On Saturday last while Mr. Henry Ivey and Chas. Jackson were driving south on the plank road leading Jas. McMeiken's mare behind their rig, she became frightened by another rig close behind and jumped against the wheel upsetting the buggy and its occupants. We are glad to say no one was hurt, the buggy was badly wrecked.

A St. Thomas young man had rather a humiliating experience the other evening. He was returning from Port Stanley on one of the excursion trains and familiarly tapped a young lady on the shoulder. She resented his conduct by suddenly rising from her seat and belaboring the young man over the head and shoulders with an umbrella. As soon as he could escape he incontinently beat a retreat into the next car.

The essence of advertising is to place your statement where it is most likely to be seen by those most interested in it, and so, a newspaper with a very limited supply of readers indeed is often more valuable to the advertiser of peculiar wants and wares than one with "the largest circulation in the world," if that circulation does not reach the class of readers most affected by those who pay for publicity.

The Hamilton Spectator says: There is very good reason to think that the South Ontario Pacific railway between Hamilton and Toronto will be finished this fall. There may be and probably will be, some little delay in constructing the line from Woodstock of the Niagara river, but that will follow next year. Apart of the line connecting Hamilton with the Canada Southern will be constructed within the next few months—the portion from Waterford through Brantford to Hamilton. The reasonable prospect is that before the end of the year, trains of the Canadian Pacific and of the Canada Southern roads will be seen on the streets of this city.

Now is the time to subscribe. Address, RECORD Jarvis.

A disastrous conflagration occurred about ten o'clock Saturday, Mr. McMahon, who lives about half a mile from the village of Cantfield on the Canboro' road, discovered his barn in flames. After the building had been almost entirely consumed and the flames had subsided Mr. McMahon effected an entrance to ascertain the cause of fire and found the charred remains of a man. This individual had been seen in the village early in the morning with a revolver and had threatened to shoot himself. It is supposed he set the barn on fire and then shot himself. The man is not known here and is supposed to be a tramp. The season's crops were destroyed and the building was partly covered by insurance.

One of Barnum's agents has received a telegram from General Manager Gardiner denying the report that the $7,000 horse driven by Mrs. Forepaugh was killed in the late accident in New York State. The animal was not injured even.

The failure of the apple crop in the eastern and northern counties has had the effect of leading Kent and Essex with buyers. Under the keen competition prices are creeping up, and in some cases as high as $1.75 has been offered for first-class winter fruit. One farmer, we hear has sold the produce of his orchard, on the tree, for $500, which is just $100 a year more than his rent for the farm.—Chatham Banner.

Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow; it scurried away one summer day where lambs should never go. Then Mary sat down and tears streamed from her pretty eyes; she did not find her lamb because she did not advertise. And Mary had a brother John, who kept a village store; he sat down and smoked his pipe and watched the open door. And as the people passed along and did not stop and buy; John still sat down and smoked his pipe and blinked his sleepy eye. And so the sheriff closed him out, but still he lingered near, and Mary came to drop with him a sympathizing tear. "How is it, sister, that these other merchants here, sell all their goods and pay their bills, and thrive from year to year?" Remembering now her old bad luck, the little maid replied: These other fellows got there John because they advertise.

A GREAT PRESTIDIGITATEUR—Brenner, the magician, is clever enough at the black art to be thought to have a connection with the old black artist himself, but he is at the same time a whole-souled generous fellow. The writer was with him and some others in London one evening when a poor old man came along and struck the purty for a quarter. He was decrepit, evidently ill and altogether his appearance was an excitement of charity. Several hands went down for money for the poor old creature, but Brenner stopped them. "The fellow is an old fraud," said he, "he has more money about him than any of us," and taking off the old man's hat he commenced filling it with a varied collection of coins taken from the old man's hair, nose, ears, arm-pits and pockets. When he got through there was a dollar or two in small change. Handing it to the astonished cripple he said, "Now, be off with you and don't come round here asking for money." The old man was so gazed that he could only murmur "God bless you" and hobble away. Turning to the crowd Brenner remarked, "I'd have found more about the old fellow only my stock of small change ran out."—Stratford Herald.
