MARRYING MARK . . . .

by

Violette Kimball Dunn

SYNOPSIS

When Mark Alexander's beautiful wife Ellen, died, he was left with Valerie, Ellen's daughter by a former marriage. All of Ellen's family save Shirley wanted to adopt Valerie—and the trust fund which Ellen left her, but Mark would not hear of it and took Valerie on a long trip. On the way home, they met Lucy Tredway and engaged her to tutor Valerie. Now, Ellen, fearing that Mark is interested in Lucy, has urged Ellen's sister Dorothy to come and try to get rid of Lucy. Dorothy has just told Lucy that Valerie's friends will not be permitted to visit her if Lucy stays. Lucy says that she must speak to Mark first.

CHAPTER 25

"Can you honestly tell me you believe my brother-in-law would let you go if you talked to him about it?"

Lucy longed to say she knew he would. At last she lifted her eyes and looked into the greenish-yellow ones staring at her.

"No," she said. "He's much too docent. I'm sure he wouldn't."

"It's something in your favor that you admit it. Mark has always been wax in the hands of attractive women. And of course you must have a certain kind of charm for men—"

Lucy went to the door and opened it. "This is still my room," she said. "Will you kindly leave it?"

"Why—I want to help you with your plans—" stammered Dorothy.

"Will you kindly leave my room?" repeated Lucy. "I don't know if I shall ever forgive you or not. But I don't have to listen to you any longer. Or see you—"

Dorothy found herself at the door without quite knowing how she got there. She faced she heard a faint footfall in the hall, but when she glared out there was no one in sight.

Lucy allowed herself a storm of tears. She buried her head in the cushions of the couch, and cried her heart out. When she began to get her breath once more, she got up and washed her face. Then she began to pack. Plans formed and unformed in her mind as she worked. And suddenly she knew what she would do. If she was going she must go at once. If she waited to see Mark again, she would never find the courage. It took her only a short time to get her things together.

Farewell Tokens

She wrote and tore up a dozen notes. What could she say to Mark? At last she took a fresh sheet and wrote quickly. She couldn't even begin it. She only said:

Don't hate me for going. And don't think I don't know all you've done for me. I could never tell you how grateful I am. I didn't realize it was a mistake—my being here. I'm leaving this check for the Ark. I'm really very rich—such a big salary, and I've saved such a lot of it! LUCY.

She found her checkbook and drew a check on the Allington bank for a hundred dollars. She didn't know the Ark had cost Mark three times that. She thought she was overpaying him, and was glad.

She found she couldn't write to Valerie at all. She found a snapshot taken only the week before she left. Lucy and McTavish on the terrace. She wrote across the bottom, "With all my love, Valerie darling. Lucy."

She ran with it to Valerie's bedroom, and laid it on the dressing table. She opened Mark's sitting-room door almost timidly. It was the first time she had ever crossed the threshold. Even the air seemed filled with him. She ran to his desk and propped the note there, with the check folded inside.

Pain almost past bearing knotted her throat. A handkerchief with an embroidered "M.A." lay unfolded on a chair, where Mark had dropped it. She picked it up and held it for a second against her face. Then she thrust it deep inside her sleeve.

She closed the door carefully and ran downstairs. Everything depended on secrecy. And speed. If Chiltern should see her—if Mark should come back before she got away—it was almost like an escape. The big hall was empty. The house might almost have been deserted. She pulled the soft fur of her coat around her and opened the front door, running down the drive and around to Catlet's quarters.

Luck was with her, for Catlet was just running out the big car to go for Mark and Valerie. Lucy blessed her genius for getting on with servants as she called to him. She had, she said, a sudden longing to take the Ark out for a little run. Was it in working order? Catlet assured her that it was, as he had run it out only the day before to put it in a different place.

She supposed, she said, that Catlet had heard the funny old thing was hers? Catlet had heard so, and told her gravely it was a fine old bus. Would he get it out for her before he started? He would indeed. He did. The lumbering old hybrid, its new engine humming majestically into the drive.

Lucy almost forgot her grief to smile as Catlet stepped out of it in his smart uniform.

"She runs like a two-year-old," he said.

"I can hardly wait to try it myself. Thanks a lot," Lucy said.

Away in The Ark

She invented delays, poking inside, waiting for Catlet to leave. He evidently had no suspicion, for he stood for a second waiting to see if she needed him. Then he got into Mark's car and drove away. Lucy ran the car quickly to a side door.

