March

"The stormy March is come at last,
With wind, and clouds, and changing skies;
I hear the rushing of the blast,
That through the snowy valley flies."

THE GRIP

Sneezing, wheezing, hot, then freezing,
Shaking, aching, tremboling, quaking,
Weary, bleary, sad and dreary,
Sore, too raw, too, eyes red, lips blue,
Rackin, hacking, sneezing, cracking,
Headache, no brain, all drugs seem fake;
Sore chest, no rest, one long painfest.
Can't think, eat, drink, on the big blink,
Just lie and sigh, feel like you'd die.

Winter is Here

Winter is here. It arrived Wednesday night and made known its arrival by a blanket of snow which completely covered the ground. All previous snowfalls this season were merely flirtations—mere jokes. The persent one came in with a real winter appearance. People who retired early Wednesday night awakened Thursday morning to find two feet of snow on the ground and more to follow.

Of course, there are always some people who cannot be pleased, and a number of this class in Jarvis no doubt took exception to the manner in which the winter sneaked in. How the snow flew in the morning when the snow shovels were brought into requisition. The lion-side of March must have got mixed, and fancied leap year was still in existence. Sunday was boisterous and cold enough to "suit the most fastitious."

Overcome by Gas

Harrison, Feb. 28.—During last night the Colleson household, consisting of Mrs. Colleson and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Colleson, had a narrow escape from being asphyxiated owing to the escape of coal gas from the furnace caused by a defective flue. About 2 o'clock Mrs. J. S. Colleson awoke feeling faint, and called her husband, who also felt ill. He, however, was able to thrown open the windows and doors and fix the furnace draught. After airing the house all went to sleep again. Late this morning he awoke to find the house again filled with gas and his wife and mother unconscious. Although almost overcome himself, he managed to reach the telephone and called Dr. Thomas Henry, who arrived promptly and applied restoratives. The ladies are still very ill but are recovering from the poisonous effects of the gas. Mr. Colleson is able to be about the house again.

The persons mentioned in the paragraph above are a brother and sister-in-law and mother of Mrs. (Rev.) J. H. Ross of town. In a message received by them on Monday it was learned that the unfortunate ones are daily improving.

Accident

What might easily have terminated in a serious accident happened on Wednesday of last week to Edgar Machell son of Wm Machell. He was engaged in drawing hay for Percy Armstrong and when decending a steep hill on the north side of Thos. Murphy's farm, the load swerved to one side, causing the team to jump and as a consequence the young man, in clinging to the horses, was thrown violently to the ground a distance of ten feet. He was brought to his home and medical attendance procured and on examination it was found that no bones were broken although he is suffering from a severe shaking up and several bruises. Edgar is congratulating himself that he escaped with such slight injuries. We trust he will soon be feeling himself again and able to be to be on our streets ere long.

Sudden Death

The death took place in Jarvis, on Thursday evening, Feb. 27th, 1913, of Mrs. John Keane, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Coonan. Although the deceased lady had been ill for the past two months, her death was quite unexpected. She was up and about the day of her demise, but about 9:30 p.m. she passed peacefully away, the immediate cause of her death being heart failure Mrs. Keane, who was 75 years of age, has been residing with her daughter for the past year and a half and was much beloved by those who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. Mr. and Mrs. Coonan accompanied the remains to the late home of the deceased in the Gore of Downie, near Stratford, from which place the funeral was held, interment taking place in the family burying plot in St. Marys R.C. cemetery on Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Wrecked at Cayuga

Bowling along at the rate of forty miles an hour the Wabash express on the Michigan Central, bound from Detroit for Buffalo, was wrecked two miles east of Cayuga at 7.15 this morning. Fully a score of people were more or less seriously hurt. That many were not killed is remarkable. There were over a hundred passengers on the train and they were pitched in all directions when the accident occurred. Spreading rails were blamed for the wreck. From what could be gathered over long distance telephone from Cayuga the engine did not leave the tracks but five coaches jumped the rails, bumped along the ties and then toppled over fifteen-foot embankment.

A panic followed but fortunately those who were not hurt quickly extricated themselves from the toppled over coaches and went to the rescue of the injured. Some of the train crew hurried back to Cayuga and an emergency call was turned in for all the doctors in the neighborhood. The injured were brought back to Cayuga and cared for at the Cameron hotel. Some of them were obliged to remain for treatment while those who escaped with light injuries proceeded on a special train to Buffalo. Many of the passengers had thrilling stories to tell of their experience when the crash came. Several of them had narrow escapes from death, being hurled against seats and the sides of the cars. Three people were badly hurt.
