FLYING PROPELLERS.

How They Are Made and What They Cost—Propellers for Models.

Propellers for airships are built of laminated wood, that is to say of wood built up in layers.

For the making of a propeller six or eight feet in length there would be required to begin with a stick of timber six inches or thereabouts square, and accurate in size of wood, however perfect.

The shaving out of the blades from this stick, each of precisely the required taper, pitch and thickness, and the two exactly alike, is work that calls for the greatest patience, care and skill.

A six-foot propeller of laminated wood, its weight six and a half pounds, costs $50; a seven-foot propeller, weight nine pounds, $60, and an eight-foot propeller, weight twelve pounds, $70.

For model airships there are made, also all of laminated wood, but these commonly all of mahogany, little propellers accurate in pitch and finish; they sell at from $4 to $7.

Among the full sized propellers the greatest demand is for those measuring seven feet. From the orders thus far filled and now in hand the propeller makers are looking for a greater activity than ever in flying machines in the coming season.

Waste Heat Put to Work. Feeling that heat, no more than man should have the privilege of being lazy and shirking a job, the coke ovens throughout Western Pennsylvania have decided to put all the idle calories they can get their hands on to work—that is, they will turn the heat into electricity.

The plant of the Bayette Coke Company has already begun. It has been found that in this region some $32,000,000 worth of heat has been loafing all through each year. But now by an invention which consists of a siver the tax authorities had come to believe that there was no new tax dodge under the sun.

But the tax authorities were mistaken. A few days ago a man came to the New York tax commissioners and asked to be relieved of his personal taxes. "I have only $5,000," he said, "and that money is in city bonds and is being held in trust."

"For whom?" asked the tax commissioner. The question was unexpected and at first there was no answer, but the tax commissioner insisted. Finally, in a stage whisper, the swearer-off explained.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff. Was for His Dog. Since personal taxes began, so many ways of swearing off have been invented that the tax authorities had come to believe that there was no new tax dodge under the sun.

Mr. Newcar (about to start on his first trip in his recently purchased motor car, to his new chauffeur)—Now, William, I want it thoroughly understood I will not have fast driving. Always keep well under the legal limit—not as close to it as you can. Ten miles an hour is enough for me. What I want is comfort—not excitement. Do you understand?

Three days later—Er—William, I must be back home at 7 o'clock. This road seems very straight and wide. Don't you think you might go just a little faster without danger?

Two days later—William, this dust is very unpleasant. If you could pass the car ahead, now—it seems to be going rather slowly.

Next day—Put on a little more pace, William. There's no use being a crank. This road is too good to lose the chance.

A week later—Open her, Bill! There are no police within five miles, I'll bet; and, if there are, who cares? I'm out for fun! Let her rip, my boy—let her rip! This isn't a steam roller! Let's have some speed!

FALLACIES ABOUT HEALTH.

FULLER KNOWLEDGE OF THE BODY NEEDED.

Thousands of useful lives are yearly sacrificed just because people lack knowledge of simple things about the body.

We must remember that little failures of the stomach, kidneys, or liver bring about lack of nutrition. At first the body bends before its burden, but finally it breaks down.

Health depends upon unity of action between all the organs, and in no way can it be secured more satisfactorily than by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From the blood they remove every impurity—to the stomach they impart digestive power, to the bowels they ensure promptness and thorough action.

It is easy to see how quickly Dr. Hamilton's Pills will restore health, how surely the system will rebuild, gain strength and endurance.

For general family use in the cure of languor, headaches, weak stomach, backache and kidney complaint no medicine ranks so high as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you look and feel always your best.

Straw Braiding by Machinery.

A native of Tsingtau, in China, has recently invented a machine which, it is stated, is likely to revolutionize the straw-braid industry.

The manipulation of the apparatus is extremely simple, and it is said that one person can turn out twelvefold more with this machine than by hand.

A newspaper representative before whom the machine was made states that the manufacture, especially of the fine braids, runs very smoothly, while the cheaper and coarser grades do not seem to be so satisfactory.

Machines are now being made in Germany, and if the expectations of the inventor are fulfilled Tsingtau may become the world's manufacturing emporium for straw braid.

JELLY ROLL.

