ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: A few years ago you wrote that a father can be jealous of any young man his daughter dates. I wonder whether that can be the reason my husband is dead set against our daughter's romance? I can find no other basis for his antipathy. The boy is a fine lad she has known two years. He has been supporting an unmarried sister, but she will marry the first of the year and then he and our girl want to go ahead. I am all for it.

"My husband's attitude is upsetting us all. He gives no reason that we can accept. Lately he has grown openly opposed, and almost insults the boy. He has threatened our daughter he may refuse to let her date him at all!

"She is a grand girl, mature and responsible. She and her father have always been devoted, but now she is defying him and declares if the lad can't come here she will meet him somewhere else. I can't blame her, either. Even if they should elope, I would feel it is her father's fault.

"He has always been so proud of her! Today they scarcely speak, and he is depressed and very miserable. How can he expect she can keep on loving him when he is at odds with her future husband? —

TROUBLED MOTHER"

* It does happen that occasionally a father is so jealous of his daughter that he violently rejects the idea of her falling in love with any man. He refuses to admit this even to himself, but the sense of guilt grows upon him. Most fathers expect their daughters to marry, and only hope she will find a young man worthy of her.

Your husband must begin to think of her happiness instead of his loss when she marries. To deny a woman's right to love antagonizes her so completely that for years ahead she may not be able to love him wholeheartedly again.

* He should be reminded that in your state the girl could have married a year ago without his consent if she had been so inclined. How can he cloud her engagement period with such cruel reprisals? She has been loyal enough to want his blessing on her wedding day. How can he in all decency refuse it? Cheer her with hope for the future. The young man cannot marry immediately, and the two are content to wait for the happy day.

* Use all your influence to persuade your husband to withdraw his senseless opposition to their continuing to see each other. That is ill-timed, and has aroused her defiance. At least the knowledge of your moral support will draw her closer to you, and perhaps for your sake she will not do anything foolish.

MOTHER OPPOSES BEAU

"Dear Anne Hirst: You advised two friends of mine on their problems, and that encourages me to ask your help for myself. . . . At a friend's house four months ago I met a nice boy whom I really fell for. But my mother has learned that he drinks, and has forbidden me to see him at all. I am heartbroken. I have met him secretly, though and I don't like the idea.

"He has always been sweet to me, and never misbehaved in any way. He has asked me to marry him, but I can't do that without Mom's consent as I am only 16. His family all like me, and approve of our getting married when he can afford to. I do love him, but I don't see any way out. Do you?

SAD GIRL"

A boy who drinks is not fit to date a nice girl. Your mother has done the only thing she could in the circumstances, and you will have to obey her to the letter or you may find yourself in grave trouble.

Tell the lad you cannot see him again until he has learned to control his weakness and can win your mother's approval. If he sincerely cares for you he will conduct himself like a gentleman, give up his drinking, and in other ways prove he is worthy of your love and your faith. It may take quite a while, but he can do all of this — if he will.

UNPERTURBED—Looking as cool as the wax dummy she is, this mannequin maintains her royal dignity as an unexpected visitor smashes into her display window home. Warren Walker accidentally knocked the automatic transmission of his car into "drive" as he leaned over to put some letters into a curbside mailbox. And "drive" the car did, right into the store window. Walker sufferad shock and lacerations of the left arm.

SIGN OF THE TIMES—Richard A. Borel is right with the times as his Ohio license plate F-1-U proves. Borel says it was sheer accident that he was issued the plates, but the garage attendant, left, where Borel parks his car, goes along with the gag and uses his handkerchief to ward off any flu bugs. Special letters on auto plates have been available to Ohio motorists for several years.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Last week came to an end with plenty of heat, humidity and a bad electrical storm lasting most of Saturday night. It rained so fast and made such a noise I couldn't hear the sump pump working. I had visions of the water backing up and flooding the basement. But I didn't get up to see! Partner, of course, was sleeping soundly —he always says why worry about a storm, you can't stop it. That is very true but somehow it isn't much comfort if you're lying awake listening to it. Today, thank goodness, the weather is bright and cool, just the kind of day I like—and good weather to catch up on odd jobs that have been waiting for just such a time. Not that I wasted much time last week, what with canning, "jelling", knitting and making pillow-cases for our new hospital . . . and spending money. Ah yes, and thereby hangs a tale—on account of which Partner says I make him mad!

