

Among the Jews

The Russian Hebrew journals report that ten wealthy mercantile of Novorodostianov, in Poldolia, have formed a company to acquire land in Mesopotamia, and have sent out two experts to investigate the country.

There is a great deal of rathos in commenting on the recent visit of the Prince Eitel Friedrich, the second son of the Kaiser, to the Holy City. Prince Eitel had gone to Jerusalem to dedicate the new German Hospice and Sanatorium on the Mount of Olives. The Jewish population of the city form more than half the total number of inhabitants. But they and their institutions were forgotten during the pomp and ceremony of the holy visit. The glorious Jewish traditions which clung to the country were barely mentioned. The grand procession of Catholics wound its way up the sides of Mount Zion, chanting, as they went, "R-Joice, oh daughter of Zion," but the daughters of Zion had been hustled to the back of the crowd, where they stood "cringing in poverty and neglect." It is a grim little picture, a vivid epitome of two thousand years of Jewish history; and the crowning touch is added by the growth of anti-Jewish feeling in Palestine, one German (of Jaffa) complaining bitterly that the continued influx of Jews into the country is taking the bread out of the mouths of the Germans in Palestine, and calling for the expulsion of these undesirable aliens (1).

The closing scenes of the Russian Rabbinical Conference could not fail to impress the most skeptical observer with the cordial tone that pervaded the assembly, in spite of the prediction of the Orthodox party that co-operation with the Progressive wing was an impossibility.

The statistics show that during the past year 601 Jewish books, thirteen newspapers and nine magazines were published in Russia.

The Court of Cassation will shortly hear the appeal of the Rabbi, Dr. Nemirovitch and Dr. Taubes, of Jassy, against the penalty of a fine inflicted on them for having refused to take part in the administration of the oath more Judaico (word of a Jew).

M. Friedman and M. Rodicheff both endeavored to persuade the Douma to reject the clause of the Building Bill, which grants permission to build houses only to those who have the right to own land in that particular place. The first vote was declared to be favorable to the amendment. At a recess, however, the amendment of M. Friedman was rejected by 113 votes to 112. Several deputies afterwards stated that they did not know the question was before them when they divided the second time.

The Real Russians have announced that in reply to the bill for the removal of the Pale, they will introduce a measure into the Douma excluding Jews from all schools, professions, army and guilds, and prohibiting them from editing papers and owning houses and factories.

The Prussian Diet recently discussed the grievances of several Jewish communities. It was pointed out that in some cities the Jewish community is much scattered, therefore, the number of Jewish students at each school is less than the number which enables the community to claim government grant towards their religious education. The Government said that this trouble would have to be met by a special bill. The Ministry was well disposed towards the Jewish children.

The Queen-Mother of Holland recently paid a visit to the Home for Aged Jews at The Hague. Her Majesty was received by Alderman J. Simons, the President of the Home, and escorted by him and the Master and Matron, she went through the whole building. Her Majesty spoke a few kindly words to each of the inmates, and presented all with bouquets of flowers. On leaving the Queen handed a sum of money to the President, to enable the inmates to have a special treat.

More Weddings in Lent.

Lenten marriages are now frequent. This year several well known couples have been married in Lent, and 1869 saw the splendid bridal of Lord and Lady Douro during the sacred season. As a nation we seem to have outgrown the belief that a wedding which took place during the forty days would bring in its train ill luck or misfortune, and there is a royal precedent in favor of this date, as the marriage of their Majesties the King and Queen was celebrated in the Lenten weeks of 1823. "There was no Lent when I was young," is a remark said to have been made by the late Queen Victoria when a certain Bishop issued a slight protest against some proposed fixtures during the penitential period, and facts prove that the rigid observance of Lent dates from the later years of the last century.—From the Gentlewoman.

Ladies as Churchwardens. The lady church warden is not the "rare avis" that was generally supposed. The ladies whose names have been recorded in this column as church wardens are Mrs. Lucker Lampton, of Cophthorne, and Miss M. F. Verrill, of Walsgrave-on-Awne, Warwickshire. We believe a lady church warden serves at Castle Rising, Norfolk, says the London Globe. Through the courtesy of S. J. Palmer, of Wells, we are enabled to add to the list the name of Mrs. Joyce, the wife of the rector of East Pennard, who, having acted as church warden for the past ten months, was on Tuesday evening last, reappointed at the statutory vestry meeting to that position.

A Royal Abbe.

The Grand Duchess Sergius in becoming abbess of a convent has followed the example set by several members of the Austrian Royal family. The Archduchess Elizabeth, the only child of the Crown Prince Rudolph, was up to the time of her marriage abbess of the convent of St. Theresa at Prague. The post is of quasi-episcopal dignity, for the holder, when the Emperor of Austria is crowned King of Bohemia, is deputed to crown the Empress. The archduchess used to appear at all state functions in her conventional garb and carrying a pastoral staff. With a mitre perched on her curly head the seventeen-year-old abbess made a picturesque figure.—London Chronicle.

