"How I stopped dosing constipation"

"Sure I'm another booster for ALL-BRAN for constipation like mine. Imagine—no more need for those nasty purgatives which griped, yet helped only briefly. Believe me, eating ALL-BRAN is much better and far gentler. It's my idea of the way to keep regular. It's simple and gentle. That's the beauty of the ALL-BRAN way—if your constipation is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. Here's all you do. Eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day, as a cereal or in several hot muffins—and drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN helps to produce smooth-working "bulk" and prepare wastes for easy elimination. The comforting relief convinces you it's wise to eat ALL-BRAN daily to stay regular. Remember, it's a cereal—not a medicine. So get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. 2 handy sizes. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Traffic On Great Lakes Is Reopened

Reopening of the Great Lakes water route emphasizes the tremendous volume of ship transportation on the lakes and the part this plays in the war efforts of Canada and the United States, comments The London Free Press.

The Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river form one of the busiest waterways in the world. More traffic passes up and down the Detroit river than on any other waterway in the world. Traffic through the Detroit river reached a peak of 111,346,567 tons in 1940, the last year for which there are official figures. By the end of 1943 more than 110,000,000 tons of freight had passed through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie. In the same year more than 2,000 vessels cleared from Port Arthur and Fort William, two busiest Canadian Lake ports.

These figures are a long way ahead of statistics for either the Suez or Panama canals and give an indication of the importance of these routes to the Allied war effort. The Great Lakes lie at the heart of the "arsenal of democracy"; their ships and their crews render one of the most essential services of the United Nations.

Feather Dumplings

A rich beef stew with feathery dumplings carries us back to the days when grandmother's dinners filled our young hearts with joy. Making dumplings has become a lost art in far too many homes. Try the recipe below and your home will immediately leave this category:

Feather Dumplings for Beef Stew

1 cup sifted cake flour; 1¼ teaspoons double-acting baking powder; ¼ teaspoon salt; 6 tablespoons milk; 2 teaspoons melted fat.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Add milk and fat. Then stir quickly and lightly until a very soft dough is formed. Drop by small spoonfuls on simmering stew or fricassee, making sure each dumpling rests on meat or vegetables. (Dumplings should not settle in the liquid. If necessary pour off excess gravy, returning it to stew after the dumplings are cooked.) Cover kettle tightly and cook gently 14 minutes. Do not remove cover while dumplings cook. Makes 6 to 8 dumplings.

Note: For the fat, use a little fat skimmed from stew in making these dumplings. It gives extra good savor.

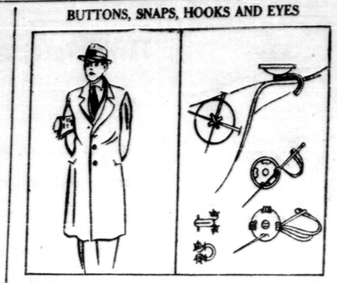
BUTTONS, SNAPS, HOOKS AND EYES



Use a double thread to sew on buttons. Make a knot in the thread and hide the knot under the button by pushing the needle through from the right side. Place the button in position. Lay a pin across the top to keep the thread loose, sew back and forth across the pin. Wind the thread between the button and fabric to reinforce. Secure snap fasteners with an over and over stitch. Sew each hole separately. Carry the thread on the wrong side to the next hole. Most snap-fasteners have a perforation through the centre. Sew one side of the fastener. Hold the garment closed and draw the thread through to place the second half of the fastener.

SERIAL STORY

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

Last Week: Christine does a portrait of Chandra, an Oriental swami, finds her new job pays generously. She finds a message pinned to her easel: "If you are wered, consult Chandra." She goes to the Oriental's "Temple of Truth."

CHAPTER IV

From within the "Temple of Truth" came the tinkle of bells and the wafting of pipes.

"Well, at least this is free," Christine said aloud, "and after all, he gave me my start on the Boardwalk."

She slipped inside.

On a stage designed to suggest all the mystery of the Orient, two slim girls, dressed as temple dancers, were gyrating and prostrating themselves as if before an unseen presence.

