Tourists In Sanfrancisco

— By A. L. M. —

Newspaper space limitations cut my digest of San Francisco excerpts last week at the Golden Gate Bridge. In this submission I complete the tour started last week round this fascinating city, moving on to other experiences.

After leaving the Presidio we went through another Military Reserve to Fort Miley. This too, was, no doubt established for protective purposes years ago. A short distance from Fort Miley is the well known "Seal Rock" at the base of Stro Hills. Seal Rocks are plainly visible from this point, but there were no seals sunning themselves for our benefit. Rather, the gulls were in possession of the seal's paradise. The "Cliff House" there is a magnificent view of the majestic Pacific Ocean and beach area. Here too is Sutro Museum with hundreds of pictures depicting the history of the San Francisco area. It also contains an artificial ice rink and skating instruction was being given while we were there. Also, rather fascinating to the many musical instruments of days gone by, all mechanically play for a nominal sum, the music of the particular era in which they were popular.

The "Cliff House" we travelled to the Golden Gate Park. It is the San Francisco's most famous show places and one of the largest and most beautiful parks in the entire world. It has an area of 1,013 acres created from sand waste by one John MacLaren, to whom the job was given by the San Francisco Parks Commission in 1887. The park contains over 5,000 different shrubs and plants and innumerable attractions such as museums, animal paddocks, aquarium, academy of sciences, conservatory, music concourse, etc. But to us, perhaps, the most interesting feature of the park was the Japanese Garden. This garden was developed by the Japanese and was presented to the city by the Japanese Government in 1952. It was a refreshing interlude to stroll through this area and to stop, of course, for a few moments at the quaint souvenir shop and tea garden restaurant. We might just say that very few souvenir shops escape the notice of our better half.

Can there be any more to see. There is. This turns out to be a panoramic view of the entire city from the vantage point of "Twin Peaks". Twin Peaks are located actually in the centre of the city. We wind our way up to the first peak which has an elevation of 910 feet. From this point one can see the entire City. And, in reaching this elevation, we should record our thankfulness that we were in the capable hands of a good driver. The second peak has an elevation of 904 feet and from this point we wind our way back down to the City and homeward. This entire trip was simply thrilling. But gracious sakes, we can't call it a day yet. It's only 6. P.M. and Mary Sheehan is due at the apartment for cocktails. Fun ny, but in San Francisco, it seems, one always serves cocktails before dinner, and, tonight, we're going to have dinner at Trader Vic's an eatery of considerable renown.

Mary is her usual jovial self and, as we sip tomato juice cocktails, shares with us the delights of the tour during the afternoon. Mary, we suspect, has a public relations contract with the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, because she, like ourselves, is enraptured by this City. She is anticipating too, being guided around this city next week by Earl Finbury, late of Toronto's Canadian Exhibition grounds, who has been found work and awaiting them with of-Friday dinners.

Finbury had been asked Toronto Junior Board of Trade certain the visitors for Sunday, he took away their sailors and 500 hosts who spent the day cats, but to we old timers Earl Himes and Muggsy Spanier were names to be reckoned with in the field of jazz. While the atmosphere of the Club Hangover was well exemplified by the name, it did not dectract too much from the music that had gone there to hear. Muggsy's lip is as tricky as ever and Himes piano resounded with the beat that seems to be inimitable with members of his race. We're glad we visited the Club Hangover, even though we didn't have one.

That's all for to-day. To-morrow we're to visit the Canadian Consulate and later go dancing to the music of the once well known bandleader Anson Weeks. We're looking forward to to-morrow.

LABOUR DAY

Early Friday evening, thousands of Canadians will be jamming the highways and transportation service in a frantic rush to cottages and other resorts where they can escape from the weariness of their "job routine." They will engage in many kinds of activity, fishing, swimming, boating, in fact anything that will enable them to escape the dullness and drudgery of their daily work.

The Labour Day holiday, unlike many of our other holidays, does not commemorate any particular event in our national or religious life, but recognizes the importance of our work and the duties and privileges of the worker. It is fitting therefore, that we should spend some part of the holiday in quiet reflection upon these things, and to this end, we keep not only the holiday, but also set aside a special day in our church calendar, called Labour Sunday. On this day, we seek to relate the christian faith to man's daily work and to visualize that work as part of a universal and divine project; to recall that from the beginning man has been divinely appointed to "replenish the earth and subdue it" (Genesis 2:15).

Some years ago, a lady was standing in front of the Cathedral at Cologne, when a voice behind her said, "Didn't we do a fine piece of work?" Turning to see who had spoken, the woman saw a man dressed in overalls. "And pray, what did you do about it?" she asked. "For two years I mixed mortar across the street," was the man's reply. The Cathedral at Cologne would never have been completed without the work of the mortar-mixer. He was a man accustomed to hard and irksome work, yet wise enough to see that his task was important to the building of the Cathedral. All too few people to-day see their daily work in the light of a larger purpose.

