The Nairobi Falls, which were on Heatley's Ranch, were singularly beautiful. Heatley and I visited them one evening after sunset, coming home from a day's hunt. It was a ride I shall long remember. We left our men, and let the horses gallop. As the sun set be-hind us, the long lights changed the oak of the country and gave it a beauty that had in it an element of the mysterious and the unreal. The mountains loomed both larger and more vague than they had been in the bright sunlight, and the plains lost their look of parched desolation as the afterglow came and went. We were galloping through a world of dim shade and dying color; and, in this world, our horses suddenly halted on the brink of a deep ravine from out of which came the thunder of a cataract. We reined in on s jutting point. The snowy masses of the fall foamed over a ledge on our right, and below at our feet was a great pool of swirling water. Thick foliaged trees, of strange shape and festooned with creepers, climbed the sheer sides of the ravine. A black and white engle perched in a blasted tree-top in front; and the bleached skull of a longdead rhinoceros glimmered white near the brink to one side. On another occasion we took our lunch at the foot of Rowero Falls. These are not as high as the falls of the Nairobi, but they are almost as beautiful. We clambered down into the ravine a little distance below and made our way toward them, beside the your best-you are bound to enjoy all brawling, rock-choked torrent. Great the happiness of lasting good health of trees towered overhead, and among screeched. The fall itself was broken in two parts like a miniature Niagara, and the spray curtain shifted to and fro as the wind blew.—From "African Game Trails." by Theodore Roosevelt, in the February Scribner.

PSCHYIC SCIENCE.

When the latest victim of a psychics spell heard that the man she was tagging around the country had said to his wife. I have the right pig by the tail at last," she realized that he was not her true soul-mate, but a base counterfell and she promptly emancipated herself from psychic influences and settled the alienation suit which the wife had instituted. It looks as though the psychic influences were of a very commonplace character, and that the soulmate business were not distinguishable from ordinary forms of sentimentality. The fact that the girl has $3,000,000 explains the efforts to hypnotize her.

Motor Boats in Venice.

Has the mayor, or the doge, of Venice gone mad? Surely something must have happened to him, or he would not side with motor boats as against gondolas. Venice without gondolas is much worse than Hamlet without the prince or apple pie without apples. In other words it is not Venice. Cannot the ruler of that unique city see that it is the gondolas that make it attractive to the tourist who spends his money within her canals? A few of us would go to Venice to see its works of art, its cathedrals and its palaces, but many of us go for the romance of the gondola. To get right down to the dollar-andcents value of the city-and it is the tourist that takes the money to Venice -how much more attractive the gondola makes it than the motor boat. Can you imagine loafing on the grand canal in a noisy motor boat? or do you think there would be any music in "O Sole Mio" sung from and to the accompaniment of a put-put? The class of tourists who prefer the motor boat to the gondola are a cheap, ignoble class, who 'do' a famous town in a day, and then rush on to the next. They do not stay and spend their money in the luxury of loafing among the fascinations of a dead past. They are the sort that tell you "New York's good enough for me." And so it is-perhaps too good. I would rather three weeks of Venice than a cycle of Cathay, but I would not stay there three minutes if I had to go about in a motor boat.—Jeannette Gilder in Putnam's.

PITY YOUR MOTHER

The heroic side of life is most often found in the struggle between duty towards the family, and the mother's in-ability through ill-health to perform that duty.

"Words sometimes seem poor things writes Mrs. to express one's feelings," writes Mrs. J. P. Merritt. "I have a family of five, all pretty close together. Hadn't a String.

It is related in the New York Telegram that a party was camped on the Bear River in Eastern Utah, when a prospector came along one morning on a mule. He had his jaw tied up, and at first seemed inclined to pass on without a word. On second thought, however, he halted and gruffly queried:

"How fur to Salt Lake?" "Three hundred miles."

"Humph!" "Travelled far?"

'About two hundred miles."

"Get your jaw hurt?" "No, it's just an infernal toothache.

and I'm riding five hundred miles to get it pulled." We invited him down and one of the crowd got a piece of string round the tooth and jerked it out as slick as you please. After the overjoyed man had ceased dancing about, I queried: "Why didn't you try the string before starting out on such a long ride?" "Best kind of reason, sir. I hadn't

"My name's Johnson. I kissed your wife."

