

DR. TALMAGE'S ENGLISH COUNTERPART.

Singularly impressive and winning... That tall, broad-shouldered man, who stands in the pulpit of Christ Church, Lambeth, says a London letter to the New Orleans Times, is Newman Hall. To my mind he is as good an actor as there is on the English stage, and an orator who would make himself famous in the Commons in a night. The church is crowded. It is always so. It is a rather imposing-looking structure, to which a great many Americans go, and they are always repaid for their trouble. Unlike the experience at Spurgeon's or at the City Temple, the visitor is always provided with a seat. There is nothing especially noteworthy about the service or the people who attend it, or the location of the church, to draw visitors over Westminster bridge; but those who like a clear, simple, ringing sermon from the lips of an orator who knows how to use his voice and his arms as well, go there often, and are never disappointed. It makes little difference what text he selects or what the subject, there is always a vigorous handling of it and a Niagara of thought that will take the average man the remainder of the week to digest. In manner he recalls Depew. He is quite as graceful, and his words flow as easily as do those from the lips of that charming orator. Now he speaks in an entreating, fatherly way, then when he comes to some important point in his discourse he raises his voice, bends over his pulpit, looks steadily at his people, and shakes his long, bony finger for a minute or two at them and repeats the sentence over and over again. There will be a pause of an instant and then he will jump back a foot or two, draw himself up to his full height and shake the rafters of the church by his denunciations of sin and the devil. Dr. Hall uses no notes and never refers to his Bible. He has everything at his fingers' ends. There is no hesitation for a word. They flow as freely as a running stream. Twenty-five minutes are consumed by the sermon, and then when he comes to his last prayer he throws himself on his knees, holds his face in his hands and sobs like a child as he pleads for mercy for his people. There is a tear in his eye, and among the audience men and women are using their handkerchiefs freely. His voice rises and falls in agony of grief, and every one within sound of it is moved by his earnestness. When the prayer is over the organ peals forth, the choir boys sing and the preacher steps forward to deliver his benediction. He raises his hands and holds them in the air as he tells his people that upon the conclusion of the service there will be an outdoor meeting, which all are invited to attend. Those who want to see will find the tall figure of the great preacher standing in the midst of three or four hundred men and women in the evening twilight as they are singing and praying. There is a crowd in the streets, and few persons seem to be afraid to venture near enough to hear the service. Those Mr. Hall goes to himself, takes them kindly by the hand, speaks a word or two of encouragement and brings them over to the meeting.

Behold How They Love One Another.

The action of a neighboring Episcopal congregation in reducing the salary offered their minister to $1 per annum, and the tactics adopted by the Anti-Federalists in the Methodist Church, as well as a good deal that takes place in many other quarters may tempt people to ask whether professing Christians can afford to denounce politicians in the savage terms in which they are often denounced by many who lay claim to very superior piety. Supposing a lively politician should present the world with a graphic account of all the church quarrels, clerical scandals, cases of discipline, clerical suspensions, depositions and other matters of that kind that have taken place in Canada during the last year—Canada Presbyterian.

Baltimore Apple Bread.

Make a nice dough for sweet rusks, as they are known in New England, or buns, as they are known elsewhere. When this dough is very light, roll it out into two good-sized cakes about half an inch thick, and spread one with stewed apples, place the other over it, and let it rise for half an hour, then bake it in a good oven. As soon as it is done spread some stewed apples over the top, add plenty of sugar, bits of butter and nutmeg, and set the cake back in the oven for the sugar to form a coating. Serve hot or cold.

Stopped the Clock.

Dentist (to patient)—This laughing gas doesn't seem to have much effect on you, sir? Patient—No. I'm a professional humorist. And the old clock on the wall that had been in the dentist's family for 80 years with never a stop, held its hands before its face as a dull thud announced that a cord had been kn and a 10-pound weight had dropped.—Time.

She Got the Facts.

