Rescuers Bring Dead Miners Up From Cherry Mine.

Daring Inspectors Find Twenty In the Mine.

Cherry, Hl., Nov. 22.-The St. Paul mine has been almost conquered. Mine inspectors and geological experts succeeded, after an all day and all night battle, in clearing shafts of the burning mine and early to-day Chicago firemen and a group of miners penetrated the dismal depths of the galleries and for two hours and a half fought the smouldering fire in the coal veins without trouble.

At 6 o'clock a second group of miners and railroad men entered the mine. All of them were working without oxygen helmets or apparatus, and they suffered no ill effecs from gases or smoke.

The firemen discovered in the second vein a pile of bodies, but how soon these bodies can be removed is uncertain, because the east portion of the gallery in which the fire originated is badly caved in, and debris will have to be taken out and timbers erected to ensure safety to he workmen.

In the west portion of the gallery the fire is still burning. Firemen have succeeded in getting into the vein with leads of hose for a distance of fifty feet. James O'Connor, a Chicago fireman, emerged from the main shaft early today and declared that the fire would be extinguished before many hours.

O'Connor saw a pile of human bodies buried in the wreckage of the gallery renning from the main shaft to the air vent, and also saw bodies lying in heaps in the west vein, where the fire was still burning.

Early in the morning, after the firemen had made their first descent and had turned a stream of water into the gallerits without leaving the eage, the fire in the west vein appeared to be raging. This at first gave rise to a report that it would be impossible to struggle against the fury of the fire, and thatt the mine must be closed.

Inspector James Taylor sent a com pany of volunteer workmen into the mine at 6 o'clock to repair the approach to the east vein The timbers a few feet from the cage, had been burned out. Tay. lor explored the gallery in which the fire originated, going in as far as the obstructoins caused by the collapse of the walls and burned timbers.

It was the general opinion of the miners about the shaft that the bodies could be taken out before many hours. How many bodies already have been discover ed was not stated.

Three bodies, the first recovered through the main shaft, were brought to the surface at 8 o'clock. A pile of others were in sight, but passage to them And Wife Had to Fly From Their for the time being was hampered by fire Foru other bodies were brought up on the ext trip of the cage, one of them the present beyond reach.

Grief-stricken men, women and children formed a great circle about the bodies brought from the mine. Many turned away, unable to endure the sobs and cries of the bereaved wives and The Treuble in Buffalo in the

The first bodies identified were those of Richard Buckles, a stable boy, and Louis Gibbs.

For the first time since the mine horror of Saturday, bodies of some of the 300 victims were found yesterday by daring explorers in the depths of the second gallery.

Twenty bodies were found within 70 feet of the ventilating shaft. One body was brought to the surface.

The temper of the people was feared and an attempt to keep secret the finding of the bodies was made. Therefore, that more than one victim was discovered was not generally known at nightfall, and a plan was afoot to attempt the removal of the other bodies from the mine late at night.

"We will do all we can at the air shaft and then at any cost will descend into the main pit," said Mr. Taylor last evening. Of the horrors which they encountered in the mine gallery none of the explorers would speak, but their faces were pale and their hands trembled when they emerged. This much was learned-the bodies were scorched and swollen. Death might have been due either to gas or flame.

The search for the bodies must last or days. The galleries must be strengthened and air sent into the thousands of rooms in the death cavern. Water, too, may have flooded some parts of the third vein. A sullen crowd watched all night beside the main shaft. The two companies of militia forced them back with clubbed rifles.

As a result of the disaster, there are in this town of only a few thousand people, at least 1,000 orphans and 200 widows. Some families of eight children will be dependent upon charity.

Curious Ending of a Manslaughter Case.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 29. An extraordinarv closing of a manslaughter case was revealed to-day in connection with the mine disaster of last Saturday, Stephen Timko, a miner and former deputy marshal, was under indictment for killing another miner. Timko, according to his counsel, shot and killed a Slav in a riot near Spring Valley several months ago, and was out on bail awaiting trial. Wit nesses of the shooting, several of the friends of Timko, and others, his foes worked in the St. Paul mine, and a search of the company's records disclosed that all of them are in the mine and Building Trades.

Carpenters and Joiners Want to Run Their Own Show.