It's like this—one way and another I do a lot of sewing and several times Partner has suggested that I get myself an electric sewing machine. But I always said I didn't need it, that the machine I had still did a good job. Besides that it has a sentimental value. When we first came to Canada—that was in 1919—we settled on the Saskatchewan prairie. We had very little money, certainly not much to set up house with, and a baby on the way. Besides that there were cows and hens to buy before we could start making a living. There were many things we had to do without, and I didn't mind. But there was one thing I was determined to have and that was a sewing machine. Partner was quite willing because he knew I would make good use of it. So we went shopping for a machine—contrary to the advice of prairie farmer-friends with whom we were staying. What we bought was a table model machine. Electric? Oh my, no! This was a hand model type but made by a well-known company. It cost us $38. That was a terrific outlay. But I was as happy as could be. My machine did a wonderful job even if I did have to crank it by hand.

The years passed . . . we moved to Ginger Farm in Ontario . . . and at some time I was given an old treadle machine. The head wasn't as good as my hand model. But one day I had a brain-wave. I took off the hand-gear, wittled out the well on the old stand, got a belt and fitted my own machine on to the treadle stand. It worked like a charm and for years did all kinds of sewing for our own family, for the W.I. and the Red Cross. Ten years ago I had a little motor put on it. I was really in the luxury class and my machine continued to do good work. So, every time Partner suggested a new machine I came up with some excuse for not getting it. But of late I have begun to weaken. New machines, with backward and forward stitching darners, and button-hole makers are really wonderful. Besides that, they are so compact, taking up little space, whereas my 'old faithful' was so cumbersome the only place for it was down in the basement—and that's where I had to work. o cut a long story short I took advantage of the special Exhibition offer and a had a new console electric sewing machine sent here. Old Faithful? Well, I still have it. I am thinking of lending it to a friend of mine rather than sell it or give it away. And why was Partner mad? Because he said, except for my own stubborn-ness, I might just as well have had a new machine years ago.

Well, last week I told you I had another little Women's Institute matter to bring to your attention. It is this: There is a suggestion coming up before the next F.W.I. meeting of the Board of Directors to the effect that no member shall belong to more than one branch at any one time, and that a Life member, moving to another district, may ask to have her membership transferred. Previously a person could belong to a second branch but with voting power only in one. I don't think the question of life membership had ever been raised. Now there must be many members like myself — removed to another district and wishing to continue working with the W.I. I am a charter member of one branch and seven years ago I was made a life member—an honour that I treasure greatly. I should feel like a traitor if I transferred my life membership to another branch. Personally, I would like that membership to remain as it is but I would also like the privilege of belonging to a branch in the district where we now live, even if voting power and taking office be confined to that one branch. This is something for W.I. members to think about—and give an opinion, before a change is made which might later be regretted.

Modern Etiquette . . .
by Roberta Lee

Q. Is it proper to say "Yes?" instead of "Hello," when answering the telephone?

A. Although "Hello" is the more widely accepted manner of answering the telephone, there's nothing wrong with saying "YES?" The most important thing is a pleasant, friendly voice.

Q. Would it be proper when leaving a hospital to tip a trained nurse who has been unusually kind and efficient?

A. It is better not to do this. Nurses belong to the professional class and might resent this. A nice gift, however, is in good taste.

Q. May candles be used on the dinner table, even if they are not to be lighted?

A. Yes; candles are always correct on the dinner or supper table.

Q. Is it ever proper for a lady to assist a gentleman on with his coat?

A. Only if he is very old, feeble, or crippled. Otherwise, no.

Q. If a girl has no parents and she has no means of giving a party to announce her engagement, how can she make the announcement?

A. Her best way to do this is through the society-news page of her local newspaper.

Q. Is it improper to blow spoonful of soup or coffee before taking it into the mouth?

A. Not if the blowing is done very gently and inconspicuously. Refrain from "blowing up a storm."

Q. What is the best possible acknowledgment to an invitation?

A. Just plain "How do you do" will suffice in almost any situation. And, of course, this should always be accompanied by a smile.

Q. How are invitations to a bridal shower issued?

A. Since these are informal affairs, the invitations may be made by telephone, note, card or even in person.

SAVOURY MEAT TURNOVERS

2 tablespoons MAZOLA Salad Oil
1 teaspoon minced onion
½ pound raw minced meat
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons BENSON'S or CANADA Corn Starch
1 cup canned tomatoes
3 tablespoons chopped pickle
1 recipe pastry

HEAT MAZOLA Salad Oil in skillet; add onion and brown lightly.
MIX in meat, salt and pepper.
COOK, stirring frequently, until meat is lightly browned.
REMOVE from heat; stir in BENSON'S or CANADA Corn Starch mixing well.
ADD tomatoes gradually; stir in chopped pickle.
COOK over low heat, stirring constantly, until well thickened, then remove from heat.
PREPARE pastry and roll ⅛ inch thick; cut into 6 rounds.
PLACE ¼ cup meat mixture on one half of each round.
FOLD rounds in half and press edges together with fork.
MAKE several slits in top to allow steam to escape.
PLACE on baking sheet and bake in hot oven (425°F.) for 20 minutes.
SERVE hot with horseradish sauce, if desired.
YIELD: 6 servings.

