

Ten Reasons

For the Wonderful Success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the Most Popular and Most Extensively Sold Medicine in America.

- 1 Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses great medicinal merit, which it positively demonstrates when fairly tried.
- 2 It is most economical, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" can truly be said.
- 3 It is prepared by a Combination, Proportion and Process Peculiar to itself, unknown to other preparations, and by which all the medicinal value of the various ingredients is secured.
- 4 It effects remarkable cures where other medicines have utterly failed to do any good whatever.
- 5 It is a modern medicine, originated by experienced pharmacists, and still carefully prepared under their personal supervision.
- 6 It is clean, clear and beautiful in appearance, pleasant to take, and always of equal strength.
- 7 It has proven itself to be positively the best remedy for scrofula and all blood disorders, and the best tonic for that tired feeling, loss of appetite and general debility.
- 8 It is unequalled for curing dyspepsia, sick headache, biliousness, catarrh, rheumatism and all diseases of the kidneys and liver.
- 9 It has a good name at home, there being more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, than of all other sarsaparillas and blood purifiers combined.
- 10 Its advertising is unique, original, honest, and thoroughly backed up by the medicine itself.

Breeding Milch Cows.

All authorities who have properly looked into the question of dairying are agreed that there is little or no profit in keeping a cow in the dairy that will not furnish more than 3,000 pounds of milk of an average quality annually. Now it is notorious that very many cows kept for dairy purposes do not even come up to this standard. The dairymen are continually urged to discard these animals, and very properly. They are with equal earnestness and frequency urged to secure better cows, and very properly so; but how shall they be enabled to do this? Very many of the dairy cows that are in use at the present time have been bought wherever they could be obtained, and of necessity in a somewhat random way, as they are nowhere specially bred for sale to dairymen, so far as we are aware.

Now the question arises, is there no remedy for this? If the average standard of the dairy cow is to be improved by selection, and this selection is to be made from animals bred in an aimless way by men who are without skill, then the materials from which to select will always of necessity be somewhat limited. There will never be enough of good cows in the country to supply the needs of the dairy interest in Canada, which requires the addition of so large a number of cows annually to take the place of old ones that are turned off, and also of those without good milking properties. There are but two ways of supplying the need, so far as we can see. One is to have the dairymen breed his own cows; and a second is to have dairymen who are also special breeders of dairy cattle. There are some objections to the first of these methods, but they are not insurmountable, and this method probably will have to be sustained for the time being, and also still further extended. The difficulties relate to the obstacles in the way of getting good bulls, and to the tendency in too great a degree to divide the work of the dairymen. As to the first objection, really good dairy bulls are not plentiful, and those who have but a few cows cannot afford to keep them. Of necessity, then, bulls will have to be used sometimes not well adapted to the purpose aimed at. As to the second difficulty, the dairymen would virtually have two branches of business instead of one, even though the second should be viewed as the complement of the first. He would of necessity have to keep a number of young animals to replenish his herd, which might inconvenience him considerably; and he would also of necessity raise some—probably a considerable number—that would fall below his ideal and have to be sold out of the herd. Such animals he would rear at a loss. Is it not possible to furnish good dairy cows in another way, and would not that way be the following?

Let some dairymen make a specialty of the business of rearing dairy cattle for sale, just as some men make a specialty of rearing beef-producing cattle for sale. He would then be able not only to keep foundation stock of the right sort, but would also be able to afford to keep a first class dairy bull. Keeping records as to milk production would be a necessity not only in determining the value of the young cows intrinsically, but also commercially. The foundation cows might be purchased or otherwise, in proportion as they could be bought cheaply or were dear. The keeping of private records, in any case, would manifestly be an advantage. The outlay without direct income would be entailed in the food consumed by the young heifers and by the bull; for after the milking period commenced, which would be a comparatively early age, the return would more than cover the outlay, on the supposition that there is profit in dairying. There would still be the hazard of breeding some animals below the standard, but the liability to this would not be nearly so great as with the average dairymen, whose opportunities for selection all around would be much inferior. The very best performers, in this case, would have to be kept, that the standard of the herd might, in consequence, be more than maintained. The dairymen would, of necessity, have to make butter in order to get skim-milk for feeding.

There would be some difficulties to be encountered, as with all earthly undertakings, but these would not be insuperable. One of these would arise in the proportion of the male births. Another would be found in the relatively low price of dairy cattle. But would not dairymen soon learn to so distinguish between the value of dairy cows thus bred and those bred at random that they would be willing to pay a very much higher price for the former? Reputation here would eventually bring its value, as in other things. Is there not an unoccupied field, therefore, in the breeding of dairy cattle that could be turned to good account by a large number of our farmers?—The Canadian Live Stock and Farm Journal for December.

"The Good Old Times."

At this season of the year, I think people are especially inclined to look back regretfully to the "good old times." There is something extremely picturesque and attractive in the accounts of the Christmas festivities that have come down to us; and one feels great sympathy with old "Squire Bracebridge," in Washington Irving's charming "Sketch Book," in his anxiety to preserve the old customs and manners as long as possible. But if we lift the curtain higher and study the old times a little more attentively, we shall hardly be sorry that they are past. The shadows are very black and deep, and even "Merrie England" was the home of injustice and oppression. No wonder Christmas stands out in bright contrast against the darkness, for then the rich feasted the poor, and master and servant for once met on something like equal terms.

"Then opened wide the Baron's hall To vassal, tenant, serf and all; Power had his end of merriment, And Ceremony doffed his pride. The heir, with roses in his shoes, That night might village partner choose; The lord, underrating, share The vulgar game of post and pair. All hailed with uncontrolled delight, And general voice, the happy night, That to the cottage as the crown Brought tidings of salvation down."

Christmas Day is pre-eminently a festival for the poor, and for the children, for our Lord, in His humble birth, has honored for all time the weak and the lowly; and they who endeavor to make it a joyous season for the little ones, and for those for whom nothing is prepared, will not miss its blessing, though they are themselves lonely and saddened with the memory of other happier Christmas times.—Household Companion.

At a council convened in the Baptist Church at Aylmer a few days ago W. P. Nelson, the former pastor of the Port Burwell and Jubilee Baptist Churches, who recently, it will be remembered, distinguished himself by eloping with a school teacher of that locality, was unanimously expelled from the ministry. It is learned that after being released from custody in Michigan Nelson went south, and on Sunday following preached a trial sermon in an Alabama church. The church authorities there wrote to Toronto for information, and newspaper clippings giving an account of his doings were sent in reply.

Did you ever buy a horse and not have some misgivings as to his points till they were fully tested? Not so with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; you may be sure of it at the start. It never disappoints those who give it a fair and persistent trial.

The Safest

AND most powerful alternative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William E. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggins, Arkansas.
