Jarvis W. I. held Special Meeting

On the afternoon of May 27th, 45 ladies met at the home of Mrs. H. Johnson for the Summer meeting of the Jarvis branch of the Women's Institute.

The president, Mrs. E. Stallwood, presided at the meeting, which was opened by singing the Institute ode, repeating the Creed, and followed by the Lord's Prayer.

After a vocal solo by Mrs. Allan Doughty, a report of the years work was given.

Community Singing followed.

The president then introduced the special speaker of the afternoon, Miss Guest of Toronto. Her subject was "How to make an Efficiency Study of yourself and your Institute' Miss Guest is an excellent speaker and her address was much enjoyed by those present.

At the close of the address a vote of thanks was moved to Miss Guest by Mrs. McNeill and seconded by Mrs Parsons.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem after which lunch was served.

Lunch Committee for June 10— Mrs Rodgers, Mrs. McCarter, Mrs Robinson. Mrs. J. Stallwood. Mrs. Butler, Miss M. Fallis.

Married

COX—PARDINGTON

The marriage of Miss Winnie Pardington, daughter of Mr and Mrs Wm. Pardington, Walpole, to Mr Bruce Cox, Caledonia, was quietly solemnized by Rev. P. E. Deeth at the United Church Parsonage on Tuesday, June 2nd, at 11. o'clock.

After the ceremony the happy couple returned to the home of the bride's parents for a wedding breakfast, following which they left by motor for London and western points On their return they will reside in the township of Seneca.

Census Notes

Old meaning of Family to be used by Census Takers

A Group of Persons Living Together in the same Dwelling Place of Premises' Makes one Family for Census Purposes.

The definition of the word 'family' as it was understood in the days of Abraham and the patriarchs will be used by census takers in ennumerating the population of Canada during the 1931 census. If the head of the family, his wife, sons daughters, daughters-in-law, relatives, servants and lodgers are members of the same household and live on the same premises, they will all go down on the census records as constituting one family. The word 'family' for census purposes means 'a group of persons livving together in the same dwelling place or premises.' The persons in the group need not necessarily be related to each other. A landlady with a hundred boarders constitutes one family.

Two or more families may occupy the same dwelling house without living together or being members of the same household. If two families occupy separate portions of the dwelling and their housekeeping is entirely separate, they will be returned by the census enumerators as separate families, however closey they may be related by blood.

In the census there is even such a thing as a family of one. A bachelor maintaining private quarters will be listed as a family. An employee in a store who regularly sleeps there will be returned as a family and the store as his dwelling place.

A permanent boarder is considered a member of the family with which he lives or the hotel where he stays. A person who boards in one place and lodges or rooms at another will be returned as a member of the family at the place where he sleeps. A transient who is merely staying at a hotel temporarily will be listed as a member of his family at home, if he has one. If he has no home and maintains no quarters, he is put down as a member of the family where he happens to be staying.

A big hotel establishment, including all the guests who live there permanently and the employees or managers who sleep at the hotel, is considered as one family. However, where two or more members of the same family, (as a husband and wife, or a mother and daughter) occupy permanent quarters in a hotel, they will be returned as a separate family leaving the 'hotel family' to be made up principally of individuals having no ethey family relations.

In an apartment or tenement house there will normally be as many families as there are separately occupied apartments or tenements, even though use may be made of a common cafe or restaurant.

The officials and inmates of an institution, such as an asylum or hospital, will be classed as one family if they live in the institution buildings, dormitories or wards. But the families of officials or employees living in detached houses or separate dwellings will be returned individually.

Usual Place of Abode Counts

Enumerating People at their usual Place of Abode.

If a person dies between June 1st and the time the census-taker arrives he will be counted as being still alive in the 1931 decennial census. Children born after June 1 will not be counted in the census although they may be two or three weeks old by the time the census-taker arrives at their home.

Population figures in the 1931 census will be compiled as of June 1st, although two or three weeks will be needed to complete the census taking.

The 1931 census reports will picture Canada as it was on one particular day, despite the fact that the population of the country is continually changing in size and moving from one place to another.

Getting everybody counted once in the place where they belong and nobody counted more than once is one of the biggest problems the Census Bureau has to consider, for each district must be credited with its proper population if apportionment of representation in Parliament is to be correct. Detailed instructions have been issued telling the enumerators whom to count and whom not to count.