A deep gong sounded, and they scurried from sight. From behind a screen of grillwork that simulated delicately carved white marble, a shining figure in silver robes appeared as if by magic. He moved majestically forward and stood for a moment, his arms crossed on his chest, his dark face lifted as if waiting — listening. Then he intoned in a deep, vibrant voice, "Thy servant is ready, O Krishna! Speak through these unworthy lips."

* * *

For a while Chandra's performance was much like others Christine had attended. He described small objects, gave the numbers of license cards, the insignia of lodge emblems, and the dates on letters which an assistant in a white turban took from people sitting here and there and held, apparently without glancing at them, pressed against his own forehead.

He read and answered questions without having seen or touched the cards on which they were written:

"A lady wishes to know about a ring. . . . Yes, I see it clearly —an emerald set in diamonds. . . . She thinks a maid stole it."

Suddenly the strange tawny eyes in the dark face fixed themselves upon a stout woman near Christine.

"No, Madame, she did not take it. You should have looked more carefully," Chandra went on sternly, "before you accused a helpless servant of such a crime. Why, Madame, did it not occur to you that the ring might have slipped through that rip in the lining of your purse?"

* * *

"Why not look now?" Chandra suggested. Then, as the woman hesitated, he almost thundered "Look now, Madame, and be thankful that it is not too late to repair the mischief you have done!"

The woman fumbled in her purse, cried out—a bit too sharply, Christine thought — and held aloft something that glittered with green fire.

"Oh, I am so sorry about that girl," she stammered. "I—I don't know how to thank you, Swami."

"Do not thank me, Madame," Chandra told her, "it is the great god Krishna you must thank."

"The great god — my foot!" Christine thought derisively. "And that stooge's acting was terrible."

All around she heard murmurs: "Isn't he a swami marvelous?" . . . "He told my sister who—" . . . "—and it happened the very day he said it would!"

* * *

Then abruptly, in the midst of a sentence, Chandra broke off, pressed his fingers to his eyes, and said—a startled note in his deep, somnolent voice, "But this must wait. . . . There comes to me—something urgent!"

One could almost feel the silence in the room.

"There is here at this moment," Chandra was going on, "a young woman who badly needs advice. . . . I will not name her. I will not even describe her or tell where she is sitting. I am particularly anxious neither to embarrass nor annoy her — because the word has come to me that I must help her if I can."

Behind Christine a voice said, "I never saw him do anything like this before. It gives me the creeps."

It gave Christine the creeps. Whether it was deliberate trickery with the illumination or not, all the light in the room seemed to gather itself about the glittering figure on the platform.

"Within the last 24 hours," Chandra went on, "this young lady has encountered a series of surprising experiences. She has met with a grave disappointment; she has, by a strange coincidence, unexpectedly found work when she most needed it."

* * *

No one in the room seemed to breathe — least of all Christine.

"During the last 24 hours," the "swami" was going on, "this young lady has also received a mysterious telephone communication concerning something very near to her own safety, which I feel she has already decided to disregard."

"But," Christine thought with a sickening clutch of premonition, "why—he can't mean me!"

She did not know whether she moved, or even spoke the words aloud. In any event, there was a sudden craning of necks.

"I must ask for quiet!" Chandra's voice crackled. "You will, if you please, keep your eyes on me."

His own strange, tawny eyes were not on Christine, but widened on space, as if following some remote vision; yet she felt that they did not miss a flicker of her eyelids; and that deep, hypnotic voice was compelling her to listen.

"I would beg of that young lady," he was going on, his tone suddenly gentle and pleading, "that she think over the events of the past 24 hours. . . . I would beg, for instance, that she try to remember whether, when she returned to her room this afternoon, there was anything about its appearance that excited her suspicion. . . . And now, if she will come to me privately, I shall be glad to advise her, at no cost to herself — because the word comes to me that this is a thing I must do."

* * *

His eyes swept the spellbound audience commandingly.

"That is all, my friends," he said. "Go in peace!"

He raised his arms in what was almost a gesture of blessing; and the audience filed obediently out. As they went, Christine saw faces turned toward her—some touched with superstitious awe, some curious—some amused.

Christine, restored to sanity by those glances, blazed with anger. She had once read a book called "An Expose of the Medium Racket." It was all entirely clear to her now. Of course the girl at the Beachmont telephone exchange was a paid spy.

