Measonable Recipes. Okra is a great addition to chicken gravy or to that made when cooking any fowl. It is something like gelatine in its effect. Sweetbreads for Breakfast. - Sweetbreads fried crisp and brown are especially nice for breakfast. They should be par boiled in salted water, cut in pieces the size of a saddle-rock oyster; dip in Indian meal or fine cracker crumbs and fry in hot lard. Pickled Peaches.-Nine pounds of peaches, three pounds of sugar, three quarts of vinegar. Peel the peaches, put two cloves in each peach. Put them in with the sugar and vinegar, and cook five or ten minutes. Add a little whole allspice.

Baked Berry Rolls .- Roll biscuit dough thin, in the form of a large square or into small squares. Spread over with berries. Roll the crust and put the rolls into a dripping pan close together until full; then put into the pan water, sugar and butter. Bake them. Serve with any of the pudding

It was Labouchere who suggested bathing the face in hot water to preserve it from wrinkles. Now comes the testimony of two French women of note as to the efficacy of hot water with a few drops of elder water in it for the prevention of tan and freckles, the face to be bathed twice per day.

Cucumber Toast.-Peel fresh crisp cucumbers of medium size; cut lengthwise into slices, place into cold water for a few minutes; drain and dip each slice into flour; then fry quickly until of a light brown color, in butter or beef drippings. Place the slice of buttered cucumber hot from the pan between slices of buttered toast and serve at once. The cucumbers may be seasoned with pepper and salt, and a little mustard may be added when taken from the pan.

Ideal Ice-Cream.—The ideal and almost unattainable ice-cream is made by following this recipe ! Two quarts of cream (not milk), one pound of pulverized sugar, two eggs. Beat the eggs; then beat the sugar with them ; then the cream. Let this just come to a boil; then remove from the fire; flavor with vanilla; strain through a very fine sieve, or, if you have none, a clean, new piece of cheese cloth will answer in place of one. When ecol, put it in the freezer and freeze, stirring until it is too hard to turn any longer.

Removal of Warts .- Warts may be removed by cauterization. An ordinary pin is thrust through the base of the wart, care being taken not to wound the healthy tissue beneath. Then the skin being protected, the head of the pin is heated in the flame of a candle.' It is said that the wart becomes white and fissured in a few minutes, and comes away on the point of the pin. Dr. Cellier also says that it is only necessary to remove one wart on the hand, that though there may be a dozen all the others will disappear without

Decorative Notes

A handsome little lambrequin for bracket is of black satin cut in points. Trim the edge around the points with short and fine silk or chenille fringe. Across the top paint a vine with green leaves and red berries, and on each point put a rosebud or tiny spray of forgetme. papers, for some reason or other, seem nots or of heliotrope.

A lovely cushion is made by embroidering a spray of old-fashioned pinks on a ground of pale blue. Around the edge of the cushion put a full puff of pale silk satin. Where the puff is joined to the blue satin sew a good sized pink cofd. The cushion when completed should be about half a yard long, but not quite so wide.

A table scarf that is tasteful and quite inexpensive is made of dark green felt; it should be about haif a yard wide; have it pinked on the edge and on each end put a strip of silk patchwork, familiarly called "crazy patchwork." Have the strip onequarter of a yard deep. Make fringe of the felt, cut in very narrow strips, and six inches deep. Each edge of the silk patch-work should be feather stitched.

Pretty mats for ornaments on a marble mantel are made of scrim or of linen momie cloth. They should be long and narrow, and be trimmed with lace across the bottom, and have some pretty design in Kensington embroidery on them. The more effective and striking the design, the better form it is in. Stand a vase or jar on the ornamented end, and let the other hang over the mantel.

A beautiful tidy for the back of a large chair is made of a square piece of cloth about ten inches each way; on this is sewed patchwork of plush and velvet in the form of of a widespread fan. The corners of the block are of black velvet, and on the top, drooping over the fan, is a spray from moss-rose bush, in ribbon embroidery. The edge is finished with lace. This design is pretty for a block in a quilt or a sofa pillow.

A pretty way to fix a palm-leaf fan is to paint it. Mix some ultra-marine of Prussian blue with a little silver white paint and make it quite thin with boiled linseed oil. Paint the fan on both sides, handle and all, with it. If you choose to decorate it, paint a poppy or some buds and stems on it: tie a blue ribbon around the handle and it in a convenient place. If you prefer to make it pink, use crimson or madder lake and white in the same way.

THE ROYAL PAMILY.

Mr. Labouchere, in London Truth, thus gossips about the recent and prospective movements of the Royal Family of England: The arrangements for the Queen's journeys remind one of the precautions taken to procure privacy for the Sultan's daughter in "Aladdin," as she passed through the streets of Bagdad on her way to the bath. At Gosport, last week, people were prevented from even approaching the railway crossing when the royal train was due, and when the Queen arrived at the Clarence yard, the police and officials were ordered to a distance till Her Majesty had gone on boar the Alberta. The naval and military authorities at Portsmouth were to have been in attendauce as usual to receive the Queen : but on Tuesday morning a telegram from London informed them that Her Majesty would dispense with their attendance. The daily auxious to make out that the Queen is still unable to walk, for most of them stated that Her Majesty was carried in a chair from the train to the yacht. As a master of fact, the Queen stepped without difficulty out of her saloon and walked across the gangway to the deck of the Alberta, and, on reaching Trinity Pier, at East Cowes, Her Majesty walked to her carriage without assistance. The Queen was looking well, but she still seemed to be in a state of considerable depression.