"That's not rhyme," protested Lister contemptuously. "I know it isn't," admitted Johnson meekly-"but it's

Maine Checker Makers .-

It seems inconceivable that two men can be kept steadily employed the year round making checkers. Yet that is what is done in a mill at Bethel. The verage output of checkers from mill is 800 barrels. It has been as high as 1,000 and down to 600, but 800 is the average. This does not sound very large, but when the figures are worked out it is found to bet a lot. In every barrel shipped there are 30,000 checkers of the ordinary size, while in 800 barrels there are 28,800,000, or 1,200,000 sets of 24 checkers each. That is to say, with the output of this Maine mill 2,400,000 persons could be playing checkers at the same time.—Kennebec Jour-

That is the gist heard in the pipes of steam heating of the letter I have received from a she had never seen. "There are lots of us out here," he writes, "who have good prospects and comfortable homes, but have no time to go East looking for wives. We are lonely and need companionship. Can't something be done to bring us in touch with the girls who really want homes of their own and who are willing to give up something in the way of luxury?" Hot Water Tanks Need Most Careful off on a coat sleeve!-Sketch. Watching.

The hot water tank or boiler attached to the kitchen range to now found in many country as well as city houses. This supplies hot water as long as sufficient fuel is burner, to heat it, and takes away the burden of filling kettles and small boilers about the stove, which fill the room unpleasantly with steam. Some of the boilers are of copper, but nore are of galvanized iron, well riveted. When having a boiler put in, it is well to see that it is of proper weight, and guaranteed to do its work. Thirty gallons is sufficient capacity for a family's use in kitchen, laundry and bathroom.

Sometimes there is a snapping or thumping sound in the boiler, which is npleasant to hear and seems to forebode disaster. It is like the sound and is due to air left in the boiler at the first filling with water. A plumber will remedy the trouble. When a continuous coal fire is kept many hours a loud rumbling sound is heard unless considerable water is used. The house worker fears an ex Josion and indeed, if the pressure is not removed and the boiler has any weak spots, such an accident may happen. If the faucet is opened, steam and boiling water will escape and be replaced by cold water.

When water in a stationary boiler is to be heated by gas select a heater which is lighted by opening a door or slide and applying a match directly to the burner. There are several of this opportunity of meeting girls from whom kind made and they are all much better than the old style in which the pilot light conveyed the flame to the gas.

One caution must be reiterated concerning the kitchen boiler. Never under any consideration use the water for cooking or drinking. This command must be given to the hired workers, and then the mistress must remember the value of eternal vigilance. I have known a trained nurse to draw hot water directly from the kitchen boiler for use in preparing her patient's food. If you have ever seen the inside and base of an old boiler when discarded the foul condition would make a deep impression. Most people forget that the boiler can never be cleaned out, although the water may be drawn off by the faucet in the pipe below. The most important reason why the water should not be used in food is that in putting up a boiler, and making connections, the plumber uses red lead, and it is impossible to do so without contamination of the water. That lead remains in and about the boiler as a constant menace if the water is taken for either food or beverage. Mysterious cases of lead poisoning have been traced to this

The Art of the Cartoonist.

One thing is certain; in order to obtain a successful result very careful observation is necessary, whether draws ing from Nature or memory. In studying a subject, weakness or strength of character should be grasped first; but almost equally important is to note every detail of dress—the shape and pitch of a hat, for instance for these are essential to the caricature. Self-consciousness, and sometimes nervousness, shows itself in various ways. The fact is that few men know what they appear to be to others. I have known a peer express an objection to being drawn with spats, because he did not consider they looked well in a picture, although he always wore them. Future of Calcium.

It has been pointed out that, although calcium is the metal next to iron in natural abundance, chemists and metallurgists are only just beginning to appreciate its possibilities. The ore costs but a few cents a ton for quarrying, since it occurs in inexhaustible quantity, as pure calcium carbonate in limestone, chalk, and marble, and the production of the metal is the special task of the electrochemist. At temperatures above red heat calcium is the strongest metallic base, and it is believed by many that by its use many problems may find their solution. such as the complete deoxidation of melted metals and the reduction of rare elements. The metal calcium may also, as aluminium has done, find many uses in the arts.
