HOT WEATHER RULES FOR BABY

More babies die during the month of September than during any other month of the year. Toward the end of summer, for one reason or another many babies become ill and a number o fthem die because their powers of resistance seem lost as a result of repeated digestive upsets during July and August.

Summer is in many ways an ideal time for health as it provides sunshine and fresh air for us out-of-doors and so we are able to build up our health and energy. September is not a dangeorus month for adults indeed it is a particularly healthy time an dthe number of adult deaths for hot months are comparatively few It appears, therefore, that without becoming alarmists, special care should be given to babies during the summer months. There are some simple common-sense rules which should be followed since they may save the baby's life and preserve his health.

Keep Him Cool

A good general rule is "the less clothing, the better"; for cool days or nights add clothing. Babies dislike being overheated just as much as adults, and it is most undesirable in every way that the baby should be over heated.

Keep Him Clean

Keep him clean in every respect Bathe him night and morning, and on hot days, give a sponge bath in between. The bath is refreshing and quieting as well as cleansing.

Keep Flies Away

Flies and other insects carry disease germs and so the baby and his food should be protected from them by screening doors and windows.

Give Him Sunshine and Fresh Air

The great value of fresh air and sunshine is generally recognized. During the hot weather, the baby should have his sun bath in the morning before eleven or after three in the afternoon. Then he should be placed in the coolest spot available, this may be outside in the shade or in a well ventilated shaded room.

Give Him Water

The baby requires more water when the weather is hot. Give him unsweetened cool water between feedings.

Give Food Regularly

Feed by the clock. The baby requires less food in hot weather so be content if he takes less and do not try to force him to take more.

The breast-fed baby's chances of keeping well are much better than those of the bottle-fed. If the baby is bottle-fed, be sure that the milk is pasteurized and that the bottles are sterilized before filling and then kept on ice until used.

In case of illness, such as diarrhoea stop all feeding, give cool unsweetened water and call your doctor. Prompt treatment is needed. Home remedies mean delay which is often dangerous.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto will be answered personally by letter.

DOWN THE PEACE RIVER BY CANOE

A cruise down the Peace River by canoe is an interesting trip in Alberta. Starting in at Summit lake the voyageur on this 500 mile trip passes through Crooked river to McLeod lake and down the Pack and Parsnip rivers before junction with the Peace river is made at Findlay Forks. The journey down the Peace river takes one through the heart of the Rockies and many interesting spots may be visited a short distance from the river in addition to those passed as the descent of the stream is made. Panning gold from the bars of the river is an added thrill to the excellent fishing that may be had on this cruise which can be made in about two weeks.

Discarded picture frames may be made into artistic trays. Add two handles, which may be purchased at the hardware store, and place a piece of bright cretonne under the glass. Back with heavy cardboard and glue strips of felt to the back edges of the frame.

NANTICOKE

Splendid congregations attended both churches on Sunday morning. The attendance of the summer visitors add much to the services.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson of Jarvis visited their daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Vokes on Sunday.

Miss Eileen Reynolds of Jarvis, spent the past week at the home of her cousin, Miss Verna Saunders.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Jones of Montreal were week-end guests at the home of the latter's aunt, Miss A. Livingston.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cruise and family, and Miss Bertie Cruise, of Marbourg, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Saunders

Miss Mildred Henning of Detroit, visited her sister, Mrs. W. E. Doughty during the week.

Mr. W. R. Saunders, and son, Bill of Toronto, visited relatives in this vicinity during the past week.

YEASTS AND HONEY SPOILAGE

Experimental Farm Note)

Most of our foodstuffs which are so valuable for human nutrition possess the disadvantage of being suited to the growth of other living things beside ourselves. The qualities which make them so nutritious to us render them equally so to micro scopic forms of life, and honey is no exception to the rule. With suitable onditions germ life may find opportunity for growth in honey to such an extent that it may be rendered unfit for sale. Compared with milk, however, which is the food most susceptible to germ action, honey is relatively resistant by reason of its high sugar content and its acid reaction. These qualities make it an unfavourable place for bacteria and most other forms of germ life. Yeasts, however, thrive in solutions which are slightly acid, and though the high sugar-content of honey makes it unsuitable for most types, yet nature has envolved a race of sugar-tolerant yeasts which are, as far as we know, the only forms of germ life which spoil honey. This they do through fermentation producing the characteristic off-flavour and appearance of fermented honey and causing thereby serious loss to the beekeeping industry.

