A TRIP.

On the 3rd of July, 1909 I left Toronto on the steamer Turbins, which, by the way, is a very staunch and seaworthy craft. On going aboard I made myself known to the Commander and informed and informed him that I had run a "tab" myself for many years, and from before the mast I had climbed to the proud position of Master and obtained the highest class certificate as Master of a steamship on the great lakes in the gift of our Dominion. It is customary when one Captain goes on a voyage on the vessel of another for the Captain of the ship to be courteous to his brother officer and show him over his craft, and to invite his guest to make himself at home. On this occasion no courtesies were extended and I was not escorted over the ship, but I took the liberty to make a pretty thorough inspection. (I had heard a lady say that as far as she was a judge that a little more attention to cleanliness would be desirable.) I found the ladies cabin the pink of neatness and a great credit to the Stewardess who, by the way, was very good looking and claimed to have seen but a little over twenty-five summers.
She treated me very courteously and from memory gave me an account of many incidents of the Fenian raid. She must have seen considerable over twenty-five summers. The dining room Steward was very affable and piloted me over his domain, which I found in fairly good order. The waiters very attentive, the food well cooked but exceedingly plain considering the charge for meals.
But it may be the steamboat owners are poor and could afford no better menue.
I found all the other parts of the boat in fairly good condition except the smoking room on the hurricane deck, which was quite untidy. Two men were enjoying a smoke, but where they were to ex-pectorate (except on the floor) was no conundrum to me, as there were no spittoons in sight. All the officers I came in contact with were courteous and obliging except the one I first mentioned. I arrived in Hamilton and embarked on an open car of the Hamilton Street Railway.
The cars may have been with Noah or they may have not, I cannot say as I was not on board that craft. I took the N.
& R. W. R. R. for Port Dover where I arrived at 8.40 p.m. At the station I found all the crew of my Tug the W. P.
Trebble (who were in my employ twenty-six years ago) waiting to meet me. Time had made a great change in their appearance but their hearts were the same as in the long ago, and I received a welcome I will never forget, it was cordiality itself.
We proceeded to the residence of Charles Low (which, by the way, is in Jarvis some) where a supper had been prepared for us. I began to feel by my order, and after a lapse of twenty-six years we gathered around the same board. John Gordon, editor and proprietor of the Port Dover Herald, joined us at my request and we spent a very enjoyable evening. About 11 o'clock we broke up and went to the wharf where Captain Frank Jackson was awaiting me with his gasoline launch. I went aboard and soon we were out on the bosom of Old Erie bound for Turkey Point where we arrived at 1.30 a.m. The Captain piloted me to his home where his wife and family made me so welcome that I felt quite at home. Here I spent two days which were among the most enjoyable of my life. Dr. Chamberlain of Grand Rapids, Mich., (son of an old friend of mine) was the guest of the Captain and we went to Long Point and spent a day fishing. I returned to Port Dover on the evening of the 5th and was the guest for night of T. H. Ivey, Esq. (my wife's brother). Next day I visited T. A. Ivey, Esq. (cousin of my wife) who escorted me over his large florist plant. He took me for a spin in his elegant yacht. He and I agree on many points, but going out for pleasure in a gasoline launch on Sundays is a point on which we differ, I holding it is Sabbath breaking. I called on my old-time friend, T. B. Barret, Esq., customs officer for nearly forty years. I found him well although past twenty-two years old. In the evening I went to Jarvis and spent the night with Mr. Henry Jackson and family (cousin of my wife). Next morning I left for home where I arrived about 5 o'clock p. m., having had an exceedingly enjoyable trip.
CAPT. W. M. ALDERSON.

Seven Men Killed in Explosion at Crump, Mich.

With a roar that could be heard for several miles the eighty-horse power boiler in the Princes saw mill, near the village of Crump, blew up on Thursday morning, Feb. 10th, and six men were killed outright, while a seventh died this afternoon. The mill, which consists of a single circular saw, edgers, slab saws and the usual equipment of a country mill, is a total wreck, and the home of Levi Prin-cing, the owner, was damaged almost beyond repair.

Oscar Shoup, aged 20, of Maple Grove, Saginaw county, is one of those who lost his life. Mr. Shoup was a grandson of Charles Shoup, late of Hagersville.

Frank Ivey, a second cousin of Richard and John Ivey of this place, had both legs broken, and is not likely to recover.

Levi Prinzing the owner of the mill is a nephew of Mrs. Louis Miller of Jarvis.
Of the dozen men employed about the plant only two or three escaped uninjured, while two occupants of Prinzing's house were hurt by flying bricks.

The mill started work about 7 o'clock this morning, and had sawed but three logs when it shut down because of some difficulty with the engine. The employ-all flocked to the fire room, and had scarcely gotten inside the structure when the boiler blew up. It is said that the firemen, who is among the dead, started the injector running, and that the explosion followed almost instantly, indicating that the water was low in the boiler.

The havoc wrought by the explosion was terrific. Scarcely a vestige of the mill is left standing. Prinzing's house stood about 40 feet from the mill and the side nearest the mill was blown in, the roof raised up, and then settled back in to place, and the whole interior of the house seems to be a wreck.

The force of the explosion was felt at Crump nearly two miles away, and several people in the village saw the debris as it flew up into the air.

Nearly all the dead and injured in the mill lived in the immediate vicinity, and as the full import of the disaster was felt by the families of the victims the sorrow and grief of the members became pitiful.

The mill is located a mile west and a mile north of the village of Crump, where the nearest telephone is found, and where Dr. Horne who was the first physician on the scene, lives. Doctors Ballard and Synder were summoned from Auburn, but owing to the bad roads, they were some time in reaching the scene. Dr.
Horne more than had his hands full caring for the injured, aided women of the whole hearts were strong enough to stand the ordeal.

All the dead live in the immediate vicinity of the mill excepting Oscar Shoup, who is a cousin of L. L. Prinzing, and who arrived at the latter's home for a visiting yesterday. His home is in Maple Creek township, Saginaw county.

Probably the most fortunate of all the men about the mill was John Ivey, father of the boy who had both legs broken. He was among those who went into the fire room, but he remained but a moment or two and then went into the back part of the mill, escaping with only a few scratches from falling timbers.
