Puts An Organ or Piano in Your Home.

On Friday, March 15th, we commence our annual slaughter sale of all used instruments in stock. This year sees us with double the number we ever had. Some eighty-five instruments are offered and among them organs bearing names of such well-known makers as Bell, Karn, Thomas, Doherty and Dominion. The prices of these range from $15 to $60 at the above terms. The pianos bear such well-known names of makers as Decker, Thomas, Herald, Weber, Wormwith and Heintzman & Co. Every instrument has been repaired by our own workmen, and carries a five years' guarantee, and as a special inducement we will make an agreement to take any instrument back on exchange for a better one any time within three years and allow every cent paid. Send post card at once for complete list, with full particulars.

THE LESSON OF THE TREE.

Throughout the long and brilliant summer it was majestic in beauty, opulent with foliage, and every branch was rich with fruit. The children came to romp in its shade, and their pulgy and dimpled arms swept round its trunk in many a fond caress. The boys climbed into its forks, and at night a man and a woman whispered their secrets to its heart, and then the frosts smote it. The ripened apples fell one by one. The leaves floated to the ground.

And when winter came he found only a stark, bleak, rain-stained frame, a thing bare and graceless. But look! See what had happened over night. On every twig the buds are groping, the eager sap is racing through the chilled and sterile limbs, and here and there a blossom lifts its parted lips to the gentle May heavens. The sun is warming its heart with hope, and soon it will burst forth in a new glory of foliage and garb itself in the white vestments of a bride.

Oh, valiant tree, you never lose your faith!

You bear a message to the world, a message of good cheer.

You typify the destiny of man. The storms of life assail his very soul, grief grips him of the things he holds most dear, but if his faith persists, his strength must rise anew, and with its coming comes fruition and the nobler growth.—Herbert Kaufman in Woman's World for May.

THE MICROBE OF SPRING.

Spring is interesting to others besides poets and lovers. Scientific men have been studying its why and its how and they no wtell us that it is due to something widely different from the warming rays of the sun. M. Muentz, in an address before the Academy of Sciences in Paris the other day, asserted that spring was due to microbes.

When the days grow longer these microbes become extraordinarily active, and they set up what M. Muentz calls an excessive nitrification, without which the earth would remain sterile and the sap would not flow in plants. This activity, he says, has nothing to do with the temperature, but is due solely to the hereditary tendency of these microbes to become active at this time of the year.

And it is due to a microbe that the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

GERMANY'S LARGEST STATION.

The largest railway station in Germany has just been completed at Leipzig at a cost of $34,000,000. Heretofore the central station at Frankfort has held the record for size. The new building at Leipzig has been in course of construction for the last nine years. The immense cost does not so much represent an outlay for ornamentation and decoration as it does the enormous size of the structure, which has almost unlimited space for the accommodation of freight and passenger traffic.

To Grow Turkish Tobacco Here.

Nearly 250 acres of land will be devoted to the culture of Turkish tobacco in a certain district in the central portion of California near the town of Dinuba. Experiments which have been conducted by a prominent tobacco company have shown that this portion of the San Joaquin Valley will raise first-class leaf.

This valley is said to be the only locality outside of Turkey where the leaf with the real Turkish aroma can be produced.

The tobacco manufacturers have been carrying on experiments for years to produce Turkish tobaccos which are essential to cigarette making. This is in the scope of avoiding the monopoly which a French concern has achieved over the genuine Turkish tobaccos.—From U. S. Tobacco Journal.

What to do for POISON

GAS.

(By a Physician.)

Illuminating gas, or the gas that comes from a stove or furnace is very poisonous. It is dangerous to breathe even two or three times in a room where the air is heavily charged with such gas.

The symptoms of gas poisoning are headache, dizziness, ringing in the ears, throbbing temple, spots before the eyes, and finally unconsciousness.

The specific for gas poisoning is fresh air. Stimulants should be administered, a little wine or a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a third of a glass of water.

When rescuing an unconscious person from a room charged with gas hold their breath and hurry. If you cannot carry the unconscious person, open wide all windows and doors, and go for help.

ANIMALS LIKE TO PLAY.

Some Appear to Have Real Games and Others Merely Frolic.

