
THE CAUSE OF SUFFRAGETTES

(Rochester Post Express)

If women nowadays were in a great demand for wives as their mothers were, the suffragist movement would be limited now as then to women of the convention-scorning feminist type. The women of to-day will not do housework except in her home, feeling that her liberty of action is hampered by such employment, and prefers a precarious and less remunerative means of livelihood in office factory, or shop. Neither will working girls as a rule live in those hotels and boarding houses which offer them superior accomodations and home comforts at the lowest prices on condition that they subject themselves to those restrictions with which a prudent mother surrounds her daughters in their own home. We need no quarrel with this, for it is one of the things that are so, and we must make the best of it; but it indicates with sufficient clearness to eyes which can see that the root cause of the present disquiet is that so many women are now denied that freedom of joint-sovereignty in a home of there own to which they have a right to aspire. Deprived of this, they are bound to keep open road which seem to lead towards it, and insist on a compensating degree of freedom in the management of their own affairs.

IN THE LAND OF JINGLES.

In the land of Jingles,
Where everything must rhyme,
The dogs and cats and children, too,
Must have a merry time.

The bears will never eat you up,
But hug you just for fun;
There's never any work to do,
But all the work is done.

The swallows and the humming-birds
Just have a lovely time
In the land of Jingles,
Where everything must rhyme.

SQUIRREL BLOCKED TRAFFIC.

A gray squirrel and a kind-hearted motorman to-day blocked traffic for ten minutes in busy Connecticut avenue. car tracks, stopped, dug it out and sat down to eat it. The clanging of the bell did not move him, and the motorman, seeing that the little animal would be killed, stopped his car and went out to shoo him off.

Secretary of the Interior Lane, Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Senator John D. Works and other statesmen aboard the car had to wait. Finally, realizing that he had to get out or be captured, the squirrel took a fresh hold on his food, scurried across the sidewalk and up the fence inclosing the British Embassy.—Washington, corr. WHO WAS THE OTHER?

(Montreal Gazette)

Commissioer Starr, in condemning a Toronto man in the Juvenile Court, who, through earning $3 a day had only given his wife and family $2 since last June, referred to him as "the second meanest man in the city." The condemnation will make people wonder what kind of a fellow the meanest man is and how he earned the distinction.

BIRDS FAR AT SEA.

Rare Ones Often Caught by Sailors.

The ship's barber of the Atlantic liner Minnetonka has found a new and profitable pastime in catching wandering birds during the voyage across the Atlantic and selling them on his arrival in port. All sorts of birds come aboard at sea, he declared, and many of the rarer specimens find a ready sale.

His chief assistant is a whistling brown linnet, which lures the wanderers aboard from its cage is an open port. When it whistles the vagrant fliers alight on the ship, and presently flutter inside. Then the port is closed and the strange birds are quickly made prisoners.

"I have caught hundreds of them, and I supply the London Zoo regularly," said the bird catcher to a representative of the London Evening Standard. "On a recent homeward voyage the linnet lured a snowbird. It was the first one the London Zoo had been able to secure in sixteen years.

"What the birds require when they first alight on a ship is not food but water; and it must be boiled. Gulls follow a ship all the way across the Atlantic and back. American gulls are regular convoys as far as the English Channel, where they desert us to follow a westward bounder home again.

"The English gulls, which are different, having black feet, yellow bellies, and gray-white wings and backs, convoy liners over and back in the same way. The gulls like emigrant ships best, because the more passengers there are the greater quantiy of scraps is thrown overboard.

"I do not believe the laws against capturing wild birds apply to the high seas, beyond the three mile limit. At any rate it is humanity to care for them, and give them drink, food and medicine when they come aboard exhausted. My birds have brought me good luck, and the passengers are fond of watching them.

"I had a curious experience with a homing pigeon once. It was near Whitsuntide, at which season they hold races here. A carrier flew aboard as we were entering the Channel, struck the mast and was stunned. I cared for it until I thought it was strong enough to fly again, and then turned it loose. The bird, however, came back on board. Again I set it free, and again it returned, this time settling down on a ledge at the stern, where it rested for a time, and finally left us as we neared Dover. It must have been disabled and couldn't fly far.

THE FREE TOLLS BILL.

(Buffalo News)

The doctrine of free tolls, of examption from tolls, is about the most impudent plea that has been put up in the last forty years. That is the real way to look at it on the merits of the question. It is complicated further by the express agreement we made with Great Britain when getting her out of the isthmus, that all nations should be treated alike with reference to the use of the canal. Nobody pretends that all nations are treated alike when our own are allowed to go free and others must pay the tolls.