Her heart almost choked her with its pounding. It was so awful to go like this.

She crept up a back stairway to her own door unseen. The upper hall was empty, and she carried her luggage down piece by piece, making three trips, and hiding her things in the back of the van. At last they were safe. Chiltern, she was sure, was at the front door.

She got quietly into the Ark, and started the engine. The van's gay coloring had been painted out, and it was now a dark and shining blue. It looked merely like a rather smart delivery car, if no one looked closely at the driver.

Lucy drove silently down the back drive, and out of the service gates. She hardly knew where she was going, but headed instinctively for Allington.

She knew, however, as she drove along the quiet road in the late winter afternoon, that the wonderful feeling of security had been lost even before. Dorothy appeared. Looking back, she could trace its loss to Elise, and Thanksgiving night.

Now that the excitement of getting away was beginning to wear off, she was filled with a sort of panic, which gave way at last to complete desolation.

It ought to be easy to take up the old ways again Easter because she was rich! She had over a thousand dollars in the bank at Allington. What was she afraid of? Didn't she realize how lucky she was? Luckier than she had dreamed of being. And this was probably only the beginning. She must face ahead.

NAVY GETS NEW RECRUIT

Latest addition to the Royal Canadian Navy is Cambridge Bud, a pedigreed bulldog, who is now serving as mascot for the gunnery school at Halifax. He was donated to the school by Chief Petty Officer F. J. Searle, as a token of gratitude after every man in the gunnery school had volunteered to give the veteran seaman a blood transfusion during a recent illness. Bud is shown with Gunnery Petty Officer H. Catley.

Christmas Cakes

The subject of Christmas cakes this year is very difficult for so many ingredients are soaring in price and Christmas cake, if it is going to be a cake to keep, must be rich; so I am trying to please all and fulfill in a general way the requests and give you what I think is the best variety for our space.

ENGLISH FRUIT CAKE

1 lb. flour (browned in oven)
1 lb. sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg
1 lb. currants (washed and dried)
½ mixed peel (stew for ten minutes)
⅝ lb. butter
¼ lb. chopped dates
½ lb. mixed glazed fruit
¼ lb. blanched almonds
¼ lb. chopped pecans
8 eggs
½ cup corn syrup
½ teaspoon soda

Mix and sift the browned flour, sugar, spices and salt. Add the prepared fruit and nuts. Add the syrup, dissolving the soda in the syrup. Next add the melted butter and the well beaten eggs. Add the wet ingredients to the flour very gradually mixing very thoroughly. Turn into well greased pans, lined with three layers of greased paper. Steam for four hours and dry in slow oven for two hours or bake in slow oven for four to five hours.

WHITE FRUIT CAKE

1 cup white sugar (fruit sugar)
¼ cup corn syrup (white)
1 cup butter
3 eggs
1 lb. raisins (sultanas)
¼ lb. mixed peel
¼ cup fine cocoanut
1 small bottle cherries
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon almond flavoring
2 slices colored pineapple (chopped fine)
2½ teaspoons baking powder
3 cups sifted flour

Cream butter well, add sugar and corn syrup, then well beaten eggs. Next comes the flour which has been sifted with the spices. Add the fruit last, mixing all very thoroughly. If steamed, cook for two hours drying in a slow oven for ½ hr. if baking, cook for 1¼ hours in very slow oven.

Miss Chambers welcomes personal letters from interested readers. She is pleased to receive suggestions on topics for her column, and is even ready to listen to your "pet peeves." Requests for recipes or special measures are in order. Address your letters to "Miss Sadie B. Chambers, 73 West Adelaide Street, Toronto." Send stamped, self-addressed envelope if you wish a reply.

Churchill's Cigars

A box of ten of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's cigars netted $502 at Christie's recently when auctioned for the benefit of the Aid to Russia Fund, of which Mrs. Churchill is head.

The cigars, which were sold several times during the afternoon, were extra-long La Flor de Allones in Havana Coronas Enormes. The Prime Minister said they lasted him two hours and a half each.

Cakes That Go To The Party

By: KATHARINE BAKER

Perhaps you're having an evening party and are looking for a very special dessert for very special company. Though this Fudge Loaf will be the high-light of your refreshments it's quite inexpensive and in fact, uses only one egg.