In many of our schools, vocational guidance has become an important part of the curriculum, but far too many still think of their daily work as a 'Job'. The word 'Job' comes from an early English word meaning 'lump'. A job then, is a shapeless, pointless, meaningless task that is set before us and we are required to undertake. Indeed, for many, work is just a way of earning a living, paying the bills and securing some of the luxuries of life.

How can we escape then from the meaningless of our employment? Our escape lies only in a new understanding of our place in the Divine plan of life. A clear comprehension of the will of God and a closer fellowship with Him, who creates us for His own glory and to be co-workers with Him in the world He has made. When a man understands that God has created him and called him to a particular work in the total life of the world, then he sees how he is responsible for others and how his work and action influence their lives. When we view our work in the light of God's intention to "subdue all things unto Himself", then the lowly and sometimes menial tasks that fall to us are invested with new meaning and eternal purpose.

EDWARDS PITCHES NO-HITTER AGAINST PRESTON

John Edwards picked up his second no-hitter in Preston on Monday night when Jarvis downed Preston 7—0. Four Preston batters reached first base and two got as far as second where they were stopped cold Reekie spaced a ball labelled "hit" in the ninth inning in a quick backhand movement that brought cheers of appraisal from the crowd and saved the no-hitter. Edwards struck out 20 batters and walked two. Two strike-outs were registered against Jarvis batters.

Also in the hitting department, Edwards was tops with a home run, a triple and two doubles. Clark and Hazlett got a double each and two singles. Bob Nixon connected for two singles.

Jarvis	0	1	1	0	0	0	1	4	0	7	15	1

The second game was played after press time on Wednesday night.

After Preston (ve hope) Jarvis is expecting to meet Coberg. Jim "Sleepy" Dawe, who pitched for Agincourt six years ago when Edwards first came to Jarvis, is pitching for Coberg. This series will begin the 16th of this month and should prove very interesting, after Preston.

ON THE FARM FRONT

Brief Notes for the Busy Farmer

By Haldimand Harry

In spite of heavy exports of live cattle to the U.S. during the past several months the cattle population showed a slight increase as reported in the June 1st survey. There should therefore be no fear of the "seed stock" being depleted in Canada. Cows kept mainly for beef purposes increased by 80,000 head or 4 per cent. All but 4,000 head of that increase was in Western Canada. The total number of cattle on Canadian farms on June 1st is reported to be a trifle over 11 million head.

-oOo-

Not so many years ago Canadians were doing very well to consume the equivalent of 90,000 hogs per week. During the month of June of this year the average weekly disappearance of pork in Canada was running at the high figure of 128,400 hogs and up by 21 per cent from the same month a year ago. However, there was a decrease in the consumption of beef amounting to about 3,000 head per week. Pork consumption was up 35 per cent for the first six months of the year while beef was down by 6 per cent during the same period.

-oOo-

It is now recommended that cows be kept off the alfalfa fields during the month of September if you do not wish to do the crop serious harm. In other words it will be a good idea to save the all-grass pasture for September wherever possible. The reason for this is that the alfalfa plants are storing food and energy in the roots during this period and since the leaves or upper part of the plant is the source of this food and energy they should be saved for that purpose. This is the time when the buds for next year's growth are being formed at the crown of the plant and serious injury can result from tramping and pasturing at this particular season of the year.

-oOo-

The second quarter of the Farm Accident Survey was completed on September 1st and reports are being received by the local office of the Department of Agriculture. During the first quarter covering the months of March, April and May there was a total of 1,803 accidents reported in Ontario with an additional 579 reports dealing with wind damage. In the case of injuries there were 1,321 people across the province who were involved with 62 fatalities, 44 with permanent injuries and 1,215 whose injuries were temporary. The average medical bill was $66.00.

-oOo-

One-third of the fatal accidents were in traffic accidents and most of these were on Provincial Highways. Property damage of almost 1½ million dollars was caused by the farm accidents in Ontario during the first three months of the survey. Almost one-quarter of the fatal accidents involved children 10 years of age and under. A total of 16,629 man work days were lost by farm folk during this period because of accidents. One-quarter of the accidents were the result of falls or stumbles.

-oOo-

Are you thinking of planting any forest trees next spring? If you are, now is the time to place your order. The forms can be obtained from your agricultural representative or from the Zone Forester. Orders are accepted in the order in which they are received and where there are any shortages it is the early order that will be filled. It should be kept in mind that such trees are for windbreaks, shelterbelts and for reforesting purposes. They are not available for landscaping. Prices are $10.00 per thousand for all available varieties with the exception of Scotch Pine which is $14.00 per thousand.

-oOo-

The application of agricultural lime is still an important operation for the soils of Haldimand County. The months of August and September are important ones from the standpoint of getting this material on the land. At this season of the year the fields are firm and dry and the heavy trucks can get across them. Most farmers these days buy lime on a spread basis and this job is done by the special truck. Incidentally have you had your fields tested. It would be a good idea to have this done before applying any lime or fertilizer either. It is poor economy to apply lime if it is not needed. Furthermore it is not at all wise to apply fertilizer without knowing the analysis needed and the amount that should be applied.
