

A Modern Maiden.
When fair Aurora calls the dawn
The golden day to wash
And robbins on the verdant lawn
The early worms do rake in
And Sol begins to light the skies
And stirs the heaving pillow
My lady in her chamber lies
Asleep upon her pillow.
Oh, beautiful sight! A cheek so fair
On snowy arms reposing,
And lips just parted, rosebuds rare,
Two rows of pearls disclosing
The light into her chamber streams
Its bric-a-brac adorning
And she awakens from her dreams
To greet the golden morning.
She springs from bed; how fair is she
All in her maiden glory,
Like Venus rising from the sea,
As told in classic story.
She opens the door, the charming sprite,
And calls her brother Freddy
To tell her the fire is lit
And get the breakfast ready!
When she is dressed she goes downstairs
And gives the cook some orders
Then to the dining-room repairs
To wash the young men's boards
The breakfast over up she springs
And tells her ma and Hannah
To wash the dishes while she sings
And bangs the grand piano.

Fairy Food.
Said my blue-eyed cousin John,
"What do fairies live upon?"
And he looked in eager wise
At me with his bright young eyes.
"Every morning," I said,
"They bake tiny loaves of bread;
Crisper than the golden crust
And their drink is honey sweet
From the honey-suckle bell,
Or the crimson clover bell,
They have berry pie and tart
Flavored with a rose's heart;
And a very favorite thing
Is a slice of beehive wing."
"Pooh!" cried John, "no wonder that Fairies are not big or fat!"

THE MUSIC WAS FLY.

And a Death Scene Was Changed to a Decidedly Lively One.
Last night an entire change of programme was presented. The play was a painful melo-drama with a sad act in it, where a handsome young woman dies a lingering death surrounded by her weeping friends.
In the first act four men are killed, a boiler explosion occurs in the second, and two steamboats have a collision in the third, all of which takes place prior to the death scene. These realistic features, along with the incidental music, must have affected the trombone player's nerves. The invalid commenced to die and forgive cruel wrongs, while the orchestra played a low and mournful strain. A doctor stood by the bedside, watch in hand, counting the pulse beats. Muffled sobs came from the audience and the splash of falling tears could be heard in the gallery.
"She's growing weaker fast," whispered the doctor. "See! the death damp is on her brow. One—two—ah! She's gone."
A deathlike stillness pervaded the house, but suddenly the trombone player pulled the machine wide open and let out a blast that filled the building with a deafening volume of sound, extinguished the footlights, and brought the corpse to its feet in a hurry. The orchestra leader, white with passion, turned on the man with the double-headed horn and hissed: "Why did you do that, you old bald-headed, weak-eyed, palsied remnant of hereditary insanity?"
"A fly lit on my music and I played it for a full note," and the stricken man bowed his head in silent anguish.—Chicago Times.

The Gray Eye.
The best eye to me is the gray eye. And if there is a fleck of the hazel in it, or better yet, a touch of the violet a hue, it is the more effective. The gray eye bespeaks the constant nature. It is the trustful eye, the intelligent eye, the eye that eloquently portrays the responsive, the sympathetic, the loyal character. There is in the expression of the gray eye an indefinable essence or aspect which fascinates and holds the attention and commands the confidence. The steel gray eye is the eye of cruelty. But the soft gray eye, with its pure and expressive look, who does not say that it is beautiful? And who can deny that the violet-gray eye—an eye that is so seldom seen—is not really ravishing?—Master Geoffrey, in the Detroit Free Press.

Although the quality of mercy is not strained, as the bard truly says, still none of us complain about its coming too thick.
"Does the Captain say whether we shall break the record or not?" "Yes. He says that the record or the boiler must go."
"How lovely!"—Munsey's Weekly.

An accident occurred at 6 p.m. on Thursday through the giving way of some part of the running gear of the elevator at the Ontario Wheel Company Works, Gananoque. Four of the employees, who were on the elevator at the time, were seriously injured, and it is thought that in one or two cases the injuries will be fatal. The names of the injured are Thos. Clark, Kingston; F. Black, Cardinal; Johnston and J. Reid, residents. Clark's injuries seem the most serious.
At the meeting of the Parnell Commission yesterday, Mr. Joseph Edward Kenny, M. P., denied that he had introduced Le Caron to Mr. Sexton. He never knew the man. He declared that he would not admit such a man to his house, as he showed by his face that he could not be trusted.
It is estimated that the number of horses and mules employed for street car services in Canada and the United States is, in round numbers, 115,000; 1 being the smallest number owned by any one company, 7,683 the largest and 165 the average. The general average of feed per animal is 26 1/2 pounds, and the average for Kentucky is 45 pounds. The daily consumption of food is approximately 1,600 tons, or 584,000 tons per annum; and the cost of feed per animal varies from 17 to 50 cents per day, according to locality and season of the year.

A NEW CIGAR HORROR.

Elegant Wrappers for Cigars Now Made of Patent Rye Straw Paper.
Among the latest imitations which have been successfully introduced into the tobacco trade of this city and other cities are cigars, the wrappers of which are made out of a specially prepared paper. A gentleman well known in the iron manufacturing circles of this vicinity was the first to inform a reporter that smoking material of this kind was new in the market. He has recently returned from a visit to Norfolk, Va., where he met a drummer for a large tobacco factory of New York State. This gentleman informed the Pittsburgher that he was then introducing an imitation cigar wrapper which was so deceiving in its character that experts could scarcely distinguish it from the genuine. This preparation was made from rye straw, and one portion of the process was to steep the material in a strong solution made from tobacco stems. The grain of the straw, together with the manner in which the material was dressed would lead any person to suppose that it was sample of the leaf used in making wrappers for cigars of a more than ordinary quality. The flavor of tobacco was also present, owing to the paper having been immersed in the solution made from the genuine article. The gentleman subsequently examined cigars on sale in Norfolk and discovered that they were made with these patent wrappers. The samples examined were of an extra fine quality.—Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette.