* * *

When Christine had recalled last night's conversation in the clear light of morning, it had entirely lost the frightening strangeness her own confusion and fatigue had lent it the night before. Of course everyone at Beachmont knew who Mrs. Emma Talbert was. Probably Cousin Emma had telephoned her admiration to someone to see that her dress went to the Crestview, and she operator had overheard; and in her hurried attempt to pass on the information, had not had time to choose her words.

But now it was not possible to put so innocent a construction upon the girl's strange behavior. Of course she was this man's spy. . . . How easy to listen in, and find out that one of the wealthiest women on the beach was expecting a cousin to visit her, and the name of that cousin. . . . How easy, when the cousin called the house and found her hostess absent, to suggest a hotel. . . . And how easy afterwards for this charlatan to have had her every movement watched!

"Well anyhow," Christine thought, "he's not going to make a Roman holiday of me and get away with it."

When the rest of the audience filed out, she remained stonily in her seat. The clairvoyant came to her at once.

What New Big War Orders Mean

Word comes that Canada is back in heavy munitions with some of the largest orders that have been placed here since the beginning of the war; and over the news are headlines telling that "huge orders for shells require 10,000 workers."

But the real significance of these big new orders is not in the employment they will give 10,000 workers. It is in what they tell of realization in the highest quarters that this war is far from over.

It is something to consider these days, when we are being asked to support the present war loan.

We Have Money To Buy Bonds

The few Canadians who imagine that this nation lacks the money to buy Victory Bonds should look at the latest figures of the Bank of Canada. They show, in brief, that the sale of merchandise in the retail stores of Canada is now breaking all records because people have more money than ever to spend, says The Winnipeg Free Press.

The retail sales index, which averaged 100 between the years 1935-39, stood at 1[illegible] years 1943. Harry Gowan Adds Bar To D.F.C. Award

The announcement on Monday that Squadron Leader Harry Gowan, of Jarvis, won the Bar to the Distinguished Flying Cross, brought a wave of gratification to his many friends back home.

In the October 21st issue of The Record it was a great privilege to announce that he had been awarded the D.F.C., and now this further honour we are equally certain is as justly merited.

During the past few months, Squadron Leader Gowan has been on instructional duty overseas. Prior to that time he carried out 45 operational flights over enemy territory. When he was awarded the D.F.C. the citation which accompanied it was as follows: "As Captain and Pilot this Officer has participated in very many sorties, including attacks on Berlin, Dusseldorf, Cologne and Hamburg. On one occasion, when attacking the latter City, in July 1943, his aircraft was badly damaged by anti-aircraft fire. Despite this, Squadron Leader Gowan successfully completed his attack, and afterward flew the damaged bomber to base. This Officer has set a high example of skill and resolution."

ALLIED LEADER

The name of General Montgomery became a household word after he flew to Egypt in August 1942, and within a few hours took up his headquarters on the Alamein front. In the early part of the war he was in France and "through Dunkirk." Now as General Eisenhower's right hand man the eyes of the peoples of the Allied Nations are upon him, because he will have a big part to play in the coming invasion of the Nazi Fortress of Europe. He is seen here recording a message through the B.B.C.

L.A.C. W. E. MACHELL

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Machell of Jarvis, who is serving with the R.C.A.F. and is now stationed at Scoutoue, N.B. Enlisting in January, 1943, he has trained at Galt, St. Thomas, Dorval, Quebec, Goose Bay, Labrador and now at Scoudouc.

Softball Meeting

Anyone interested in playing softball in league in which Jarvis has entered a team, please be at a meeting in the Jarvis Record Office on Friday Evening, March 26th.

RETURNED SOLDIER EXPRESSES GRATITUDE

On Sunday Mrs. M. E. Butcher had an unexpected pleasure when Mr. Gordon Mitchell, of Brantford, who recently was honorably discharged and returned to Canada, called at her home to thank her for socks which he had received while in England.

Mrs. Butcher has knitted a large number of socks, etc., for the armed forces and on each article she puts her name and address. Mr. Mitchell was the recipient of one pair of these socks while in England, and although he did not know Mrs. Butcher previously, called on her on Sunday to offer his sincere thanks.

"Words would not express the appreciation they had for all these articles," was his statement to Mrs. Butcher.

