"Dogs are God's creatures with an intelligence but little lower than our own: they are moreover dumb and helpless and should appeal to ever noble-hearted person for protection. The curse of the world is heartlessness, selfishiness and brutality, but to the dear legend of the rabid dog man clings as to the last hope of faith. A long and lurid and most lamentable chapter must be added to the history of popular delusions upon the subject of mad dog. Nowadays when a dog is called mad by some street arab or Dunken hobe, the result is the usual scare about mad dogs. Quarantine is declared; the muzzling order goes intoeffect, and a pound is established where unmuzzled dogs are confined, with the privilege of the owner redeeming them at a fancy price, if he happens to be well enough off to do so.

"Sooner or later the owner of a dog misses his pet. He visits the pound and there finds his faithful servant. The dog looks up anxiously, longingly, hopefully. In his heart the man knows the dog is saying, 'Master, I shall not die, unless you will it; your power is omnipotent. MAPPY DAYS FOR BABY.

The healthy child is always a happy child. All its little troubles vanish when its food digests properly and it is free from child-ish ailments. Most of these ailments come from stomach or bowel troubles, colds, feverishness, teething and worms. Baby's Own Tablets promptly cure all these troubles and keep little ones well. Mrs. W. G. Martin, Ravenscliffe, Que., says, "I have used Baby's Own Tablets in my home for the the best of health. I can recommend them to every mother as a sure cure for the little troubles of childhood." How to Get a Coonskin Coat.

Coonskin overcoats are within the reach of Minnesotans who will spend a few days in the woods with a coal oil barrel and some parsnips, according to J. L. Ferguson, a trapper, who lives in the vicinity of Cass Lake.

"If you'll go to the timbered district," he said, sink a coal oil barrel two-thirds of its length in the ground, suspend a parsnip over it about a foot from the top and leave it over night, you should catch at least one coon, and possibly three The head of the barrel must be removed, and there must still be traces of coal oil on the inside, so the staves will be slick. The coon will be attracted by the smell of the parsnip (there is nothing a coon likes better): he will climb the outside of the barrel and in trying to stand on the rim and reach the suspended parsnip wil fall in. There is no possibility of his climbing out.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Muskrat Nearly Extinct.

Persons in this locality who are engaged in hunting and trapping fur bearing animals for profit state that in this section at least the muskrat is nearly extinct. Old trappers claim that until recent years this little animal was considered the most plentiful of the fur bearing varieties, and at that time the skin of a muskrat was worth from 10 cents to 20e each. Now the price is different, as some trappers have sold their season's catch for 60 cents each. This high price is what has nearly exterminated this animal by causing all kinds of trappers to make a specialty of the musl rat, which has been hunted so earnest ly that there are few left to breed from. Many predict that for years to come the muskrat, like the quail, will be difficult to find.—Manchester Correspondence Rochester Herald

A Church in a Rock.

In the quaint old German town of Oberstein an ancient church stands, built in the great rock rising from the river. The front of the building is of stone, but the church itself is hollowed out of the rock and penetrates far into its heart. Tradition says that in the fourteenth century the Count of Oberstein. one of the old robber barons, fell deeply in love with a beautiful young lady, the daughter of a neighboring knight.

His brother also sought the fair maiden's hand and the two suitors had a violent quarrel. The upshot was that the count flung his hapless brother from the top of his castle wall, high up the precipitous cliff. Repenting of his awful deed, past four years, and since using the count vowed that he would build a them my little ones have enjoyed church where his brother's body first touched the ground. He did so, excevat ing the church in the rock; and tradition goes on to say a miraculous spring of clear water sprang from the crag as a token that heaven was appeased. This curious church is now the only Protestant place of worship in the town.-Wide World Magazine.

The Washerwoman's Song.

In a very humble cot, In a rather quiet spot, In the suds and in the soap Worked a woman full of hope; Working singing, all alone, In a sort of undertone; With the Saviour for a friend He will keep me to the end

Semetimes happening along, I had heard the semi-song, And I often used to smile More in sympathy and guile; But I never said a word In regard to what I hear, As she sang about her friend Who would keep her to the end.

Not in sorow nor in glee Working al day long was she, As her children, three of four, Played around her on the floor; But in monotones the song She was humming all day long: With the Saviour for a friend, He will keep me to the end."

It's a song I do not sing, For I scare believe a thing Of these tories that are told Of the miracles of old; But I know that her belief Is the anodyne of grief, And will always be a friend

Just a trifle lonesome she. Just as poor as poor can be, but her spirits always rose Like the bubbles in the clothes, And, though widowed and alone, Cheered her with the monotone Of a Saviour and a friend Who would keep her to the end.

I have seen her rub and scrub On the washboard in the tub, On the washboard in the tub, While the baby sopped in suda, Rolled and tumbled in the duds, Or was paddling in the pools With old scissors stuck in specis, She was humming of her friend Who would keep her to the end.

Human hopes and human creeds Have their root in human needs: And I would not wish to strip From that washerwoman's lip Any song that she can sing,
Any hope that song can bring,
For the woman has a friend
Who will keep her to the end.