A RED CURRANT BONNET.

Floral Parasols and Other Items of Dress in London.
"Miss Mantaini," who supplies the Pall Mall Gazette with racy fashion paragraphs, says: There are few trimmed sunshades to be seen this year. The shopkeeper is trying to get rid of a few lace things he had left over from last summer. In Bond street windows there are some delightful floral parasols. The ground of one was of the palest pink, and over it pale pink hyacinths seemed to grow. There was a creamy lace border, with a narrow ruffling of crepe de chine in grass green above it. A lady in mourning could use softer black silk, and a trimmed hat, with bunches of Neapolitan violets. A wreath of violets and leaves forms a narrow border just above the black lace edge. A shopkeeper told me to-day that there was some fear that the demand for artificial flowers would be greater than the supply. "We can't get the more popular flowers quick enough from the warehouse," he said. "We are always short of laburnum and sweet peas." It is uncertain how long flower bonnets will be in vogue. Women will hire perhaps soon of spending twice the ordinary amount on headgear. Another novelty in millinery is a currant bonnet. A wreath of red currants just like those in the kitchen garden is arranged round the brim of the bonnet. The top is covered with leaves, young sprigs and berries not yet ripe. Then there is a very attractive hat with the brim and foundation made of the young twigs of the lilac tree. The top is covered with white lilac.

Last evening about 9.30 three young men named George Nixon, John McIntyre and John Dickson went for a row on the river, at Mount Forest, in a boat which they had made themselves, and in some manner the boat upset and Nixon, who could not swim, was drowned before assistance could reach him. The other two could swim and got out safely, but could not save their companion. The body has not yet been recovered.

As the Vaudreuil freight train, due at Bonaventure station, Montreal, yesterday morning, was one mile this side of St. Anne's under a full head of steam, a man was seen standing bolt upright in the centre of the track, only some dozen yards ahead and apparently staring deliberately at the train as it advanced to his destruction. Before anything could be done to slacken pace he was struck by the cow-catcher and thrown on to the rail, the engine and the wheels of the entire train passing over him, cutting him literally to fragments. The train was promptly brought to a halt and the remains gathered together, when they were identified as those of a tramp, name not ascertained, but who was well known in the vicinity from his habits of walking on the track and his habitual drinking. It is surmised that the man, from his appearance as the train approached, had determined on suicide.

At a barn-raising at the residence of Mr. Bleuett, Southwold, on Thursday afternoon, Jeremiah Donohue, brother of the County Attorney, received probably fatal injuries. He was struck by a falling bent, his left leg broken at the thigh, his right leg injured, his chin crushed, and internal injuries inflicted. The physicians have but slight hope of his recovery.

For some time the domestic relations of Mr. and Mrs. Jonah Madden, Portland, have not been pleasant. The husband being sure that his wife was trying to put him out of the world, swore out a complaint that she had on several occasions attempted to administer poison in his food and medicine. Mrs. Madden was arrested and taken to Brookville jail. She is considered dangerous, having more than once threatened to burn the buildings of some of her neighbors.
A sad drowning accident occurred at Verdun, Que., on Thursday evening. A number of boys were bathing, among them Eddie Loucks, aged 16. A portion of a door was taken from shore and pushed out into the water. Loucks and a companion swam with it about the bathing place. His companion, after some time, let go his hold, but Eddie still kept by it and drifted out into the stream. He was suddenly seen to disappear and then rise and disappear again.

The residence of Mr. Felix Lafond, of Montreal, was, on Friday night last, the scene of an atrocious piece of violence on the part of three unknown ruffians, who, in the absence of the owner, entered the house, assaulted Miss Celina Lafond, his sister, and upon her screaming for assistance fired two shots point blank at her. Fortunately, however, the bullets missed their mark and the lady hid herself in a stairway. The burglars then ransacked the house, and on leaving one of them fired a shot through one of the windows. On hearing of the circumstances Sheriff Marsolais made inquiries into the matter, and has arrested a man named Marcell at St. Charles on suspicion, who has been placed in Joliette jail.

Details of a backwoods tragedy have come to light. Jas. Doolan, foreman in one J. B. Berr's lumber camp got in a fight with a bush hand named Leveque. The encounter lasted about twenty minutes and Leveque got much the worst of it. It is alleged that Doolan beat him about the head with an iron bar. Leveque left the camp to go to the general depot in the woods, but he never reached there. Finding that he did not, his friends instituted a search, with the result that his dead body was found in a little lake, tributary to Lake Nipissing. When found it was discovered that his moccasins had been tied so tightly around his neck as to be sufficient to cause death. A coroner's jury was empanelled and a verdict was returned that Doolan was guilty of manslaughter. Doolan, however, got word of these proceedings, and he immediately disappeared. It has been ascertained that he came to Ottawa and then paid a visit to his home in Manotick. His present whereabouts are unknown. Doolan is 27 years of age, tall and strong, with fair hair.