"Oh, I had my fortune told, and Miss Larkins, broke off the engagement." "Why, is she as superstitious as that?" "Oh, no; but my fortune was told by Bradstreet, and that settled me."

Theory and Condition.

Doctor—Take these powders as directed, and your cold will be gone in two or three days. Patient—You seem quite hoarse, doctor? Doctor—Yes; I've had a bad cold for four weeks.

The Usual Way.

"Shall we sit on the sofa, George darling, or would you rather have the big chair?" "But I don't know when my month's open. What do you do when you wake up and find your mouth open?" "I'll take an easy chair, my charmer, and you shall have your own knee seat, as usual."

How He Kept His Mouth Shut.

"Don't sleep with your mouth open," said Fred to his younger brother. "You should breathe through your nose." "But I don't know when my month's open. What do you do when you wake up and find your mouth open?" "What do I do? Why, I get up and shut it."

GOY TWELVE YEARS.

That Was the Sentence Imposed on Harry Spies for Murdering Ruby Nelson.

The Buffalo News has the following about a case which created considerable talk in this city at the time: The last act in the Ruby Nelson murder case was seen by many people in the Supreme Court room yesterday morning. Judge Corlett sentenced Harry Spies, who escaped with the lights of a man, to 12 years' imprisonment. Good behavior will reduce his actual term of penal servitude to 7 2/3 years. Great desire was manifested by Mr. Hatch, representing Spies's family, to have the young man allowed to expiate his crime in the penitentiary of this county, and a law was found which allowed of this being done. C. S. Hatch read affidavits of Dr. Baething, John Spies, W. J. Wiegles and Rose Spies attesting the prisoner's weak mind. "John Jacob Henry Spies, stand up," said the clerk. The prisoner arose looking pale, but answered in a firm voice that he had no reason to urge why sentence should not be pronounced against him. "I am 21 years of age," said he in further reply, "and brought right here in Buffalo. I am a bartender by occupation." Judge Corlett then arose and spoke with great solemnity and impressiveness. "You have been tried," he said, "on an indictment for murder by a very intelligent jury who took your case under consideration after much effort by intelligent counsel. They took great pains in debating the case and gave you the benefit of every reasonable doubt; they turned in each instance on the side of mercy. Ordinarily, remarks made to a prisoner after conviction are not productive of much good, and are usually unneeded. Your habits of life have been dissolute and loose, and your situation recalls the words of the wise man spoken 3,000 years ago of just such people as you have partially consorted with. Remove thy way far from her, come not near to her house; her house is the way of hell leading down to the Chamber of Death. If you had listened to the supplications of your mother, if you had obeyed the orders of your father, you would not have been here to-day. The affidavits read show that you have contracted a loathsome disease as a consequence of your sin, and it may be that that has much to do with your weakness of intellect. At your time of life, if you are subjected to rigid discipline, if you are truly penitent, it may be that you may yet become an industrious, quiet and sober man. The sentence of the court in your case is that you be confined in the Erie County Penitentiary for the term of 12 years."

Work and Wages.

All of the musicians of Pittsburgh are now members of the Musicians' Union. Lancashire (Eng.) Operative Union has recently given $100,000 to idle members. Fifteen hundred cigar dealers have promised to sell no Chinese-made cigars. The Farmers' Alliance is only 2 years old in North Carolina, but it has already 85,000 members, including nearly 10,000 women, and there is also a colored branch. The Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association, of Cincinnati, O., have forbidden any of its members from knowingly employing any person who is a member of the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Union. In France the average wages received by head farmers last year were $81 for the year and found; herdsmen and shepherds, $56; workmen and cheesemakers, $56; ordinary farm hands, $59, and women servants, $47. James P. Archibald, Master Workman of the Paper Hangers' and Decorators' National Assembly K. of L., has just returned from an extended tour through England, Scotland and Ireland, where he was delegated by the general executive board of the Order. Regarding his work he reports that he organized 19 local assemblies in England and Scotland and two in Ireland. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, has issued the call for the fourth annual convention in Boston on the 10th of December. The chief business to be taken up is thus announced: "The St. Louis convention resolved upon a general agitation for the establishment of the eight-hour work day upon May 1st, 1890, and it now becomes the mission of the Boston convention to transform, if in the wisdom of the delegates there assembled it may be deemed advisable, the agitation, which has now become world-wide, into an organized movement for its realization."