"Many animals make it a part of their maternal duty to amuse their young," says the author of "Animals at Work and Play." He adds: "Even a ferret will play with her ferocious little kittens just as a cat will with hers." The same author very interestingly describes the game of "I'm the King of the Castle," as he saw it played by some lambs.

One lamb mounted a pile of straw and rubbish, and immediately his comrades "stormed" his castle, and tried to push him from his stronghold. The one that succeeded had a chance to defend the position as the former one had done, and the performance was kept up until all tired out. A steeplechase was another exciting amusement. In this they jumped over a row of old feed boxes as they ran back and forth across the barnyard.

For genuine amusement in the home, says St. Nicholas, select two well matched kittens and set them to playing—or they will do it without urging. The saucy "faces" they make, with ears turned back, as they wait to close in with each other, are very amusing. It seems strange that they can keep such serious faces themselves while carrying on such funny performances. But we must remember that all their quick attacks and stealthy actions while at play are training them for more serious business in later life.

Dogs get a great deal of exercise in their play, but they are not so sly nor so graceful as members of the cat family. My dog has "killed" many a rag while playing at rat catching. Dogs seem to obtain great enjoyment from their play. Their capers with a stick thrown to them to bring back from the land or the water have amused many a small master. Little pigs play with as much vigor and dexterity as any animals that I have ever seen; but later in life this capacity entirely disappears.

While some young animals enjoy playing with one another there are others which seem to prefer to play alone. Rabbits appear to belong to this latter class. Many times I have seen young rabbits amuse themselves by suddenly starting off from where they were nibbling grass, and going "like lightning" for ten or more feet, then, with a sharp turn, come back with a leap in the air and snap about again for another run. Suddenly they will stop and listen, then shoot off again and turn themselves in the air with a kick of the hind feet as they skim over the ground.

Chickens perform most absurdly in the barnyard. Rooks are said to go through an elaborate performance of "killing" a biscuit before eating it. Tame sea gulls play a game with sticks and stones, throwing them into the air and catching them in their beaks as they would fish. In the zoo monkeys are the master players, but they have their rivals in the tussling bears, the dancing ostriches, the spouting and diving sea lions. In fact the inhabitants of every enclosure "get gay" at one time or another.

Deliberately Invited Trouble.

(Detroit Free Press.)

"At last, Henry, the question of votes for women is to be submited to the people."

"So I see."

"Henry, you will admit that women are as intelligent as the men."

"Freely, I admit that."

"And that as women pay taxes they ought to have a say as to how their money is to be spent."

"That seems reasonable. But let us discuss the question. I earn the money we have, don't I?"

"Yes."

"And I bring it all home to you?"

"Yes, as you should."

"But do I have any voice in how that money is to be spent?"

A few minutes later he put on his hat and coat and left the house, regretting that he had given that twist to the argument!"

CHEERFULLY SUBSCRIBED.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkhuger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

The Speed of Ships.

On first thought the sea's depth seems of small importance if the ship finds depth beneath to give her easy draught. If she can run free apparently it makes little difference whether she has six feet or six hundred feet between her keel and the botton. Such an inference is erroneous, however, for the depth exercises an important influence. The British cruisers Blake and Blenheim were expected to run twenty-one knots, but actually ran two knots less in shallow water. They ran again under thesame power, but the depth was between 125 and 165 feet and their speed was 22 knots—one knot over the maximum calculation. The difference in speed is attributed to the influence of the "wave of translation" displaced by the ship as she moves forward, which acts as a brake. The nearer the ship's keel to the bottom the stronger the friction. A ship drawing twenty-seven feet of water (say a ship of 12,000 tonnage) feels that friction over a depth of 250 feet. According to some calculations, the dragging influence ceases to be felt at a depth equal to ten and one-half times the draught if the ship stands high out of the water.

A curious feature of the matter is that the speed of the ship is as important an element as the depth of water—that is to say, the influence of the depth on the ship's speed is more or less powerful in proportion as the speed is great. A ship increases her speed more easily over deep water, but on the other hand the faster a ship runs the more depth of water she needs to prevent the hindrance caused by the dragging influence of the friction which is always felt when the ship's keel senses bottom. Running ten knots an hour, a ship must have between twenty-six and twenty-seven feet of depth or she is dragged from below. In running twenty knots she needs a depth of 104 or 105 feet, and when running thirty knots she feels the drag over a depth of nearly 324 feet.