Chocolate Fudge Cake

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
½ cup butter or other shortening
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 egg, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅔ cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add chocolate and blend; then add egg and vanilla. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Bake in greased pan, 8 x 8 x 2 inches, in moderate oven (325°F.) 1 hour. Cover cake with Creole Fudge Frosting.

Creole Seven Minute Frosting

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1½ teaspoons light corn syrup
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Put egg whites, sugar, water and corn syrup in upper part of double boiler. Beat with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary egg beater, and cook 7 minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from fire, add vanilla, and beat until thick enough to spread. Spread on cake. Melt 2 squares unsweetened chocolate with 2 teaspoons butter. When frosting is set, pour chocolate mixture over cake, letting it run down on sides. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers.

YOUNG-LOOKING TWO-PIECE FROCK

4915

By Anne Adams

The new vogue for the supple, long-waisted look is interpreted by Anne Adams in this two-piece frock that is so practical and young! The blouse of Pattern 4915 buttons down the front and is becomingly gathered at the centre panels. The three-quarter sleeves are new too — or make them full-length or short. The skirt is gracefully cut in only three sections, which shortens sewing time. Why not plan two versions of this frock, and use the transfer motif on the jacket of one? The leaves may be appliqued and the stems embroidered, or the whole design embroidered in easy stitches. The other frock might have a contrast skirt, a tiny collar. Pattern includes Sewing Instructor.

Pattern 4915 is available in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16, three-quarter sleeve dress, takes 4¾ yards 39 inch fabric; long sleeve dress, 2⅝ yards 54 inch fabric.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern to Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

Bit of Figuring Was Worth While

In London recently some members of a Roosevelt mission conferred with English officials, says Leonard Lyons in his gossip column, "Broadway Gazette," and goes on to tell this war story:

"A note was brought to two of the Britishers, who left, saying, 'We'll be back shortly.' . . . Those men are Britain's foremost mathematicians. They were rushed by air to Dover—where three men watching a rugby game had been killed by a Nazi shell fired across the Channel.

"The mathematicians studied the shell's trajectory—arrived at by measuring the angle of the snapped branches in the trees through which the shell had traveled. They made their calculations and located the exact spot in France from which the shell had been fired. An R.A.F. flier went up and across and destroyed the gun.

"The local mathematicians flew back to the London meeting. 'Sorry, gentlemen,' they apologized to the Americans, 'we had a bit of figuring to do.'"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON 23

THE NATURE AND WORK OF THE CHURCH.—Matt. 16: 13-20; 18:15-20; Acts 2:37-47; 8:1; 1 Cor. 7:17; 12:4-31; Gal. 1:13, 21-24; Eph. 1:15-23; 4:1-16; 5:25-27; Rev. 1:10, 11.

PRINTED TEXT, Acts 2:41-47; Eph. 4:11-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Christ also loved the church, and gave himself up for it. Eph. 5:25.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—The two discourses of our Lord found in this lesson were given in the Autumn of A.D. 29. Pentecost was in the Spring of A.D. 30. Paul's persecution of the Church was previous to the year A.D. 35, when he was converted. The First Epistle to the Corinthians was written about 59 A.D.; the Epistle to the Galatians, one year before that; the Epistle to the Ephesians, 64 A.D.; the book of Revelation about 95 A.D.

Place.—The words of our Lord concerning the building of His Church were spoken near Caesarea Philippi. The later discourse, from Matthew, was given near Capernaum. The events recorded from the book of Acts took place in Jerusalem; the city of Corinth was located in Greece. The city of Ephesus was located in the province of Asia.

Many Believers Baptized

41. "They then that received his word were baptized: and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." The Apostle Paul years later, in writing to the Romans, asked how anyone could call upon the name of the Lord to be saved except they believed of whom they had not heard, and how could they hear, unless someone preached to them. "So belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ."

42. "And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." The Apostle Paul, in stating the four great things for which the Word of God was profitable, placed teaching first. Unless we have the truth about our faith, our fellowship rests on false foundations.

43. "And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done through the apostles." 44. And all that believed were together, and had all things common; 45. And they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all, according as any man had need." As far as is known, this communal life was never practiced outside of the city of Jerusalem. It was not obligatory on anyone.

