still waiting for the man with the suits to turn up. Moral—ah! well, patronize your home town.

Jarvis people awoke Monday morning to find the weather conditions of bleak Autumn or near Winter prevailing instead of those of balmy Spring. Chill gales blew and during the day there were several light flurries of snow, which disappeared almost as quickly as it fell. The storm subsided toward the later part of the day. There was a very heavy white frost at night all over the surrounding district. Its coming was predicted, and it caused a good deal of uneasiness. Fruit blossoms, it is said, with the exception of a few very early varieties, are not far enough advanced to have caused much damage Even the early peach blossoms looked quite natural after sunrise. The atmosphere of Tuesday and even to-day although embracing was somewhat chilly. It truly seems that Old King Winter is loath to depart and that Spring reclines in his lap quite frequently.

The cold snap wasn't much of a snap for the fruit growers or gardeners.

Things are moving rapidly in Dr Beattie Nesbitt's case. He was released on $15,000 bail Monday morning. In the afternoon he left for Muskoka to take life easy at his summer home. "Nothing to say now about the case," he remarked to the newspapers. It is said that the trial may come early.

In 1908 she made a 10,000 mile exploring trip, from Chicago to the Artic Ocean, by way of the Mackenzie River, with Miss Jennie Brown, her niece. Her death will be widely regretted.

Owing to the absence of Rev. A. C. Eddy, who had charge of the services on the Decewsville circuit on Sunday last, J. W. Chapman had charge of the services in the Methodist church here. In the evening M. K. Dyer of Armenia addressed the congregation. Mr. Dyer is intending to return to his native land as a medical missionary and expects to enter the Toronto Medical School next autumn to assist him in preparing for his work. All were greatly interested in his message. On Monday evening, notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the roads, a fairly-good sized audience greeted him to hear his lecture, concerning Armenian customs, etc. Marriage customs were illustrated by a number of those in the audience who kindly volunteered to don the oriental costumes and help represent an Armenian marriage. This proved to be interesting. Ben Johnston and Miss Shirley Rodgers, Marshall Robert and Miss Eileen Porter, Homer Trousdale and Miss Marion Davidson were the "happy couples." The presenting of the wedding cake, however, to a number of the intimate friends of the "contracting parties" which took place on the day following the "nuptials" was somewhat after the Canadian order of things.

Illustrated Lecture

The lecture of Rev. Canon Spencer on Westminster Abbey and the Coronation of King George, which was held in the Music Hall, on the 8th inst., was very interesting and instructive and was delivered by the Rev. Canon Spencer in his happy style, and one after seeing so many views of both the exterior and interior of the old historical building could almost fancy that they had been there. The attendance was not as good as it should have been considering the magnificance of the views, but many of the audience had the pleasure of a hearty handshake with their old rector and were delighted to see him looking so well. The collection amounted to a little over $10 which, after paying the small expenses are handed to the Jarvis A.Y.P.A.

A Noble Holiday

Every good housewife looks forward with pleasure to Victoria Day. It comes at so pleasant a time of year. More than that, the day is sacred to the memory of a great Queen and noble woman. But while the housewife is conscious of these facts, while the sentimental chords are struck in her heart, while the thrill of loyalty traversed her soul—she has other reasons. Victoria Day has in her mind an utilitarian significance. John will be at home all day. She is fond of John. Ten years of married life has failed to crush her affection for him or her pride in his broad shoulders and large feet. Still she has conquered the old desire to sit beside him gazing into his eyes and holding his hand, while the sordid old world wags on. Nowadays she calls that sort of thing "idling." People's minds do change sometimes. Their view point shifts. They take in more of the horizon. So the housewife, looking out upon the backyard, sees a great need, which quite overshadows the delights of spooning, mooning, or—to be classical—"lallygagging." He will be at home all day. Good. In the morning he can shake the big rugs in the living room. He is such a fine strong fellow, and they pull a woman's arms almost out of there sockets. After breakfast, perhaps, he could clean out the furnace flues and whitewash the cellar. Lime is such a good thing—prevents dampness in the rainest weather. Of course he can paint the window-box and the screens. That will take only a few minutes. Then the old walnut bureau might be fixed up with some varnish, and the knobs on the drawers might be glued. Some inequalities in the lawn might be filled by some nice black loam brought from the back of the lot. After sowing grass seed on these spots, perhaps, husband might fill the cracks in the lumber room floor and paint it. Then the garden! Oh, yes, the garden! Chicken netting is needed for the morning glories and sweet peas. The tomato plants need sticks for support Weeds are coming in the lettuce bed. The tulip bulbs must be taken up. Geraniums and asters must be planted. Four hanging baskets must be made and filled. Six fruit trees should be planted, and the back fence should be painted green. Hurrah for the glorious 24th, the Day that "Himself" is at home.