County Is Planning Post. War Program

With the end of debenture indebtedness in sight, the Finance Committee of the Haldimand County Council, is laying plans for the setting aside of funds for Post War activities.

Last year the County body set up a post war fund of $25,000.00 and in a preliminary report to the Council at the session held last week, the Finance Committee indicated their intention of increasing the amount this year to $50,000.00. Chairman, Gordon Cameron, of Dunnville, pointed out that the committee could do this without any increase in the rate, due to the reduction this year in debenture payments, coupled with the surplus carried over from 1942.

An alternative to the suggested policy of building up a post war reserve, would be a drastic reduction in the present tax rate. It seems to be the general opinion that it would be advisable to look to the future now. Haldimand County has been struggling under a heavy debenture debt for several years, and very few ratepayers are anxious to see that situation develop again.

Soldier Expresses Thanks For Good Things From Home

May I come in? Hello, you the sponsors of the Jarvis Cigarette Fund. The kind ladies of the Women's Institute of Sandusk also to you, the Editor of the Jarvis Record, which I have received quite regular lately. We don't get much time for reading anyones, but I always manage to grab myself a couple of moments to catch up on the news from home. It seems a long time since I last saw the place and I don't mind admitting feel homesick for the place once in awhile.

Thanks a million for the 1300 cigarettes just received from 'The Fund' You of the fund are doing a lot toward giving a "browned off soldier" a lift out of a tight spot. Browned off only because I missed the boat for the other side. Only for that I could say thanks for the smokes of three or four months back. As yet I haven't heard of them. More than likely the boys down below "Italy" enjoyed them as much as I would have but I imagine they don't have time to drop a line or two.

To the people of the Womens Institute of Sandusk, I have better news. Let me inclose a portion of the letter received from "The Bull," Sgt. Mike O'Donnell. He being the person to whom your parcel was turned over too. I'd love to send the whole letter, but censorship won't permit.

"Sorry you aren't here to see how lucky you are to receive a parcel from home. "Mac" and "K.L." were the only ones to receive mail intact, the rest that did receive any was badly broken up. We won't have nearly as good a time as we did last Christmas but I guess will have to make the best of it. I'd like to write the people of your home town and say thanks, but you know how it is "Chappy." I'd like very much if you would do the honors for us all by writing home and telling the grand ladies of Sandusk just how we all feel about the whole thing. We are all hoping you'll make it back to this unit.

As ever,

"MIKE"

So may I say I greatly appreciate your marvellous Christmas parcel and to get a letter of comment from "The Bull" is a true way of saying how much good your work is doing. If I remember right, I've only heard him say two - three now, good things since I've known him. Once when a flying cable nissed him by inches; once when he knew the unit was going overseas and now when he received your parcel.

Now may I say thanks once again to you all from us all.

I remain,

MARY CULLEN BROWN

After a very brief illness, Mary Cullen, beloved wife of Neal Brown, passed away at her home in the Village on Thursday, May 18th last, in her 75th year.

Deceased was the eldest daughter of the late James Cullen and Christina Weir, and was born in the Township of Walpole on the farm now owned by W. E. Doughty. She received her education at S.S. No. 17, and in 1901 she married Neal Brown of the Township of Woolhouse, where they farmed until moving to Jarvis some few years ago.

Mrs. Brown took a deep interest in all community enterprises, more particularly in the activities of Knox Presbyterian Church where she had been a devoted member of over a half century.

She leaves to mourn her sudden passing besides her husband, two sons, John Brown, of Jarvis and James Brown on the old homestead in Woolhouse Township, also three grandchildren. She was predeceased by three sisters and her parents.

The funeral on Saturday, May 20, was very largely attended, the services at the home and graveside being conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. H. Fuller.

The pall bearers were: Frank Mitchell, W. R. Hodges, Roger M. Dennis, Richard T. Shaver, R. R. Telford and J. Alex. Duncan.

The floral tributes were carried to the graveside by Russell Miller, Clarence Swing, Robert Dougherty, Leslie Dick, Alfred Walker and Wallace Mitchell.

RACHEL DUNBAR FALLOON

On Saturday, May 20th, after an illness of some duration, Rachel Dunbar, wife of George Falloon, passed away at her home in the Township of Woodhouse, in her Sixty-fifth year.

