They're telling a story on Barney Oldfield that's so rich it will spill if kept much long vr.

The speed king carries quite a layout when he's burning up the tracks, and among the party are W. H. Picktheir business to work the publicity thing, make contracts-and get the money.

Sloan quit a job editing a sport page in St. Paul some months ago to hook up with Oldfield and Pickens. In his more callow days Sloan, who is known as "Tod" to his intimates, played football, and incidentally joined the Eata Pica Pies or some other fraternity.

Everywhere he goes Sloan runs across brothers of the mystic letters, and being a genial soul, always has a bunch of the brothers in tow. Which leads up to the story.
One of Oldfield's stunts, when reaching a town where he has a race date, is to drive from the railway to the track in his racing machine. Sloan, who does the advance business, is always on hand to ride with Barney, and having been in town several days, is usually accompanied to the depot by a retinue.

"It got to be something of a chestnut for Barney," says Pickens, who tells the yarn, "for Sloan to invite three or four friends to hop on and slide out to the track. Oldfield would look back, and lean over to 'Tod' and say, 'Nix, nix, Tod, chase 'em.'

"She-h-h-h,' Sloan would say,
'They're frat brothers.' This kept up for several weeks. Every day in the hotel Barney'd see half a dozen of the fellows with pins like the one Sloan sported, hanging around, fan-ning with 'Tod,' and finally his curiosity could stand it no longer, and he came to me.
"Say, Pick. whatinhell's this frat thing Sloan's always shooting at me?"

"'Why, it's a secret society he belongs to,' I replied. 'He joined in college.'

Barney looked about the hotel lobby where Sloan was in the middle of about a hundred enthusiasts, all bound for the track. Finally he burst out with, 'Say, this frat is a daisy. It must be almost as strong as the Elks or Eagles, isn't it?"

Jim's Cost a Dollar More.

Richard Le Gallienne, the poet, was entertaining a group of magazine editors at luncheon in New York. To a compliment upon his fame Mr. Le Gallienne said lightly:

But what is poetical fame in this age of prose? Only yesterday a school boy came and asked me for my autograph. I assented willingly. And to-day, at breakfast time, the boy again presented himself. "Will you give me your autograph,

A MOTHER'S ANXIOUS TIME

Promptness Saved her Child

"My daughter was in the last term of her High School work when it suddenly and forcibly dawned upon me that her little cough had been hanging on, even in spite of the warm weather. Looking at her anxiously, for a fear had come into my mind, I saw she had grown pale and a lot thinner. It seemed queer I hadn't noticed it all along before, ens and J. Alex. Sl. ... Both are big away. What an awful risk for parents men. Pickens is sig around like a to take! Of course, I didn't tell her second-term aldermae, and Sloan is how anxious I was, but I watched the big on the Jim Corbett lines. It's effect of Ferrozone with the utmost anxiety. My girl seemed so slow to improve, and the first two weeks seemed like a year. By this time not even the first box of Ferrozone had been used up, still she had greatly improved appetite, and her progress after that was splendid. When the weather improved she walked a lot, and gained steadily in vigor and weight. The hacking cough disappeared, and with it every trace of weakness. I know of no tonic so nourishing, strength-giving, so beneficial for growing girls as 'Ferrozone.'

Not only for girls, but for all who are weak, tired, pale, run down and in repressed spirits—there is no medicine so eure to to win back vigorous health as 'Ferrozone." Try it, one or two tablets at meals; 50c. per box, six for $2.50, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Why Didn't He Speak?

He was a countryman in London on ousiness, says Cassell's Journal. He was walking down the street for something to buy as a present for his wife. In passing a bird shop his eye was caught by a parrot.

It was priced at £5 and warranted to talk. The countryman bought it, and as he had to stay a week he sent it on to his wife by rail., When he returned he asked his wife how she liked the bird. "He was a mighty pretty bird, but pow-ful tough."

"Tough? You don't mean to say you have eaten that bird?" "Eat that bird? O course I have."

"My stars! Why, woman, that bird cost a fiver, and could talk like a law-"Well, if that bird could talk when I had him by the neck, and was a-goin' to wring his neck, why didn't he say

Sir William's Mistake.

"Sir William Harcourt once told me that he had dined out every night for a whole week in advance of his invitations. He only discovered his mistake on the last night, when, on going to dine with some people who gave long invitations and large dinners, he found them alone.

"After a very pleasant evening he thanked them for asking him in so friendly a manner, whereupon they explained that the invitation had been for a week later, but that they had been only too delighted at his mistake. "On hearing this, Sir William looked at his engagement book and discovered that this was the last of a number of invitations which he had anticipated by a week."-Sir Henry Lucy's Memoirs.

