An Indian named David Thomas is in gaol at Brantford on a charge of insanity. The disease in his case takes the form of kleptomania, and Dr. Langrill, who sent him there from the Reserve, reports that while consulting him in his office the man appropriated a pair of outer gloves and a pair of driving gloves, and then went out into the back yard and took a wet shirt from off the line. When Dr. Griffin examined the man, a search revealed the fact that he had stuffed several papers and pieces of bread left by the other prisoners into his pockets, and inside his coat they found the gaol soap.