The interpretation of the treaty as meaning that all other nations but our own, is what was meant, convinces no one who was not convinced in advance and who refuses to be converted. No sulh idea was thought of when the treaty was made and none was ever thought of until lately in defence of the scheme of giving monopolists a free route over that expensive waterway for their benefit exclusively and not for the benefit of the American people.

Further, Great Britain demands that the question at issue be taken into The Hagne tribunal for arbitration. It will disgrace our country forever if we lling to the law as it stands and refuse arbitration and show how hollow after all are our professions of devotion to the cause of peace. The true way, as most newspapers suggest who have the right idea, is to kill the bill repealing the obnoxious clause.

TRUE WOMEN AFTER ALL.

(Medicine Hat Call)

A labor leader in England has married the lady who controls the fortunes of the International Women's Suffrage League. He is evidently a very brave man or the suffragettes are not the furies some people are apt to imagine them. They are women, after all, and very few, if any, women are insensible to the charms of love when they come to them. Indeed these women, as all who know them are aware, are true women after all, and some of them most charming too, their traits of feminity being particularly noticeable.

They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHY ELIOT DECLINED.

(Philadelphia Record)

In explanation of ex-President Eliot's refusal to acept the post of Ambassador to the Court of St. James it is said that, as a man of simple taste and a delicate stomach accustomed to plain food, he viewed with apprehension the prospect of having to submit to the solid and imposing menus of English dinners. Much have been written condemnation of John Bull's cooking, his everlasting roast beef and limited variety of vegetables, but this is probably the first time in history that it ever loomed up as formidable enough to deter a man from accepting a great diplomatic position. Still, no one can blame Dr. Eliot. Better the simple life in America and good digestion than a round of hospitable functions in England spoiled by a disordered stomach and a rebellious liver.

ANCIENT DENTISTS.

Did Bridge Work 3,000 Years Ago.

A medical authority has just given a number of newly acquired bits of information that would seem to refute the claim made by dentists that modern dentistry is modern. For the achievements of unknown dentists of ancient Egypt and Rome prove the contrary.

Just who the dentists were the historians do not appear able to tell us, but the results of their work have proved beyond a doubt that bridge work, on which moderns specially pride themselves, and the most skilled kind, too, was done a thousand years before Christ!

In the tomb of Sidon were found four incisors and two canine teeth in the jaw of a woman that were held together by gold wire—two of the former being transplanted teeth, which might be called crowns in this day, fastened in by gold wires.

In the museum at Corneto, the ancient capital of the Etruscan federation, are to be seen several specimens of bridge work done by riveted bands of nsteel. One of these bands supports three artificial teeth and another two artificial teeth, the latter being made from a single ox tooth grooved to imitate the tooth of a human being.

Under the laws of the twelve tables written in Rome 450 B. C., while it was expressly forbidden to bury gold ornaments with the dead, a special exception was made of gold with which the teeth were held together. Martial, one of the satiric poets of Rome, once referred to the teeth of one woman as dark and the other as white, and explained that one of them had bought her teeth, while the other had her own.

RAWTHER GRUESOME.

The Englishman, Who Lost An Arm, Tells a Story.

Stewart Edward White, who had been in Africa for a year on a hunting trip, writes about the rhinoceros in the American Magazine. Following is one of his stories:

"In the Nairobi Club I met a gentleman with one arm gone at the shoulder. He told his story in a slightly bored and drawling voice, picking his words very carefully, and evidently most occupied with neither understanding nor overstating the case. It seems he had been out, and had killed some sort of a buck. While his men were occupied with this, he strolled on alone to see what he could find. He found a rhinoceros that charged victiously, and into which he emptied his gun.

"When I came to," he said, "it was just coming on dusk, and the lions were beginning to grunt. My arm was completely crushed, and I was badly bruised and knocked about. As near as I could remember I was fully ten miles from camp. A circle of carrion birds stood all about me not more than 10 feet awaw; and a great many other were flapping over me and fighting in the air. These last were so close that I could feel the wind from their wings. It was rawther grewsome.' He paused and thought a moment, as though weighing his words. 'In fact,' he added with an air of final conviction, 'it was quite grewsome!' "

AMATEUR "REFORMERS."

(Montreal Gazette)

The amateur regulators are terrors when they get started. They think they can "reform" everything, although the net result of their work as a rule is to discovery something that everybody knows. They shout of evils that the police and the courts and the clergy and other genuine workers are constantly combatting and keeping in check in a legimate way that does not draw the attention of persons who may be harmed by the exposures. They pry their way into the "poor man's" house on washday and look in the larder to see what his fat face children are going to have for dinner. They should be suppressed or at least checked in their activities. A man should be able to keep everybody out of his home except a policeman with a warrant or a health inspector employed by the municipality he lives in. Certainly to amateur detectives seeking nortoriety, his domicile should be a castle with a deep moat around it.