Cat Crook-Catcher

Hundreds of cats have been snatched by gangs and sold to hospitals for experiments recently in England. And in Middlesbrough, not long ago, police found that cats were being killed by boys who used the skins to make themselves Davy Crockett caps.

But cats are not always the innocent victims of human cruelty. A few years ago it was found that cats imported into Australia to deal with a rat plague had gone wild and were attacking people.

Many cats, however, are good, law-abiding anduseful, like the pet of of St. Mary's Hospital who showed himself to be the subject of an experiment when a pathologist was trying to identify a rare poison found in the remains of Mrs. Crippen. Having helped to identify the drug, the cat recovered and lived to a ripe old age, rejoicing in the name of Tippins.

Mandy, a Siamese cat who lived at Ealing, couldn't sleep at night. A year or two ago, a gang tried to break into her master's shop, and Mandy, sitting up with ears cocked, wondered why the downstairs didn't raise the alarm. Eventually Mandy decided it was up to her, so she went and snatched on her master's bedroom door till he woke up. Going downstairs, he found a window smashed, and gave the alarm. The crooks were caught.

Paint Works Miracles In Hall

The front hallway is the hallmark of the house and should let people cheerfully. Unfortunately, it is usually the most gloomy spot in the home because it seldom receives a ray of sunshine.

Suggestions for injecting a cheery "hello" into the most dismal entrance hall are offered by W. D Sinclair, color consultant.

Paint can work miracles, providing the colors are right. The color of the hall walls should be light and sunny but it must also harmonize with the colors in the rooms opening into it. Primrose yellow is a good choice, since yellow is on speaking terms with most other colors, says Mr. Sinclair.

If the hall is a long narrow tunnel, square it up by painting the end walls a darker color—a medium blue, for instance. Dark colors tend to pull walls in; light colors make them take a step back, visually changing the shape of a room.

Especially in an old house, the ceiling often seems far too high for the size of a narrow hall. Mr. Sinclair suggests using the darker color trick to pull the ceiling down. Another effective measure is to dispense with the ceiling light and, instead, use a lamp placed low on a table. Finally, every room needs a centre of interest, even an entrance hall. A painting on the wall opposite the door draws attention into the house. A softly-shaded lamp suggests warmth and welcome. When the front door is opened, even the passerby should feel "Here is a pleasant house to live in!"

Minnow-Keeper

A little know secret of transporting minnows for long distances is to carry them in an airtight container. A milk can with tight cover is ideal for carrying large numbers. One or two gallon, wide-mouthed glass jars are ideal for carrying smaller numbers. Place fresh water in the container—contrary to the advice of prairie farmer-friends with whom we were staying. What we bought was a table model machine. Electric? Oh my, no! This was a hand model type but made by a well-known company. It cost us $38. That was a terrific outlay. But I was as happy as could be. A Visit With Canada's New Pioneers

SCHOOL BAND — LYNN LAKE, MANITOBA

By H. R. CALVERT

The wild west was tamed at the turn of the century. The adventurers and pioneers who made the Klondike blaze with golden stories have long since died away. There is a new breed of pioneer now. These people are steadily pushing the known boundaries of Canada ever wider and in them the spirit of adventure still lives.

Most Canadians hug the southern boundary of their country and cities such as Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver contain the bulk of the country's population; thousands and thousands of people talk with pride of Canada's rapidly growing mining industry but not many of them have had the opportunity i have of taking a look at this industry "in the flesh"—or at least one small segment of it.

In August of this year I left Winnipeg and flew north and west to the town of Lynn Lake, Manitoba, where Sherritt Gordon Mines Limited are located, and spent one of the most pleasant weeks of my life in this community with people who are a part of the mining industry. These people are undoubtedly Canada's pioneers of today and they are also, undoubtedly, the most highly-paid pioneers since the dawn of history.

When I left Toronto to visit Lynn Lake on August 5th it was with no foreknowledge of what I might find. Perhaps I can be pardoned for thinking, because it is a common misimpression—that a typical mining town is made up of a group of hard-drinking, hard-gambling social misfits eking out a bare existence in a community of shacks, no recreational or social activity. It was with some concern over how I might fit in that I boarded C.P.A. at Winnipeg. The aircraft stops respectively at Dauphin, The Pas and Flin Flon before its last leg to Lynn Lake. It was interesting to note the change taking place on the terrain below us—flat, rich, fertile farm lands gradually becoming more lake-dotted and heavily treed—and finally no cultivation at all, just mile after mile of rivers, lakes and muskeg, from the air seemingly impassable.