Lying Two Weeks on a Wire.

India is blessed-or perhaps, cursedwith the largest congregation of itinerant beggars of any country in the world. These mendicants, or ascetics, as they are usually called, are in a sense religious fanaties, who inflict bodily tortures on themselves with the dual idea of performing certain religious functions and also of calling attention to themselves with the view of receiving alms from curious and devout passersby.

A man will remain suspended on thin taut wire, supported by two bamboo poles, for lengthy periods, often a fortnight. Below, on the ground, lies outspread the mat upon which he receives the contributions of the sympathetic crowd.-The Wide World Maga-

Reform by Suicide.

The course of true reform never runs smooth—not even in China. Not long ago Yunk Lin, a Chinese patriot, despondent over the rapidity with which everything was going to the Chinese terriers, wrote a long letter to the Emperor-regent complaining about things in general. To add emphasis to his remarks he committed suicide. The Government, in recognition of his patriotic devotion, issued an edict in his honor, but whether it has taken any steps toward the reforms he suggested the despatch does not state. The letter of protest is said to be one of the most remarkable pieces of muckraking on record. "Rice," said the ardent reformer in one choice passage, "has become as dear as pearls, and firewood as costly as cas-

Oldest Bank Notes. At the Bank of England privileged visitors are sometimes shown the oldest known bank note, for £555, with the date "19th Xber, 1699." The memoranda written across the note show that payment was made by three instalments. The watermark can be clearly seen, and in texture and general appearance the notes were very similar to those of to-day.—London Globe.

Is a Bird Superior to a Beast? What is the bill of a bird and what does it mean? I do not refer to the bill of a hawk, or a heron, or an owl, or an ostrich, but to that which is the abstract of all these and a thousand more. I hold, regardless of anatomy zette. and physiclogy, that a bird is a higher being than a beast. No beast soars and sings to its sweetheart; no beast remains in lifelong partnership with the wife of its youth; no beast builds itself a summer house and decks it with fea. thers and bright shells. A beast is a groveling denizen of the earth; a bird is a free citizen of the air. And who can say that there is not a connection between this difference and other developments? The beast, thinking only of its appetites, has evolved a delicate nose, a discriminating palate, three kinds of gets all the money in the country, and salivary glands to moisten the same and a perfected apparatus of digestion. The bird, occupied with thoughts of love and tains" and "shapes of sky or plain," has made little advance in the art and instruments of good living. It swallows its food whole, scarcely knowing the taste of it, and a pair of forcips for picking it up, tipped and cased with horn, is the whole of its dining furniture. For the bill of a bird, primarily and essentially, is that and nothing else. In the chickens and the sparrows that come to steal their food, and the robin that looks on, and all the little dickybirds, you may see it in its simplicity. The size and shape may vary, as a Canadian ax differs from a Scotch ax; some are short and stout and have a sharp edge for shelling seeds; some are longer and fine-pointed, for picking worms and caterpillars out of their hiding-places; some a little booked at their points, and one, that of the crossbill, with points crossed for picking the small seeds out of fir-cones; but all are practically the same tool. Yet the last distinctly points the way to those modifications by which the simple bill is gradually adapted to one special purpose or another, until it becomes a wonderful mechanism in which the original intention is quite out of sight.—From "Bills of Birds," in the February Strand Magazine.

USE OF GLASS BRICKS.

Germany uses glass bricks for building purposes with measurable success. In Berlin is constructed a small vills, the walls of which are built of glass bricks of several shades of dark green and blue. The glass bricks are especially adapted to construction where light, cleanliness and neatness are particularly in demand. In Hamburg they are utilized in place of windows. They admit light in walls which police regulations require to be fireprofo and windowless.

In addition to admitting light to dark

In addition to admitting light to dark hallways, rooms, etc., they are said to possess the same strength as ordinary clay bricks. They are also utilized in walls in yards and partitions in the interior of houses, sales rooms, offices, workshops, etc., as well as for the con-struction of verandahs, hothouses, kiosks, bath rooms, hospitals, ice factor ies, butcher shops, railroad stations, coating for fireproof walls. In some of the recently erected buildings in Milan, Italy, bricks made of glass have been adopted for ground and upper floors on account of the light obtained. They are also coming into use for partition work in some of the hospitals on account of hygienic principles.

In one of the leading banking institutions of the city of Turin the lobby of-fice floor, which is about 36x58 feet, is entirely paved with glass bricks laid in iron frames for the purpose of admitting light into the basement, where are located numerous private boxes or vaults. In the Netherlands hollow green transparent bricks are used principally for light giving purposes in machine shops and conservatories.—Chicago Tribune.

HOW NOT TO WRITE.

There are several ways of writing to a newspaper, and more than several ways in which it is wise not to write. The greatest fault to be found with the average communication is that it invites the pigeon-hole by reason of its length, and because it takes two or three pages of foolscap to say what could have been condensed into a few sentences. Sometimes, however, the writer transgresses in more than the matter of space.
