CURRENT NOTES.

Wednesday, July 3rd is the date upon which the repeal Scott Act vote in Elgin will be taken. Mr. G. I. Walker h.s been appointed returning officer.

The Dominion Government has decided to remove the export duty on logs eleven inches and under cut in Canada by American lumbermen and hauled to mills on the American side.

Nothing like journalistic enterprise. -"Spanking Satan!" is the startling headline with which the Louisville Courier-Journal now chronicles the reports of Sunday sermons.

May we invite the attention of the postmaster-general to the breaches of the postal liw constantly being committed by the members of the Salvation army? These people are continually carrying letters on their collars.

The fact that the Philadelphia banks have lent the Governor of Pennsylvania $1,000,000, without interest, to repair simply appears as the result of a conthe damage in the Conemaugh Valley goes a long way to upset the popular ness of the muscles on the inside of the theory concerning corporations and

If a woman should not have a vote because of her physical weakness, and if an ordinary robust citizen should have one vote, how many votes should be given to John L. Sullivan or the shortstop who never funked a hot grounder?

The Dominion revenue for eleven months of the current year was $34,-234.338, and the expenditure on account of consolidated revenue $29,587.424: surplus. $1,646,914. Reform papers are the muscles got firmer, and the colt beginning to tell their readers how then moved better the dragging movewicked it is to collect more revenue that is absolutely necessary for current requirements of the government.

of Ontaro have, so far this year, discovered thirty-nine "new kinds of mantioned, however, continues every grub" which are eating up various kinds of crops. But in a few weeks it will be discovered that the crops have not been eaten up, and that "the new kinds of grub" are the same old reliable grubs that have always been with

In Fort Dodge, Iowa, there has been a fierce dispute upon the question whether cows should be allowed to run at large upon the streets. As the smoke of the battle clears away, the outline of the cow is seen, as she pensively chews the green shoots of the carefully planted shade trees and jabs her victorious hoof into the velvety sward of the boulevard. The cow is eating at large, and the citizens, in important rage are swearing at large.

the closing exercises of Vassar College, regrets that while the essayists tackled such subjects as "The Independent in Politics" and "The Rise of the Villain in Literature," nothing was said about the question "How does an Overdose of Baking Powder Affect a Tea Biscuit?" Now, let us be reasonable. Did you ever hear at the closing exercises of a advertised in this paper; but we cannot male College, essays on "Stairbuilding," refrain from saying something in favor "How to Water Stocks," or "How to Slide to Second "?

Mrs, Harrison, wife of the President, makes a faint protest against the loings of the Baby McKee being heralded all over the United States. The celebrity given to the McKee baby is would like every farmer to have one of certainly a remarkable feature of the them in his barn, and not take the word switchmen and Knights of Labor have so for as we can learn, a remarkable town to sell his grain.

baby; has not a hand growing out of its back, or six fingers on one hand; is so feel ie that it cannot walk, and extremely illiterate, not being able even to sign its name. And yet it is as wellknown in the United States as its grandfather.

The defeat of the Prohibition amendment in Pennsylvania is no surprise, although the majority is unexpectedly large. The newspapers of the State were practically unanimous in the opinion that the amendment would be defeated by a majority of from 25,000 to 60,000. The cause of Prohibition is s id to have suffered from the Johnstown calimity, which diverted that phil inthropy and, public spirit which make the strength of the Prohibition movement. But the majority is so large that it cannot be wholly accounted for in this way.

The prompt and liberal responses from all sections of the United States to the call for aid in relieving the sufferers through the Conemaugh Valley and other flood-swept sections of Pennsylvania, speak volumes for the warmhearted, generous character of the American people. Bustling and active in his business, with keen close eye the smallest item of profit and loss, the typical business man has come to be more or less regarded by us and abroad as an undue worshipper of the dollar. But fast and furious as is the race for wealth in the States, there are assuredly no people on the face of the globe whose purse-strings are more freely loosened at the call of distress.