Toronto despatch: The report of Building Trades Committee was to-day adopted at the convention of the Federation of Labor at Massey Hall this morning. It dealt mainly with minor disputes in various parts of the States, but in one instance the committee took decided steps to settle trouble in Buffalo between the United Trades and Labor Council and the federation. Unless the Labor Council complies with the federation's laws within 30 days by unseating all ineligible members and admitting the eligible ones, the charter is to be revoked, and a federation official will visit Buffalo to reorganize the building trades departments. The Executive Committee will deal with the appeal of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners against being taken in by the United Carpenters of America. It claims that it is well able to look after itself, has a substantial bank account. and paid out last year $158.85? in sick death and superanguation benefits. YESTERDAY'S SESSION.

Domestic quarrels are proverbially the bitterest. Yesterday's sessions of the American Federation of Labor were entirely taken up with the hearing of domestic grievances. It was not called by so enticing a name. Officially it was known as the report of the Committee on Adjustment. The federation's family is a large one. It comprises 195 national and international unions, so that on the mere theory of probabilities its family quabbles are likely to be numerous.

The most heated and important disoute is that between the machinists and he elevator constructors. It has raged furiously for the past ten years, each accusing the other of poaching on its erritory. Efforts to amalgamate the wo bodies are now to be undertaken. hough in the meantime one of the prinipal manufacturers of elevators in the United States will suffer. By a decision reached the contesting parties in the Otis elevator works in the United States are to withdraw from the work of elevator construction pending the settlement. The serious meaning of the decision to the employing firm did not appear to receive much consideration in the convention.

Another recommendation provides for the amalgamation of the two great boilies of railway car builders into one or ganization. Strangely enough, the objection seemed to come in most cases from the bodies who were advised to join hands together.

Disputes were adjudicated hinon be tween the sheet metal workers and the stove mounters, the moving picture machine operators and the electrical work-

The amalgamation is subject to ratification by the two organizations. A outlined. The first step in it is to be the withdrawal of all legal actions and the cessation of all disputes.

London, Nov. 22. Secretary of War Haldane made a fighting speech this afternoon before the Eighty Club in regard to the Government's policy on the budget. He declared that the Government accepted the challenge of Mr. Balfour, the Unionist leader, to go to the country on the issues, which would be free trade, the budget and the Pouse of Lords. No quarter would be asked by the Liberals, said Mr. Haldane, and none would be given. The Cabinet, he said, was absolutely united on the issues which would be placed before the electors. Since the British Constitution became what it is no step so violent or so revolutionary had been taken as the contemplated negativing of the Budget Bill by the House of Lords. It was opposed to the policy of the Lib erals and was a constitutional revolution which would be followed by pro-

Toronto despatch: Dragging at the end of a rope a big beam that it had torn out of the stable in its frenzied struggles, a big black horse ran amuck at the Burns & Shepard Repository on Nelson street last night, and made a determined effort to kill Dr. J. G. Stewart, a veterinary surgeon. The animal was only despatched after at had chased the veterinary all about the building in its made attempt to crush out his The horse was found running around on Adelaide street about 9.30 p.m. It was captured by P. C. McIntosh and a probationary officer, who when the animal began to kick and read, led it to Burns & Sheppard Repository. It was then frothing at the mouth, and was sweating in an unusual manner. L. M. Tefft, the foreman in charge of the tables, tied it to one of the big posts supporting a runway, and the constable elephoned for Dr. Stewart. When he arrived the animal was in a perfect frenzy, charging the post and tearing up he ground around it. The post was imbedded in rocks, but in a few minutes the earth had been all kicked away and he rocks were flying. Seeing that the crazy animal would shortly tear. the post from its place Dr. Stewart picked up an axe and attempted to kill it. The horse dodged, and the blow went wide. Its mouth wide open and scattering froth, it jumped toward the veterinary, and the post gave way. Crying out a warning Dr. Stewart turned and ran up the runway leading to the second flood, with the horse tearing along so close that the flying man could have touched it had he stretched back his arm.

Tefft was upstairs when he heard he warning shout as the animal broke cose. He slammed the doors leading to the stall, where the other horses are kept and dashed along a passageway and up a flight of stairs. De Stewart took the same passageway and dodged into a closet. As the horse turned into the passage the beam it had been dragging as though it was nothing but broom handle caught in an obstruction, and the rope snapped like pack thread. An overhead stairway stopped its progress a moment, enabling its intended victim to escape. The passage into this, was, for a time caught. Dr. Stewart and Tefft used the opportunity to get out and run downstairs again. When the horse saw Dr. Stewart escaping it backed out of the passage, and turning, thundered down the runway in pursuit. The men were just in time to get out on to Nelson street and shove the door shut when the horse crashed against it.