LONDONERS GO HATLESS.

I wonder whether the hat as an indispensable article of dress will some day go out of fashion altogether? For some years past quite six out of every ten children I have met taking their walks abroad in the parks have been without headgear of any kind, and judging by the wonderful flaxen curls one sees adorning their infantile polls, mothers and nurses seem justified in making the hat taboo for the youngsters.

When it comes to older people, though, the effect is not so good—unless it is that one's eye has not become used to men of maturer years, greatcoated but without head covering of any kind. I met such a one the other day, quite well dressed and well groomed, but hatless and unashamed.—The Gentlewoman.

Railway's Economy in Pencils.

A striking instance of saving is furnished by the Rock Island Railroad, whose thousands of employees annually use 325,000 lead pencils in the performance of their duties. These pencils cost approximately $6,000, or a little more than 1½ cents apiece. The average length of a lead pencil is about seven inches, which would make each inch of pencil cost a trifle over $0.002.

Until recently the employees were given new pencils whenever they requested them. An investigation disclosed that, on an average not more than one half of a pencil was used before it was thrown away for a new one. That was a needless waste, the efficiency experts figured, and accordingly a suggestion was made which in reality amounts to an order requiring that the stub of each pencil shall be returned before a new one is issued.

The stub of each pencil must not only be returned, but it must be exceedingly short, or the new one will not be forthcoming. Since the new system was put into effect it is estimated that the saving from using an inch or two more of each pencil will aggregate fully $2,000 a year.—Chicago Tribune.

AUNT VIRGINIA SAYS.

Don't tell a man with a grouch to think of his blessings. If he wanted to think of his blessings he wouldn't have a grouch.

PRICES IN GERMANY.

Since 1900 the price of bread has risen 11 per cent. in Germany, the price of beef 13 per cent. and pork 33 per cent. In Essen, by the figures of the Krupp Co-operative Society, since 1900 the price of black bread had risen 30 per cent.; potatoes, 30 per cent., veal, 34 per cent., and bacon 30 per cent.—Bakers' Weekly.

THE DOERS OF THE LITTLE.

The great 'phone line of human life is buzzing earnest rings to call up people who will do the useful little things. The admirals and the brigadiers quite easily are met, but good high-private soldiers seem more difficult to get. Drum-majors are not hard to find to march before the band, but steady players in the ranks not always are at hand. There's countless applicants, galore, to swell the big parade, but folks don't seem to like so well to labor in the shade.

Yet it is true that little things are those that build the great, and sometimes progress limps along with slow and halting gait, because, while there are plenty who will grace the varied fronts, no volunteer comes forward to perform the humble stunts. We cannot play the organ unless someone pumps the air; we'll not mount to the dome-room unless someone builds the stair; we cannot speed the engine unless someone lays the rail; and little acts are needed or the grand stand plays will fail.

So I want to sound a plaudit for the workers out of sight, for the fireman at the furnace in the warship's thrilling fight, for the plodding routine worker building up the nation's good, for the men who, sweating, toiling, dig the coal and saw the wood. And it seems to me that chaplets made for masters, victors, kings, yet will grace the brows of heroes who have done the little things.—Ben C. McQuesten in Woman's World for May.

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

(Katherine A. Clarke.)

I like to rise up early
And get the washing over,
When the dew is on the world
And the bee is in the clover.

I like to hunt for eggs
Where I hear the partridge drumming
And gather golden honey
Where the yellow bee is humming.

I like to hear the trout splash
Down in the meadow brook,
And see the roses nodding
Through the window, where I look.

Every evening has its sunset,
Every noontide has its flowers,
Every afternoon its shadows,
But in the early morning hours

Are the sweetest of the day,
With dew glittering all over,
God's silence on the world,
The bee singing in the clover.

THE VOYAGE.

My ship comes drifting to the shore,
No treasures in her hold;
We skirted all the isles of time,
Yet we bring back no gold.

But one day in a golden sea
We heard a fairy strain
That pattered down upon the deck
Like drops of silver rain.