During the last three weeks of the residence at Windsor, Her Majesty resumed her ordinary summer routine, and drove down to Frogmore every morning to breakfast, after which she went through her letters and boxes in a tent on the lawn, returning to the castle for luncheon. On these occasions Sir Henry Ponsonby works in his room at the castle, and two grooms are kept constantly employed conveying letters and parcels between him and the Queen. Her Majesty has neither neglected her private business and correspondence (which are more considerable than most people have any idea of), nor relaxed her attention to public affairs during any part of her indisposition.

The Braemar "gathering," the great society "function of the Desside season, is fixed for Thursday, the 30th, by which time the Court will have arrived at Balmoral; but it is very improbable that the Queen will attend either this or any other festival during her autumn residence in Scotland, as it is understood that none of the customary entertainments to tenants and servants will be given on the royal estates this year, in consequence of the death of Mr. John Brown.

NEWSPAPERS AND ORIME.

Facts that the Police Authorities

Should Study. The Chiefs of Police who assembled at Toronto the other day said some very senof constables by fees, and in doing so attacked a glaring evil which the Government should remedy at once. There is one thing which the police sachema have yet to learn, and that is the power of the press as an agency for the detection of crime. At present many chiefs have an idea that reporters are nuisances, and treat them as if admitted to the interior of the police department on sufferance. In a large numper of American cities this is not the case. Items of police news are forwarded to headquarters by telephone and copies of the message written out in duplicate for every daily paper in the city. To suggest such thing to the autocrats in some Canadian cities would be to make the chief laugh and tauof the bold reporter as the possessor of monumer al cheek. ### Lady Godiva's Bide.

Lady Godiva rode through the streets of Coventry once more a week ago last Monday for the first time since 1877. She was personated by a star from the circus, Miss Maud Forrester. A correspondent of the New York Herald, who had a little chat with her just before she started out, thus describes ner costume : "Godiva was just then standing in front of her glass, adding a little gauze to the somewhat too scanty upper part of her flesh-colored satin corsage. But for this garment, which fitted like a glove, a pretence of satin drapery about the waist and the very transparent tights which encased her symmetrical, if perhaps rather exuberant legs, clothing she had no more than the original Godiva. In a trice, however, Miss Maud had wound some muslin about her and, letting her long golden tresses down over her shoulders, had fully prepared herself for the approaching spectacle." She remarked that she hoped it would not rain, though she did not have on so much to spoil if it did. The reporter admits that she weighed 233 pounds and looked every pound of it, but says that on horseback carried herself well and elicited from the crowd cries of "Ain't she a stunner!" It is said that in spite of what the muslin drapery had done for propriety she would have scarcely ventured on a London or Paris stage without adding to

Dr. Begg, who moved this resolution, said he thought they should, if necessary, even approach the Queen herself on the matter. Above a scroll is a band with figures representing Highlanders "first in the fray," above which is a collection of war implements. The whole is surmounted by a female figure wielding the sword and scales of Justice. The hilt is formed on medallions entwined by Scotch thistles and acanthus foliage. In the centre medallion the Scotch coat-of-arms is wrought and medallions on either side contain scenes from Tel-el-Kebir. The hilt is finished by the Imperial Crown. It is intended that the hilt shall be wrought in gold, set with gems where considered suitable. The blade shall have on one side scenes from the Egyptian war, commencing with embarkation of troops and leading up to the victory of Tel-el-Kebir, and on the other side of the blade are cupids placing laurels on a Highlander; on this side the inscription can be engraved in full. On the reverse side of the scabbard equally appropriate ornament scenes and emblems could be given, more particularly with reference to the Crimea, India and Ashantee.

Com hon law vs. Common sense A Law Discussion in the Home Circle

It was wonder. how many nich in the city found time to take their paper up and see what the news was before they went out last night. They would first call their wives' attention to the cholera in Egypt, or Capt. Rhodes' proposed attempt to swim Niagara, and while the female part of the firm was all attention, the lords of creation would accidently notice his Honor's judgment in the late wife beating case. Some sible things. They denounced the payment kind husbands who always monopolize the paper after tea, deviated from their usual custom and read it aloud, and "had to get," and while they ducked their heads to save their ears from being boxed, the paper was confiscated and the judgment set aside. Another benedict, who had a simple, confiding wife whom he loved as the apple of his eye, said in a lordly tone to her, as she was about leaving the table, " Hold on Susan! we have been married a good many years, and I never understood my privilege as a husband till now, and in case I exercise my rights as a married man I want you to know what the law is on the subject; here it is-'At common law a man has a right to resort to the moderate correction of his wife for her misbehavior, and administer proper castigation for her faults' and you see, wife, I can 'sault and batter you because you are my wife. Here is the law on that point : 'And still I am not prepared to say that in the strict sense of the term, that was an assault and battery which he did, owing to his right to correct and even punish her.' If I should make a wrong calculation and kick a few ribs in, it is all right. I will read you an extract from the judgment to dispel any doubts you may have on that point :- 'It is not, however, for magistrates or courts to step in and interfere with the rights of a husband in ruling over his own household. The law gives him rights which no authority may invade.' I don't want to exercise my rights at common law as long as you do your duty and strictly obey my commands. But if the coffee ever tastes again as it did this morning, I give you notice that a casti gation will be in order." The little woman grabbed her lord by the nose and pulled it till he begged for mercy. Then she sat down beside him and cried. not that the common law had any terrors for her; but she cried for the poor women who were daily kicked and thumped by brutal husbands, whose newly acquired knowledge of the common law would add violence to the kisks. Then she knew that every brute in the city would cut this judgment out and paste it in his hat, to have it handy to read to their wives after the "correction" was finished. "This may have been law," she said, "established and quoted by judges in the dark ages, when Britons were in a semi-barbarous condition, but I don't believe it's law now, John; if the intelligent women of Canada seriously thought it was, there would be a Bill passed at the next session of Parliament, and don't you forget it, my dear! -St. Thomas Journal.