Deceased was born in the Township of Woodhouse, in 1880, a daughter of the late James Dunbar and Sarah Richardson, pioneer residents of the Township.

She was very quiet and unassuming, but was held in very high esteem in the community in which she had spent her entire life, her only service was to her church and lodge, being a sincere and devoted member of the Anglican communion of Christ Church, Nanticoke, the Woman's Auxiliary, and the Loyal Orange Benevolent Association of Black Creek Lodge.

She leaves surviving besides her husband, one brother, Thomas Dunbar, of Woodhouse, and five sisters, Mrs. Ella Murphy and Mrs. Percy L. Kindree of Port Dover, Mrs. Frank S. Robb of Troy, Mrs. Sadie Clysdale of Woodhouse and Mrs. Arnold Roberts of Springvale.

The funeral was held on Tuesday, May 23rd, the services being in charge of the Rev. R. H. Brett, of Jarvis a former Rector of the Church at Nanticoke. Interment was made in the Port Dover Cemetery.

The pallbearers were: Bruce Ball, Roy Misner, William McNeilly, Ainsley Evans, Lorne Belbeck and Thos. Richardson.

Prime Minister King Returns To Ottawa

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has returned from London and the Commonwealth premiers' conference and he told parliament: "I feel more reassured than I have felt at any time as to the certainty of victory."

With the reassuring note, however, he also gave another warning that he felt more deeply than ever "the struggle is going to be very much greater and more difficult than any of us begin to comprehend."

Concerning the conference itself, Mr. King said the gathering was successful in representing unity of purpose, feeling and action. He said it also succeeded in representing in a symbolic way the complete unity of the British Commonwealth of Nations and its high purpose.

Welcomed back to the House of Commons by members of all parties, he said he was "never more proud to be a Canadian than I am at this hour and I was never more proud to be a citizen of the British Commonwealth."

Tax Payments May Be Made At Bank Or Office Of Treasurer

The semi-yearly method of tax collection, adopted this year for the first time in the Village of Jarvis, apparently meets with the approval of a good many citizens. A report early this week, with more than ten days to go, before the due date of the first instalment, indicated that nearly fifty percent of this instalment had been paid.

The first instalment is due on May 30, and after this date if the first instalment remains unpaid, four percent will be charged. Providing the second instalment is paid with the first instalment a discount of 2 percent will be allowed on the second instalment, and it appears likely that many will take advantage of this discount.

As a convenience to the ratepayers arrangements have been made where by their taxes may be paid at The Canadian Bank of Commerce, or at the Office of the Treasurer, Mr. I. W. Holmes. Mr. W. J. Fallis, who served as Assessor and Collector for many years, was forced to retire this year on account of his health, and therefore tax payments should not be made to Mr. Fallis tais year.

South Carolina Fish Story

Our old friend, Fred Archibald, who many will remember, as a former principal of the Jarvis Continuation School, renewed his subscription to the Record this week, made a much appreciated contribution to our Cigarette Fund, and requested a report on the biggest fish caught in the area lately, and did a little bragging about the size of the watermelons grown in the area of his present home at Summerville, South Carolina.

Fred Archibald always had a yen for a shady spot along the creek as soon as the balmy spring breezes began to blow and never turned down an opportunity for a day's outing at Long Point or off the shores from Nanticoke. But those were the days when the late E. T. Carter and I. J. Leatherdale, as well as Bill Hodges, Geo. L. Miller and John Emerson Kindree regularly indulged in the pastime and the stories of the big ones that got away, really had some depth.

But those days are gone — possibly forever. There have been no fish ing expeditions in recent years, and the only fish story we can report is about the one the Editor caught at Jaque's creek a couple of days ago, that got away. Much more could be said about this fish that got away if it corresponded with the last paragraph in the letter from South Carolina, which was as follows: "Tell Emerson that I will send him the dimensions of a record watermelon from this locality if they will let me put my ladder up to it." But, we would call that South Carolina Bragging, and will hold to that opinion until a sample is delivered to Jarvis, freight prepaid.

Interior walls, especially in kitchens and in rooms with fire places, are likely to acquire a greasy or sooty film which should be removed before repainting if a good paint job is expected. Otherwise, the new paint can't adhere and the paint job won't last.