What is Your Fighting Weight?

Railway travelling should be charged for on a basis of two cents a mile. Every railway in the country has been assisted by public funds, and railroad fares are the same now as they were twenty-five years ago, namely, arranged on a basis of three cents a mile. There are special rates by which some people travel cheaper than others. Why should not all be treated alike? Then why is it that the railways do not charge in the same way for carrying passengers as they do for carrying freight, that is to say, so much a pound? Why should thin men have to pay the same fare as fat men when it takes less engine power to haul them?—Dundas Banner.

Impartial Reception.

Master Ned (to the Rev. Dr. Trehern)—Wished I had been here last night when you baptized the company. Rev. Dr. Trehern—What do you mean, my son? I did not baptize anybody. "No? Well, mamma said that when you came in last night you threw cold water on everybody."

If it was a revolt it was promptly quelled, and it is difficult to ascertain any reliable facts. The Warden says it was only a quarrel between two convicts, which created a little temporary excitement. There is a suspicion, however, that it was more serious than this. Sir Henry James continued his speech for the Times before the Parnell Commission yesterday. Yesterday morning about 10 o'clock a serious accident happened to Arthur Chapman, agent of the C. O. Railway at Stratford, while engaged in braking on a car that was being shunted at Trenton. It is supposed he slipped when about to put on the brakes and fell off the top of the car, in front of it. Inspector Gilchrist, Peterboro, has received fresh instructions from the Government to see that the fines imposed by the magistrate are collected, and also to continue the prosecutions as long as the mill owners violate the law. Lord Randolph Churchill, in a letter, urges that the Conservatives during the coming session of Parliament ought to give prominence to the land laws, measures for the reform of workmen's dwellings, laborers' allotments, licensing and laws providing for shorter hours of labor, and dealing with the "sweating" system. All these questions, he says, are rapidly ripening for practical legislation. The marriage between Prince Murat and Gwendoline Caldwell, which was to have taken place in Paris yesterday, has been broken off, in consequence of a disagreement about the young lady's marriage settlements. After a splendid reception from Prince and people your telegram was my first greeting from home. Heartily thanks for it. My first word back to the Athenians is a salutation to you, sent from the City of Pericles, from the pillars of the Parthenon, the sublime aspect of which deeply impresses me."

The illness of the Duke of Edinburgh, which prevented his attending the funeral of King Louis in Lisbon on Saturday, is ascribed to a fainting fit experienced while visiting King Carlos. When he was attacked he fell to the floor, bruising his face badly. The Duke has sufficiently recovered to take his departure, and he paid a farewell visit to King Carlos yesterday. The trustees on his face are fast disappearing. He has gone to Madrid. H. Bristow was head coachman for the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise when His Lordship was Governor-General of Canada. The teamster was not to blame, and no inquest was held. A sad accident occurred on Saturday evening in the Hoard handle factory in St. Thomas, resulting in the maiming for life of James Kelly, the 17-year-old son of John Kelly, who resides on Walnut street. The young man was removing the cover from a planer when his left hand became caught, and was ground to a pulp, the flesh and bones being chopped into mince meat. Drs. Gustin and McLeary amputated the hand. The coroner's jury has returned a verdict of death from mauling in the case of William Webb, the fourth victim of the Cephonia explosion. At the Guelph Assizes yesterday the Grand Jury brought in three true bills against W. H. Harvey for the murder of his wife and two daughters. His trial will probably commence to-day. Among the reports prevalent in the city one is that Harvey will plead guilty. His friends are making great efforts to prove he was insane at the time he committed the deed on the 26th of March last.