All persons will be enumerated as being residents of whatever place is their 'usual place of abode' on June 1, regardless of where they may be when the census-taker arrives.

Each census-taker will count a number of persons who are not actually in his district when the census is taken. Among these will be the following:

1 Persons temporarily absent, either in foreign countries, or elsewhere in Canada on business or visiting.

2 Persons attending schools or colleges located in other districts.

3 Persons ill in hospitals or sanitariums in other districts.

On the other hand, a number of persons who are actually present in the district at the time of the census will not be counted in the population of that place. Among these mill be the following:

1 Persons visiting in the district.

2 Transient boarders or lodgers who have a permanent place of abode outside the district.

3 Students or children living or boarding in the district in order to attend school, but not regardinb the place as their home.

4 Persons who eat or work in the district but who sleep in another district.

Destroy the Weeds

The Ontario Weed Control Act states

Clause 3—Every occupant of land, or if land is unoccupied, the owner, shall destroy all weeds designated noxious by the regulations as often in every year as is sufficient to prevent the ripening of their seeds.

Clause 6—In the absence of any owner or occupier or upon refusal after notice to comply with the requirements of theWeed Control Act, the Inspector may cause weeds coming under this Act to be cut down and destroyed and may charge the cost of such work against the property to be collected in the same manner as taxes.

NOXIOUS WEEDS

Bladder Campion; Ox-eye Daisy; Sow Thistle; White Cockle; Wild Oats; Canada Thistle; Blue Weed; Chicory; Docks; Ragweed, common; Hawkweeds; Ribgrass; Burdocks; Stinkweed; Tumbling Mustard; Wild Carrot; Wild Lettuces.

METHODS OF CONTROL

Sow Clean Seed, Practise a short rotation of crops.

Where Weeds are bad practise summer fallowing or grow such crops as Sweet Clover, Rape, Buckwheat or hoed crops.

Dry Cleaning or Early After Harvest Cultivation is the best method to control Sow Thistle.

Thorough cultivation destroys weeds and increases crop yields.

A knowledge of the habits and manner of growth of each bad weed will assist you in combating it.

Keep all fence rows, lanes, and yards free from weeds. It adds to the general appearance and value of your property.

Pastures and waste land must be kept sufficiently free from weeds to prevent any possible contamination of nearby tillable land.

Write Publications Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, for free booklet on weeds.

C. S. Fitzgerald, Weed Inspector.

Census

It is not, say the census authorities a question of where a person votes or where he pays taxes or owns property. It is a question of where he lives; the 'usual place of abode' for the purpose of the census is the place which one would name in answer to that question. Sentiment and local attachments are not considered When a young person has left his parents' home and obtained employment elsewhere, the place where he rgularly sleeps while engaged in this employment is considered his 'usual place of abode', even though he may still think of his parents' residence as 'home.'

But census taking is a practical problem and exceptions have to be made. It is not always possible in these days of easy locomotion to enumerate everybody at their usual place of abode. Accordingly the census under certain conditions finds it necessary to sanction the enumeration of a person in a place which is not his usual place of abode, if it is a choice between doing that and not enumerating him at all. The regulations provide that if a person temporarily away from home is not represented at his usual place of abode by a husband, wife, father, mother, or some other relative or by a housekeeper, servant, landlady or anybody else who can be relied on to give his name to the enumerator, he shall be counted in the district where he happens to be when the census is taken. Where entire families are absent from their usual places of abode they will so far as practicable be reached by means of a 'Closed House card' which will be filled out and returned to Ottawa and which will tell where they are located. The family temporarily present in a given district will be enumerated where found by the census-taker. At the same time an 'Absentee Family card' will be forwarded to Ottawa immediately giving information at their regular place of abode.

Transient boarders or lodgers who have no permanent home will be enumerated wherever they happen to be staying when the census is taken. This applies to persons who have no usual place of abode, or to any persons who have no permanent homes. People employed in railroad, road or other construction camps, lumber camps, convict camps or other places which have shifting populations composed of persons having no fixed places of abode, will be enumerated where found, except in so far as certain individuals in such camps have some other usual place of abode wher they will be reported by members of their families.

Students in colleges and universities who have no homes elsewhere will be enumerated in the district in which the school is located. Teachers will be enumerated at the place where they are teaching when the census is taken, even though they may spend the summer months at their parents' home or elsewhere.