For these who are anxious to see the practical operation of the recent improvements and devices in the way of destroying people and things in war, this year does not hold out any very cheerful promises. There is a growing hesitancy in the great powers to take the chances and incur the vast expense. The war clouds in Europe do not show much lightning. The best chance for a fight is in South America, between Paraquay and Brazil on one side and Bolivia on the other. The latter, however, is not likely to be able to carry on a long contest, and the wars in that quarter have been on too small a scale and not well enough up in artistic features to elicit much interest. Still these regions are coming into view rather better, and if they will experiment with the latest destructives they may be of service to the world when people are involved who would be more missed when killed.

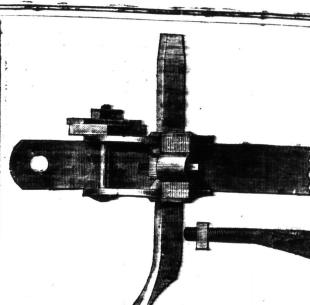

A correspondent of the N. B. Agr'st., writing of Stringhalt, says: To me it And then the copy hungry boy he handed stifle, causing the mare to make this woward and forward movement to get the patelli into its place again ere taking a step forward. Quite lately I have been still more strongly impressed with this idea by having a yearling pony suffering from partial luxation of the patella, with the result that in moving about whilst at grass he dragged each hind foo forward about twelve inches, the toe just touching the grass, and then drew up each leg with a sudden jerk, quite as if he had stringhalt. Having had the inside of the stifle rubbed with a slight blistering fluid, ment ceasing, but the legs still being lifted suddenly, just as if with stringhalt. With a continuation of the treatment the yearling is lifting the The entomologists of the rural press | legs less and less, I trust, shortly will cease altogether. The mare above now and again to lift, and as she is now ten years old, no doubt a chronic state of partial fuxation has been induced, causing the peculiar movement in the leg to continue

We would call attention to the adver tisment of the Wilson scales. The Delinquent Subscriber.

Worn and weary, seedy and sad, an editor sat him down, Mid work and rubbish, paper and dust, with many a wrinkled frown. He sighed when he thought of his paper bills, his rent, and board, and wood, And groaned when the copy-fiend yelled out, as he there in the doorway stood.

'What do people fancy," he said, an editor lives upon? Air and water, glory and debt, till his toilsome life is done?

I'll stop their paper, every one, till their honest debts they pay, And mark their names off the mailing book for ever and for aye !

"Take this copy, double lead, and mark with a pencil blue, And send to all who are in arrears, from ten years down to two."

a pencil scrawl hieroglyphics, strag; tangled, and lean, and tall. When scare a fortnight had dragged its length of tired-out hours away,

There came to the heart of the editor a gladsome joy one day; Twas only a letter from Gordon's Mil, in a hand both weak and old. But out of it fell a treasured coin, of solid,

The letter claimed his interest then, and so he slowly read The serawled, but simple and honest words, and this is what they said :

beautiful gold!

Dear Editor: I read the lines you marked and sent to me, So I send this piece of gold, and ask if you will agree, 'To send my paper right along, and forget the debt I owed, For I've took your paper for twenty year.

bad; and the fever laid me low. 'And times hain't never been the same to little Liz and me-For we are all that's left behind—and since my eyes can't see, She always reads the paper, and its our only cheer, And brought us all the news and fun we've had for many a year,

"I'm gettin' old and feeble now, and down with the rhenmatiz, And tpere's the paper left to me, just that and little Liz. We couldn't bear to lose it now, it's been with us so long, Till it's very name is music, like an oldtime happy song.

"This tweaty-dollar piece of gold will pay for all I owe, And what is over and above, just keep, and let it go Toward paying for the paper till a brighter, better day; And send to Liz, she'll need it then, when I am called away."

Glad and thankful the editor was, as he knew that there was one Who loved, and could appreciate, the work that he had done. He felt that life was not in vain, and smiled through happy tears; And then on the mailing-book he wrote, "Paid up for twenty years." -Margaret Andrews Oldham.