Sift one cup of pastry flour with one even teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the yolks of three eggs light, add one tablespoonful of cold water, one cup of powdered sugar and beat. All the flour and a scant teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring, and when mixed well add the stiffly-beaten whites of three eggs.

Spread the batter thinly in a large shallow pan buttered and floured. Be sure that the batter reaches the corners of the pan. When baked turn the cake at once into a cloth, spread with jelly beaten to make it smooth, and roll up while hot. Pin the cloth round until the cake is cold and the roll will keep in shape.

QUICKER SHIP BUILDING.

Time was when it took nearly six years to build a battleship in private yards in the United States; but, says the Scientific American, the construction of the Connecticut at the Government yard at Brooklyn set a pace which has steadily accelerated.

The ship, whose trials took place as recently as October, 1907, took 44 months to construct. The New Hampshire, December, 1907, was built in 36 months; the North Carolina (cruiser), January, 1908, in 30 months; Michigan (battleship), 1909, in 34½ months; the Delaware (battleship), October, 1909, in 27 months.

MAINTAIN SKIN PURITY.

The constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted when necessary by Cuticura Ointment, not only preserves, purifies and beautifies the skin, scalp, hair and hands of infants, children and adults, but tends to prevent clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, inflammation, irritation, redness and itching.

In the speedy and unobtrusive treatment of torturing, deflouring eczemas, rashes and eruptions of the skin and scalp, these pure, sweet and gentle emollients are invaluable. Sold throughout the world.

With the Philosophers

Diogenes Laertius.

This man's writings are not valuable in themselves, for he was not in any sense a philosopher, though he had an admiration for those who were.

His name has come down to us simply as a compiler, and a poor one at that, of other men's works. But so meagre is our information in regard to many of the early philosophers, in many cases we have only the scanty quotations which Diogenes gives us to remember them by, that we are grateful for the little he has done in giving us a large glimpse of the wise minds of those great thinkers who lived in the shadowy past.

Diogenes Laertius was born and died during the third century, A. D., and he must not be confounded with that other Diogenes, the Recluse of the Tub, who was a philosopher, though a most erratic one.

Plato. Plato once seeing a man playing at dice reproved him. "The stake is but a trifle," said the other. "Yes, but," responded Plato, "the habit is no trifle."

Once when Zeno came to Plato's house the latter bade him scourge his slave for him, saying that he could not do it himself because he was angry. Again he said to one of his slaves: "You would have had a beating if I had not been angry."

Aristotle. When asked, "What is hope?" Aristotle answered, "The dream of a man awake." Asked, "What grows old quickest?" he replied, "Gratitude." When told that someone had slandered him in his absence, he replied, "He may beat me too—in my absence." Being asked how much advantage the educated have over the ignorant, he replied, "As much as the living over the dead."

Someone asked him why he spent so much time in the society of the beautiful. "That," said he, "is a proper question for a blind man."

Once being asked how we should treat our friends, he said, "As we would wish them to treat us." Asked what a friend is, he answered, "One soul abiding in two bodies."

Demetrius said that to friends in prosperity we should go when invited, but to those in misfortune unbidden.

Someone asked Antisthenes what he gained from philosophy. "The power," said he, "to converse with myself."

People said to Diogenes, "You are an old man. Take life easy now." He replied, "And if I were running the long-distance race, should I, nearing the goal, slacken, and not rather exert myself?"

He used often to shout aloud that an easy life had been given by the gods to men, but they had covered it from sight in their search for honeycakes, perfumes and such things.

Being asked what was the proper time to marry, he responded, "For young men, not yet for old men, not at all."

Being asked why men give to beggars and not philosophers, he replied, "Because they expect themselves to become blind and lame; but philosophers, never."

Precepts of Pythagoras. Do not stir the fire with a sword. Do not devour your heart. Do not cherish birds with crooked talons.

Consider nothing exclusively your own. Destroy no cultivated tree or harmless animal. Modesty and decorum consist in never yielding to laughter, and yet not looking stern.

Diap declared he would rather decide a dispute between two enemies than between two friends. "For of two friends," he explained, "one is sure to become an enemy; but of two enemies I make a friend."

When Socrates' advice was asked whether to carry or not, he said, "Which ever you do you will regret it."

