Vacant houses are becoming very scarce in Jarvis. Every house, with one or two exceptions, is occupied and there is still a demand for good houses. Our population is increasing, and every effort should be put forth to keep abreast with the new wave of prosperity that is sweeping over the village. There is no reason why our town shouldn't grow, situated as it is, surrounded by a wealthy farming community, and being an important shipping point, where thousands of dollars are paid out every month for horses and all kinds of stock that the farmer has to sell, besides grain of all kinds. Surely where such large sums of money are paid out, business places should reap a more abundant harvest. Let every citizen do his utmost to improve his property, improve his business, and thus build up and beautify the town.