For several years the Division of Bacteriology, Dominion Experimental Farms, hasbe en studying the occurrence, source sand action of these honey fermenting yeasts in projects assisted by the Bee Division, the Division of Chemistry and the National Research Council. After the types responsible for spoiling honey were determined, an investigation of their source showed that many kinds may occur in the nectar of different flowers visited by bees, and by which they may be brought to infect the hive nectar. A study of different soils also disclosed the fact that while ordinary field soil is free of these yeasts, apiary soil may become heavily infected to serve as a source of contamination. It appears moreover, from a study of freshly extracted honey from all parts of Canada that all samples of honey contains these yeasts, though in widely varying amounts. Under suitable conditions they may multiply and start fermentation, and whether a honey will ferment will depend upon the amount of moisture, the temperature of storage and the amount of the original yeast infection. Prevention of spoilage will therefore consist in removing or killing the yeasts or in storing honey under conditions which vent their growth. Preventive ures therefore depend either heating to 145 degrees F. or by the addition of harmless preservatives, or by storage below 50 deg F. While part of the original infection is apparently unavoidable investigations showed that considerable contamination may result from the use of improperly washed sterilized utensils at the time of extraction. As much of the yeast contamination is therefore possible control, it is possible for the beekeeper to minimize losses by fermentation by exercising strict cleanliness at the time of extraction. and by insuring that his containers, tanks and utensils are as nearly sterile as possible.

BASEBALL

JARVIS 3, HAGERSVILLE 1

With Half of Regular Line-Up the Locals Put the Skids Under the Reputation and Playing Ability of Best Reputed Team in League.

Last Thursday afternoons game was a headliner for the Jarvis team, when they defeated Hagersville 3—1. J. C. Walker who occupied the mound for the locals held the Hagersville team who are reputed to be the strongest, down to seven hits, and in those seven hits he was given the support that any good pitcher deserves. Lanoman pitched the entire game for Hagersville and allowed but five hits, therefore they cannot credit their loss to the inability of their pitcher. One dangerous instance of the game was when A. Hodgeons slammed a drive to right field, and W. Fess who was playing that position in making a long run for the catch dropped the ball and was unable to locate it until Hodgons had made third base, however the boys weng right to work and retired the side without allowng any runs. Hodgson being put out at home on trying a steal. If Jarvis can just take the next two games scheduled and with old man luck with them at all their standing in the league will be very creditable The game here on Thursday with Dunnville, will no doubt be good, Dunnville beat Jarvis at Dunnville 10—5, but Jarvis are determined to reverse the score on the local diamond.

The teams:—

Jarvis—J. C. Walker, P; H. Fess, C; C. Hazlett, 1st B; W. Walker, 2nd B; A. Smith, 3rd B; B. Evans, S.S.; B. Hill, R.F.; E. O'Donnell, C.F.; W. Fess, L.F.;

Hagersville—Lanoman, P; Smith C; Davidson, 1st B; T. Hodgins, 2nd B; Dougherty, S.S.; Smith, 3rd B; Park, L.F.; Smith, C.F.; A. Hodgins, R.F.

CAYUGA 19, JARVIS 5

Jarvis lost to Cayuga in their fixture with the latter team at Cayuga last Tuesday evening. The Jarvis boys turned in a good game but were unable to advance on the Cayuga boys who have made a reputation for themselves on their playing ability this year. Manager Smith says the local boys will be in a position to play just as good a game in the course of another season. The Juniors have not fared very well this year, but have done very well considering the fact that this is the first year a number of them have played hardball, but now they have plenty of enthusiasm and are anxious for another year to come around so they can go to work on a clean sheet.

KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ANNUAL PICNIC

The Sunday School of the above church, held its annual treat on Thursday, July 14th. It took the form of a picnic in the usual way. It was held at Wood Lawn. The conditions were ideal. The day itself was fine and warm, but a nice breeze made the heat bearable.

A great crowd assembled there, one of the largest if not the largest ever held at Wood Lawn. The lake was beautiful and fine and both the children and the grown ups indulged in bathing and swimming. In the afternoon the races were held in which many of the children distinguished themselves. There were races for all ages, and all kinds of races. Then we had community singing at the pavillion. Mr. Charles Evans playing the violin accompanied at the piano by Dr. Howell and Norman Baxter. This was much enjoyed. Two lovely meals were provided by the ladies, and everyone did justice to the provision supplied them. At the supper table Mr. R. A. McCarter called at ention to the fact that our old an esteemed friend, Mr. Robert Laidlaw had that day reached his 74th birthday and congratulated him on behalf of the whole school on having passed another mile stone on life's journey. The pastor also spoke and Mr. Laidlaw responded in a few well chosen words and three cheers were given him and three cheers were called for Mr. Frank Laidlaw, the superintendent and were enthusiastically given.

Everyone returned home satisfied and high in their praise of the outing