Some five hours after leaving Winnipeg, we circled the town of Lynn Lake which, even from above, looked clean and well-planned; a wide main street, homes painted and modern, the Sherrit Gordon Mine buildings compact, efficient looking, on an elevated area east of the townsite. Perhaps a sixth sense told me—perhaps my memory is faulty, but I seem to recall that suddenly I was no longer concerned—that I said to myself "I'll like this town and I'll like the people"—and I do.

I was rather surprised at the number of motor vehicles at the airport, including four taxicabs. I learned later that, despite the fact that there are only thirty-odd miles of road, there are two hundred and fifty-four automobiles and trucks on the townsite, two hundred and twenty-five of which are privately-owned.

A short taxi ride of one mile on a sand and gravel road cut through stunted pine and evergreen brought us to an attractive two-storey hotel. Popular Manager Bob McKay welcomed me aboard in refreshing old-time greeter's style, and showed me to a large, bright, clean, well-furnished room with bath overlooking the main street.

After a good, inexpensive dinner in the hotel restaurant I wandered down to the theatre. Mrs. Patterson, whose husband is the manager, said — "We run two shows nightly, seven to nine p.m., six days a week, summer and winter. Summer attendance is not too good because our summers in Lynn Lake are short and people like to take advantage of the good weather. However, our theater is well patronized during the winter and we try to provide good entertainment." The theater is a credit to the town — four hundred comfortable seats and featuring a wide-vision screen. It was built by Calvert Construction Company and personable Bill Calvert commented, with pardonable pride, "This was a hurry-up job; the first show was presented to the public less than two months from the day we started construction."

Lynn Lake is under a Local District form of Government with C. R. Neely the Administrator and S. G. Gudgeon his Assistant. Mr. Gudgeon, in Mr. Neely's absence, was most cooperative in supplying information pertinent to this article. The Local Government District of Lynn Lake covers roughly four hundred square miles centered by the townsite. Annual budgets are prepared and submitted to the Provincial Government. Money is raised partially by taxation, but Sherritt Gordon Mines Limited provide the bulk of the money required to run the community. To quote Mr. Gudgeon, "Hundreds of thousands of dollars were and are being spent by Sherritt Gordon free of charge to the municipality. Our town planning scheme is such as to require and assure a high standard of homes and commercial buildings. You have doubtless seen that many new modern homes are under construction. Certain areas are classified as 'residential' districts' and others as 'business or commercial districts'; note this new subdivision of 101 lots now being cleared for future homes." Even a cursory examination of the impressive 21-page planning scheme made it obvious that much thought had been given to expansion and standard of structures, and this foresight is paying dividends as is evidenced by the fact that the population increase since 1952 has been over two hundred per year from an original 507 to the present figure of 1,674.

One of the most impressive buildings in town is the post office. Mrs. Rachael Wolfenden, assistant postmistress, cheerfully and with obvious community pride, suggested I might like to attend the Lion's Club Bingo in the Community Club Skating Rink. "Have you heard about the school band? Have you been out to the Government park at Zed Lake? Do you like fishing? Perhaps Wally Kuby would take you out for a crack at lake trout. Have you heard about the local drama club? Have you met Father Lapalme, a camera enthusiast and the man responsible the formation of the Thirty-Five Millimeter Club? Do you know the Legion is erecting a $36,000.00 building? Have you read the latest issue of the Lynn Lake Lyre, a monthly publication as a Community Club project under the editorship of Tom Johnson?" Well, I thought, this town is really alive!

(Ed. Note: Mr. Calvert's story will be continued in our next issue.)

How Can I?
By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I relieve the pain of burns?

A. Try applying the white of an egg.

Q. How can I prevent yellowing of white silk?

A. When laundering, dissolve a teaspoon of powdered borax in enough cold water to cover the article that is to be washed and let it soak for about an hour. Wash in tepid water and white suds, and the silk will not turn yellow.

Q. How can I stiffen egg whites quickly?

A. When beating the whites of eggs, break them into a plate that has been rinsed with cold water, but not dried. Add a pinch of salt. While whipping, stand by a window or an open door.

Q. How can I make a good starch?

A. By putting three tablespoons of wheat starch in ½-cup cold water; put this in one quart of boiling water and cook for 10 minutes. Add a half-teaspoon of lard to make the starch smooth, and then strain through cheesecloth and use while hot.

Q. How can I remove rust from irons?

A. By putting some yellow beeswax or paraffin into a small cloth bag, and when the iron is warm, but not hot, rubbing it over this bag, and then rubbing with salt.

Q. How can I remove a fish bone caught in the throat?

A. One of the best ways is to swallow a raw egg. This seldom fails to carry the bone down with it.

Q. How can I keep cheese fresh for a long time?

A. Cover it with a thin coating of paraffin. Before serving remove the paraffin.
