Things Certain and Uncertain.

MEANTIME PAY UP—THE WAY IT LOOKS TO A SUB.

From the Albion Blizzard.

The Editor is at Cassadaga Lake taking his vacation and giving his convalescent jaw a rest. We hope he will sit in one of their numerous circles and interview some of his delinquent subscribers that have passed over and settle the question whether delinquents go to hell or not. We think they do, or at least. We remember of hearing a spiritual lecture in which the speaker commended that no man was so bad that if he went to hell for his sins but what he could get out by progression, saying a man could place one foot on the ladder and rising up shake the brimstone off the other and round by round gain the top. Such being the case, we would like to know how long the man has to hunt for the ladder and how long it takes him to get out. We trust the Editor will return home with the desired information. Meantime we advise all delinquents to pay up; life is CERTAIN and progression is slow and tiresome—pay up!

No Bill Against Hawkins.

THE HAMILTON SHOOTING CASE BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

HAMILTON, Oct. 2.—The grand jury has had the Douglas shooting case under consideration all day. The relatives of the deceased, Dr. Olmstead, Mrs. Nellie Spencer, the landlady, Constables Cameron and Gibbs, Detective Murray and Sergeant Pinch have testified. This morning the jury, accompanied by Sergeant Pinch, Detective Reid, Constables Gibbs and Campaign, inspected the house where the shooting took place. The jurors examined the premises minutely, and the policemen demonstrated how the affair occurred. Two points were set at rest in the minds of the jurors. There was no doubt from the splinters that the first bullet was fired from inside the room. In regard to Constable Hawkins having had to see into the man's bedroom, it was explained by the fact that the window looks out upon a sort of small court formed by the walls of the rear wings of the two houses, and the light is obstructed thereby, particularly in the early part of the day; so that at six o'clock the interior of the room would be dim to one looking from the outside. Government Detective Murray says the whole affair is clear enough, and that his work is done in connection with the case. He was telegraphed to at St. Thomas by the Deputy Attorney-General to come here and put himself under Mr. Irving's instructions, but finds that the local authorities have done all that is necessary in the matter.

Foreman Smith said that the murder indictment had been thrown out, and that Crown Prosecutor Mr. Irving had substituted an indictment for manslaughter.

WHAT FOREMAN SMITH SAYS.

"We are going into the thing from beginning to end," said Foreman Smith to-day. "We are leaving nothing undone to arrive at the exact and absolute facts in the case, and when our investigation is concluded, I think our finding will be one which the citizens will treat with respect."

When you say you are going into it from beginning to end, do you mean that you intend going back to Hawkins at all?"

"Oh, no, our investigation is to be confined simply to the shooting by Hawkins. We have nothing to do with anything that lies back of that."

"Is there much evidence to hear yet?"

"A good deal. We were at it all yesterday afternoon and all this morning. I expect we will be busy all this afternoon, too. As I tell you, we intend leaving no stone unturned to get at the truth."

"Has any evidence been adduced yet as the statement that those who were outside could see Douglas distinctly through the crack through which the shooting was done? It is said that the window opposite the door would outline Douglas' form so that it could not be mistaken by anyone looking through the crack made when the door was swung open."

"We have taken evidence on that point," said Mr. Smith, "and we will take more. From what we have learned so far the figure of Douglas could not be seen by those outside, although this point is not yet absolutely determined."

The grand jury failed to bring in a bill. The judge said practically the matter was concluded; but legally it was not.