"Window-Leaves." Dr. R. Marloth has discovered in South

Africa six species of plants that possess "window leaves." They are all stemless succulents, and the egg-shaped leaves are embedded in the ground, only the apexes remaining visible. This visible part of the leaves is flat or convex on the surface, and colorless, so that the light can penetrate it and reach the interior of the leaf below, which is green on the inside. With the exception of the blunt apex, no part of the leaf is permeable to the light, being surrounded by the soil in which it is buried.

Miss Barrymore's Admirer.

Miss Ethel Barrymore's marriage has not affected her popularity. The proof of this lies in a pretty story.

Every night during an engagement in Boston a tiny bunch of violets was sent to her. She always left the violets in her dressing room, but one night she pinned the purple violets to her belt, and the following day, when the usual fresh bouquet came to her, this scrawl came with

"Dere Friend Miss Barrymore: I seen you wear my vilets, so I know you got them. To-night look at me. I will be in top gallery first roe in my shirt sleeves and my legs hanging over the front of the galary."

mantle of Miss Maud Allan has welfice Stewart Richardson, who made her professional debut at the Palace Music Hall in a series of Greek dances. Very scanty and gauzy is the mantle, and English society assembled in the boxes and stalls gasped when this lery and foyer of the theatre.

Lady "Connie's" dancing is of course a combination of the methods of Maud Allan and Isadora Duncan, though she lessons from either. She lacks the light ness and grace of Maud Allan and the technique of Miss Duncan. In fact, physical rather than poetical culture is expressed in her emotions, and you could more easily fancy her an amazon arrayed for the hunt than a Greek nymph dancing for sheer joy of life.

Curtains of pale blue draped the stage of the theatre and formed a background for Lady Constance, whose single garment was of the same shade of blue and fell a little below her knees. Her legs and feet were bare, after the approved fashion of this style of dancing. Her repertoire included a gay spring dance to Grieg music, a marchlike tri umphant movement with Tschaikowski accompaniment, a funeral dance to Beethoven's "Marche Funebre" and a gay polka to Waltenfald's "Bonne Bouch." In the last she was most at Lady Connie's reason for entering into the professional arena is that she wants to raise money to start a school where boys will be educated according to her theories. She wants to have them trained physically as well as mentally with most time spent on outdoor exercises, sports and games of skill and strength. Ber entire salary will be devoted to the furtherance of this scheme. There are of course suggestions that burrowing wasps, and feeds its larvae the Cromartie family, of which she is a member, is among the richest in Scotland and might have raised money to help her in her purpose, and that the Stewart-Richardsons, who are far from impoverished, would have aided had they been asked, so that Lady Constance need not have trod the boards in such chilly garments to achieve her desire. There are other persons who suggest that after having secured a reputation as a huntress of big game in African wilds, as an expert horsewoman, and as champion woman swimmer of England, this restless daughter of the house of Cromartie longs for new worlds to conquer, and hence her professional debut.

little or nothing, yet fortunes are now and will continue to be made from new and practical ideas.

In most cases the causes of failure to realize expectations will be found, says Popular Mechanics, in the natural tendency of an inventor to magnify the possibilities and minimize the difficulties of selling his invention. While an occasional "find" is made by some one working along a line in which he is poorly informed, hundred waste time and money edveloping some device which, when finished, proves to be either old or without demand.

If the inventor would have his attorey make a search of the records before instead of after completing his invention he would save money and be able to work out his ideas along different lines from those already protected by patents.

HORSE BLOOD A STYPTIC

That the blood of a horse has the peculiar property of acting like a styptic and assisting the formation of a cicatrix when applied to fresh wounds is a fact well known to the medical profession. The difficulty about its application has hitherto been how to obtain fresh, germ free horse blood in an emergency.

Doctors Robert and Chody at a recent meeting of the Therapeutical Society in Paris gave demonstrations with a powder obtained by a new antiseptic method from the blood of sound, healthy horses which has preserved the styptic properties. Dissolved in water it acts n the same way as fresh horse blood. This dried blood powder, it is declared by Drs. Robert and Chody, is also efficacious taken internally as a cure for hemorrhage.

Preserving Flour. A new method of preserving flour has recently been adopted with success in England. It is done by means of compression. With hydraulic apparatus the flour is squeezed into the forms of bricks and the pressure destroys all forms of larval life, thus preserving the flour from the ravages of insects, while it is equally secure from mould. Three hundred pounds of compressed flour occupy the same space as one hundred pounds in the ordinary state.

Telegraph Poles From Russia. There was a time when the needs of the British Post-office in the way of poles to support the overhead telegraphs to the United Kingdom were met solely from Norway. But to-day Norway's tailest pines are not forthcoming in sufficient numbers to meet the demands of the expanding service—demands averaging 50,000 pales per annum. Sweden was duly laid under contribution, and now Russia has become a valuable source of supply. It was in 1905 that this source was opened up by the present Comptroller of Stores, who visited Russia for the purpose. The poles come not only from the forests that feed the Baltic ports, but from those in the White Sea hinterland .- From St. Martin's-le-Grand.