When asked what was virtue in a young man, he said, "To avoid excess in all things."

Socrates said he knew nothing beyond the fact that he knew nothing.

When he had asked rich friends to dinner, and Zantippe was ashamed, he said, "Do not be troubled. If they are sensible they will bear with us. If not, we shall care nothing about them."

When told that the Athenians had condemned him to death, he said, "And nature has condemned them thereto."

He was always temperate and austere. Once, as Pamphila tells us, Alcibiades offered him a great estate, on which to build a house; and he said, "If I needed sandals and you offered me a hide from which to make them for myself, I should be laughed at if I took it." Often, too, beholding the multitude of things for sale, he would say to himself, "How many things I do not need!" He used constantly to repeat aloud these laudible verses:

"But silver plate and garb of purple dye To actors are of use, but not in life." He was so regular in his manner of living that frequently he was the only man not ill when Athens was attacked by the plague.

JOHNNY KNEW. (Everybody's Magazine.) "Who can mention one leading fact about the Epistles?" asked the Sunday school teacher, looking over the class.

Johnny's hand went up. "Well, Johnny?" "They were the wives of the Apostles."

RORY'S READY RETORT. (Boston Transcript.) "Rory," said the minister, "I hear ye were at Danlop's kirk on Sunday last. Not that I object, ye ken, but ye wadna yersel like yin' sheep strayin' away into strange pastures."

"I wadna care, sir," said Rory, "if it was better grass."

Dogs as Deputies. For the first time in the history of Missouri two hunting dogs have been regularly designated as deputies and attached to the office of the State Game and Fish Commissioner. In a letter issued by Jesse A. Tolerton, the present Commissioner, bearing the seal of Missouri, he certifies that Lady and Queeny are regularly attached to the working force of his office and requests that they be so recognized and adequate opportunity be given them to do the work for which they are employed.

These two new State employees are of the English setter variety and their part of the work is to walk around and look wise where the game warrens suspect that game is secreted. Around railroad stations is where they are found most useful, and all that the deputy game warden has to do is to lead them through a pile of baggage, and when Lady or Queeny gives a knowing sniff and comes to a halt with her nose indicating a clue, to follow this information, confiscate the baggage and find the quail.—From the St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Who Was the Loser. A banker going home to his dinner saw a ten-dollar bill on the curbstone. He picked it up and noted the number, and went home to dinner. While at home his wife remarked that the butcher had sent a bill amounting to ten dollars. The only money he had with him was the bill he had found, which he gave to her, and she paid the butcher. The butcher paid it to the farmer for a calf, and the farmer paid it to a merchant, who in turn paid it to a washerwoman, and she, owing the banker a note of ten dollars, went to the bank and paid the note. The banker recognized the bill as the one he had found, and which up to that time had paid fifty dollars of debt. On careful investigation, he discovered that the bill was counterfeit. Now will some friend tell us what has been lost in this transaction, and by whom?

The Sea of Peace. (Ruth McEnery Stuart in the March Century.) I stand above a white-rimmed sea; Its deeps are mine, its mirrored height; Mine its low plaint of mystery; All mine its strange song of delight.

Mine its gloom-soul; Its body mine; I have me in its kind embrace; In dreams upon its buoyant brine; It gives me back a cherished face.

Mayhap it helps me understand The language of infinity, The secret of the shifting sand, The testimony of the sea.

I am above all circumstance, I am beyond all power to hurt; No more I shrink from sorrow's lance, So with all strength am I begirt.

I've tasted every bitter soup, Earth's bulwarks all are proven frail; Yet sweetened now is life's low cup, All hallowed 'tis my Holy Grail.

Above its wrecks of ships and men The placid ocean shows no scars; Above my deeps no angry storms have been, My tranquil soul reflects the stars.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia. COULDN'T FLAG ANYTHING. (Buffalo Express.) As the fire truck came clanging along in the street car tracks Uncle Ben stood at the corner and waved his hat. "Ding it!" he exclaimed, when the truck passed. "That wouldn't stop, neither."

NO TROUBLE TO FIND HIM. (Puck.) "The paper says that De Tanque presided at the banquet, but I didn't see him." "That's funny; he was right under the head of the table."