An Ideal Community

46. "And day by day, continuing stedfastly with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread at home, they took their food with gladness, and singleness of heart. 47. Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved." The believers were persevering in daily attendance at the temple as a body for public worship. But besides the temple they had their own places of meeting, or synagogues, such as the upper chamber and Mary's home. Here, at home, they gathered together every evening for the breaking of bread. They partook of their food both bodily and spiritually. This they did with joy and singleness of heart, or sincerity of character. These represent the true relation to God and man; the joy manifests itself in praising God, and the singleness of heart, showing itself in the unselfishness of their common life, wins favour with all the people. The ideal life of the community attracted many new adherents.

Perfection of Saints

11. "And he gave some to be apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." 12. "For the perfecting of the saints, unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body of Christ." All believers are the saints of God, but no believer is made perfect the hour of his conversion. It will take all the experiences of life to complete, and perfect in us God's holy purposes for each of us.

13. "Till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a fullgrown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. 14. That we may be no longer children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, in craftiness, after the wiles of error; 15. but speaking truth in love, may grow up in all things unto him, who is the head, even Christ." If all believers were made and perfected, they would all have the same great faith. This whole passage emphasizes the tremendous need of teaching our people that in these days of multitude errors and subtle heresies, the children of God might not be deceived by wicked men.

16. "From whom all the body fitly framed and knit together through that which every joint supplieth according to the working in due measure of each several part, maketh the increase of the body unto the building up of itself in love." The entire body, the Church, by having its members joined closely together, and each member in vital contact with the head and source of supply, makes for itself the increase, or growth of the body.

Copying The Hawk

Dive bombing, says The Brockville Recorder and Times, is a new science in the present war, but duck hawks and other species of birds use this dive method for destroying their prey.

According to a United States Department of Agriculture bulletin, duck hawks are the fastest birds reported. "One of these hawks," says the bulletin, "diving on its victim flew 165 to 180 miles an hour when timed with a stop watch. Diving at a flock of ducks, at a velocity of nearly 175 miles an hour, an aviator reports that a hawk, presumably a duck hawk, passed him as though the 'plane were standing still and struck one of the ducks."

Man has copied the dive idea but has surpassed even the duck hawk in speed, the velocity of his descent being almost three times as fast.

Prince Bernhard Of Netherlands

The True Son of An Adopted Land, Says R. P. in the Christian Science Monitor

Few men have enhanced their prestige in so short a time as Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands. When he became prince consort of the Netherlands, there were some people, even among the Dutch, who had doubts as to the wisdom of Princess Juliana's marrying a German, and especially one who had been an officer in Hitler's Schutzstaffel (SS).

But the former Prince zu Lippe-Biesterfeld soon proved his loyalty to his new fatherland and quickly won the hearts of the Dutch people. His feelings regarding the Germany which had so brutally destroyed the freedom of the Netherlands were recently expressed in a statement in which he declared that he felt nothing but bitterness against the present regime in his former fatherland and that he realized the old Germany he had known would never come back again.

Today the prince is an active representative of the Netherlands government in many spheres. He is president of the fund bearing his name, which consists of contributions of free Dutchmen throughout the Netherlands Empire toward winning the war. Already more than 1,200,000 pounds sterling have been received. With this money 32 bombers have been bought and equipped with Dutch crews and 75 Spitfires presented to the British government.

Prince Bernhard is also chief liaison officer between the Netherlands and he British forces. He is the proud possessor of the wings of the R.A.F. and holds the rank of air commodore.

Recently he has established a reputation as a public speaker. A command of foreign tongues is not unusual in royal families, but the prince's excellent English was much commented upon after a recent speech in London. "It might have been that of a young English officer," more than one listener declared. The simple eloquence with which he spoke of the day when Holland would be free to do the things worthwhile doing underlined the fact that Dutch-British "community of interests, centuries old, has grown since they joined arms against the common enemy."

Last year, on June 27th, Dutch people in occupied Holland showed their appreciation of Prince Bernhard and their determination to remain true to their ideals by appearing with white carnations—his favorite flower—in their buttonholes—much to the annoyance of the German invaders. This year, throughout the Netherlands Empire, thousands of Dutch people did the same.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

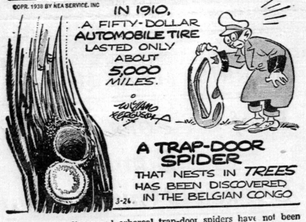
By William Ferguson



THE newly discovered arboreal trap-door spiders have not been identified as any recognized species, but they are just as interesting. If not more so, than their ground-building relatives. They hollow out a groove in the bark of a tree, then build their structure therein, and camouflage it so expertly that until a few years ago, they had been overlooked.