REPEAL PANAMA BILL.

(New York Sun)

If arbitration were necessary there could be no more impressive argument for it than was contained in the letter of Mr. Thomas Willing Balch, of Philadelphia, to The Sun last September reminding his fellow countrymen of Great Britain's compliance, nearly half a century ago, with the American demand for an international tribpnal to pass upon our Alabama claims. Professor Oppenheim reprints Mr. Balch's letter in full, referring to its author as "the worthy son of his father, who was first to demand the settlement of the Alabama dispute by arbitration"—an event which marked an epoch in the history of the world's civilization.

But we do not believe that the majority of Americans want or expect the Panama question to go to arbitration. They want and expect the controversy to be settled in the promptest and most honorable way, by the voluntary repeal of the coastwise trade exemption clause of the canal act. They are hoping, with good reason, that this paramount duty of national honor will be urged upon the Congress soon to assemble by President Wilson with all the force he is able to put into propositions of supreme political and ethical importance.

FOR PANAMA ARBITRATION.

(Buffalo Express)

There is no doubt that sentiment has changed much in the house on the toll question. It it has changed enough to support the President in a demand for the repeal of this exemption clause, the conflict will be even more interesting. But if Congress is not to amend the law as proposed, it should not put any obstacles in the way of arbitration. The British Government asks for arbitration if the toll-exemption clause is to stand, and we certainly should grant it, as there is very grave doubt as to whether or not we have live up to the obligations we assumed when the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was signed.

FORCE OF WAVES.

Few Persons Realize How Great It Is.

The average inland person who has never seen the ocean has no real idea of the force of its waves. He reads about the storm, of boats being carried away and bulwarks stove in. But he does not realize the steam hammer blows that may be struck by mere water.

A recent storm on the British coast received the official resignation of a storm of "extreme force." A picture taken in Hastings Harbor shows the concussion with which the waves struck the sea wall, sending the spray apparently higher than the buildings along the street. Blocks of concrete and iron railing were torn from the new parade extension at Caroline Place and tossed back into the roadway as if they had been bits of plank. Timber work that had withstood the stress of years was torn apart and carried away. Basements were flooded along all the seaward face of the town.

Such a storm, when it sweeps over a ship, will sometimes carry away almost everything on deck. Deckhouses are often smashed and the lifeboats are often stove in and ruined.

Various attempts have been made to devise motors to develop power from the force of the waves. The amount of energy wasted through their lack of success is beyond estimate. If the power of the sea could be used, it would drive the machinery of an unlimited number of plants.—Chicago Tribune.

WATCH THE BOY.

(Chicago Tribune)

There is no doubt that keeping a child close to one's apron strings and away from rough and tumble play may make a "sissy" out of him. Many a mother who rues the want of character and manhood in her grown up son is herself partly if not largely responsible for this condition. By persistent hemming and hedging in the child she has prevented him from acquiring strength of character, stamina, and manhood.

Let mothers in Chicaga relax their vigilance over their boys and the number of mollycoddles may perhaps be reduced by a few. But for every mollycoddle that the absence of watchfulness over the child's play and companion ship will eliminated, two or three little toughs may be bred. Too close watchfulness over the city boy may be a handicap, but too little watchfulness is a positive danger

WHERE AMERICA FAILS.

(Philadelphia Record)

Fire insurance rates in the United States are ten times as high as in any European country except Russia; in fact, in some countries (Switzerland, for instance) the premiums are merely nominal. The reason is that the cost of insurance is proportionate to the risk. When the risk is small the premium is correspondingly so. The charges are high in the United States because our fire losses are enormous, relatively as well as actually. The probability of loss is the regulating factor; and no keenness of competition among underwriters will bring down premiums while the factor remains abnormally large. If we should have fire insurance at less cost we shall have to reduce the quantity of inflammable material used in construction, amend our building and inspection laws and prevent incendiarism. Fire-resisting construction is the most important preventive. In European cities a fire rarely gets beyond the room in which it originates; and to cause a fire through negligence is a misdemeanor.

QUEER FACTS ABOUT THE OCEAN

If a box six feet deep is filled with sea water, which was then allowed to evaporate, there would be two inches of salt left in the bottom of the box. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of salt 440 feet thick covering the bottom, in case all the water should evaporate. In many places, especially in the far north, the water freezes from the bottom upward.

Waves are deceptive things. To look at them one would gather the impression that the whole water traveled. This, however, is not so. The water stays in the same place, but the motion goes on. In great storms waves are sometimes forty feet high and their crests travel fifty miles an hour. The base of a wave (the distance from valley to valley) is usually considered as being fifteen times the height of the wave. Therefore, a wave twenty-five feet high would have a base extending 375 feet.

The force of waves breaking on the shore is seventeen tons to the square inch.
