INSURANCE.

Curious "Risks" Accepted By the Underwriters.

There is an institution in London which insures against everything—from the loss of Atlantic liners to the birth of triplets. That institution is Lloyd's, and the underwriters there are men of the greatest power and influence. There is scarcely a thing under the sun that cannot be insured, and the underwriters at Lloyd's will accommodate people in almost any direction so long as the transaction is a legitimate risk and not a gamble.

Curious "risks" are continually being accepted by the underwriters, and it is by no means an uncommon thing for people to cover by insurance possible losses through earthquake, hurricanes and war. Men and women have protected themselves against loss through invasion, bombardment, and bombs dropped from Zeppelins. The bombardment of our unfortified coast towns by German vessels placed a lot of work into the hands of underwriters.

For years people took out policies against risks connected with the fear of war breaking out between certain Great Powers. Before the average man ever dreamed that we should be bound to take up arms against Germany the underwriters at Lloyd's quoted eight per cent. on the risk of an outbreak of hostilities between France, Germany and Great Britain occurring within six months from the taking out of the policy, and for twelve months 15 per cent. was quoted.

Some years ago the underwriters at Lloyd's received a curious inquiry from an undertaker in business in one of the poor districts of London, who wished to know at what price underwriters would relieve him from any liability for shocks which were caused to private persons by his coffins being taken inadvertently to the wrong houses at night.

It was stated at the time that the underwriters were willing to consider the proposition, provided details were supplied to them, such as the undertaker's annual turnover and the number of such shocks known to have been given.

The great "Cullinan" diamond was once taken from a bank vault, in which it was being safeguarded, and shown to the King of Spain. For that special "show" it was insured for half a million pounds. The rate was only sixpence per cent., yet the underwriters shared £250 among them on the transaction.

Actors and actresses frequently insure themselves for large sums. Parisian actresses and English actresses have insured their eyes, hair, and shoulders; Paderewski, the famous pianist, insured his fingers; while that famous dancer, Mademoiselle Napierskonwski, has insured her feet for £10,000.—Family Herald.

The Allies' Casualties.

Comparisons are odious, and when all have done magnificently one does not wish to institute them, but it is, I confess, a little irritating to see it constantly assumed in foreign newspapers that the British losses of men in the war were less than those of the continental allies. This is by no means the case, for, as is pointed out in a very careful statistical article in the current number of the "Round Table," the British Empire actually heads the list of casualties with 4.51 per cent. of its total white population (2,782,779 out of 61,607,320) killed and wounded. France comes very near with 4.32 per cent. (1,730,000 out of 40,000,000). Serbia comes next with 3.56 per cent., and Belgium next with 0.78 per cent. The United States paid its full toll in the last months of the war and had 230,419 casualties, but the percentage of 0.22 to total population naturally does not come into this comparison.