And one day by a lonely coast
We found a lonely flower
That had not looked upon man's face
Until that happy hour.

And one white night we anchored off
Some fragrant Araby
And could not tell the odors from
The moonlight and the sea.

Now home at last with empty hands
We put our questions by
And find a little snatch of sun
Beneath a smiling sky.

JAILER WANTS NO WOMEN.

"I'd rather have 100 men under my charge than one woman," said the jailer of Raymond Street Jail in Brooklyn.

"You see," he explained, "even the men we get in here, who have offended against the law, presumably have a respect for it an idea of its necessity. We get pretty desperate men to lock up sometimes. They don't make any trouble for us. They do what they're told and keep their mouths shut. But the women!" he wiped his forehead. "Do you know," he exclaimed, helplessly, "every blessed one of 'em wants to be a law unto herself.

"They're antagonistic toward the rules. They won't do this and they won't do that. It almost seems as if they deliberately worked themselves up into rages over inimaterial matters. And when a woman says 'I won't' and looks at you!"—the jailor shook his head. "It's a hard proposition," he said.

"We're hampered in dealing with them. When a man doesn't behave himself, we know what we may do. He knows it, too. Our hands are tied when it comes to the women. What extra punishment are you going to hand out to them when they rebel?

"They don't even get along with each other. They are constantly fussing among themselves over a variety of small matters that don't amount to anything. The men prisoners seem to have a sort of silent sympathy for each other. They're friendly. I believe a man feels that the fellow in the cell next him would help him if he could. The few quarrels that do arise among the men are over something specific, something worth while."

The reporter asked the jailer why, apart from this punishing proposition, he supposed that women, as a rule, more gentle and docile than men, showed themselves less so in prison.

"I'm inclined to figure it out in this way," said the jailer. "A woman is used to working in her own home. She is her own boss; nobody's around in authority over her telling her what to do or how to do it.

"Now, often from the time he's a boy a man is working in a shop or factory or a business concern of some kind. He's under orders. A cog in the wheel. By the time he gets here he's used to doing what's he told, whether he likes it or whether he doesn't."

The women prisoners didn't look as if they were an exceptionally obstreperous lot. They seemed just average women, young most of them. One of them had a baby at her breast. They occupy pleasanter quarters in the jail than the men.

Pigeon's Long Flight for Its Mate.

"He remembers his old racing days and 2400 miles flying back and forth between its old loft in Minneapolis and Iowa City, where his mate is locked up, in the endeavor to get her to follow him back to Minneapolis.

Fred. May, of Minneapolis, sold Alleto and his mate two years ago to R. W. Wales, of Iowa City. Alleto escaped his new home two months ago and flew to Minneapolis, then becoming lonesome returned to Iowa City and landing outside the loft crooned for his mate. Five times he has made the trip of 400 miles.

"Alleto is a wise bird," said Mr. May. "He remembers his old racing days and is wise enough not to get 'trapped in.' A racing bird when he gets home flies into the loft and a bob wire falls and holds him until the counter mark is removed. Alleto knows this and stays outside and calls his mate."—Minneapolis Journal.

THE CHURCH.

The church exists for the community, but it seems to be extremely difficult to kill the conception of it that the community really exists for the church. The church that is satisfied with its neighborhood unsaved is living below its obligation, and the church that does not adapt its programme to the express task of saving its neighborhood is short-sighted and faithless. Its work need not be limited to its neighborhood, but it cannot neglect it and be truly Christian.

NOT THE ONLY ONE TO PAINT.

Col. Newell has written his reminiscences as an Indian agent and this is one of the stories he tells:

The Indian Commissioner visited the agency one day and asked to have all the Indians brought before him, that he might make them a speech. These were the Brule Sioux, of whom Spotted Tail, one of the most illustrious of Indians, was at that time head chief. In the course of his address the commissioner asked the Indians to quit painting their faces and bodies. He told them that none but a savage painted his face or his body. After he had finished Spotted Tail arose.

"You say we are savages because we paint our faces and bodies," he said. "Last spring I was in Washington and went to the President's inaugural ball. All the white women at that ball had their faces painted. I do not think we are savages," he said.

The assembled Indians shrieked with laughter.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