A Little Wisdom Here and There.

You can turn a crank down, but he always turns up.

A woman is extolled for her virtues, and adored for her weaknesses.

While mere talent passes outside the threshold, genius enters in and makes a successful bluff.

Half the world doesn't know what excites the other half but for living.

The man who draws on his imagination should not overlook to pin "no protest" to his draft.

The world expects a man to make a fool of himself over a woman, but it never forgives a woman who makes a fool of herself over a man.

To know thyself is wisdom; to know how not to impart that knowledge to others—that's cleverness.

Marry for money, and you wish you had married for love; marry for love, and you wish you had married for money.

You never really know a woman until after you have married her, and then the knowledge isn't of much use to you.

True consistency is a jewel; and the most charming women display the least jewelry.

Love in a cottage is romantic, but no more woman objects to rose-colored silk curtains at the windows.

You can't tell a man's character by his clothes, but you can often judge a woman's lack of it by hers.

There is but one thing worse than ignorance, and that is incorrect knowledge.—Smart Set Magazine.

Long Walks of English Parson.

The Rev. A. N. Cooper, Vicar of Filey, has just started on another of those lengthy tramps which have justly earned for him the sobriquet of "The Walking Parson." This year he is bound for Lourdes, and, with the exception of the cross Channel, he proposes to do the whole journey of five hundred miles on foot. Among other long tramps accomplished by Mr. Cooper are his walks from Hamburg to Budapest and from Hamburg to Venice.

Of all his wandering yarns "The Walking Parson" associates the Surrey Hills with the most amusing. He was walking briskly along when he was accosted by a weary wayfarer. "Sixpence is all I want," whined the stranger; "that small sum stands between me and starvation." "If," said Mr. Cooper, who among other things is a total abstainer, "I give you sixpence, what assurance have I that you will not get intoxicated?" "Sir," exclaimed the other, "do I look like a person who could get intoxicated on sixpence?"—From M. A. P.

A Bright Blacksmith.

The greatest improvement in vehicle construction was when some bright blacksmith thought of heating the tires and shrinking them on the wheel. While many claim the honor, it is not known to whom it rightly belongs. Previous to this event tires were made in short sections and held on the felloes with nails.

When starting on a long haul the driver always laid in a good supply of nails to use on the trip.—Shop Notes Quarterly.

BOTTLE SEALED UP IN TREE.

Found in Heart of Maple, Where it Had Been for 30 Years.

A pint bottle filled with rare old whiskey, the age of which is uncertain, has been found here, imbedded solidly in the heart of a maple tree almost four feet in diameter.

President Graham of the Park Board concluded that there were too many trees in Bayliss Park, a breathing spot in the centre of the city, so he concluded to cut out a number of the maples that were planted more than fifty years ago, when Council Bluffs was first given a place upon the Iowa map.

One particular tree that was in the course of a new path that was proposed was marked for the sacrifice. The choppers felled this tree, finding it solid from circumference to centre. Saving the trunk into four foot lengths, eight feet from the butt, the saw just missed a long necked black bottle hewed away the wood, and carefully hewed away the wood, when to their surprise, they brought forth, tightly corked, a bottle of one pint capacity, filled with liquor. The cork was removed and the odor of liquor became apparent. It was sampled by experts who pronounced it whiskey of a most superior quality. The bottle of whiskey got into the centre of the huge maple tree is a mystery that even the oldest settler is unable to solve. At no place about it was there any cavity and counting things of wood from the place where the bottle was lodged, each one of which represents a year's growth of the tree, it must have been there thirty years. Besides this, old settlers state that the bottle is of the type in use from fifty to sixty years ago. The bottle and contents have been placed in the public library as a curiosity.—Council Bluffs correspondence Sioux City Journal.

DON'T DRUG CHILDREN.

CAUGHT.

The lawyer for the defence found it necessary to weaken the testimony of the principal witness for the prosecution.

"Mr. Skybo," he said, proceeding to cross-examine him, "did you ever live on the sea-coast?"

"Yes, sir," responded the witness; "I have lived half my life in a sea-coast town."

"You are familiar, then, with salt water fish?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, just as a matter of information, will you please tell me how a flounder swims—whether horizontally or vertically?"

"Why—"

Fish Wear Out a Bridge.

John Shafer, jun., deputy in the office of County Surveyor Frank Haycock, of Hennepin County, says, that fish have butted and rubbed up against the piles of the bridge at Orono, Lake Minnetonka, until the aged edifice has become weakened, necessitating its closing.

Shafer and Edward Terrell, another deputy, were sent out to inspect the span.

"Yes, sir," said Shafer "those fish kept on butting up against that pier until the wood was almost worn away. In order to get these we had to pound the water around the pile to keep the fish things away until we could finish our inspection."

"Why, those fish are so numerous at Minnetonka this year that they get pushed through the narrow passage so swift that they simply wear out the wood."

ON THE VERGE OF BREAKDOWN

When You Think Yourself Out of Sarts You Are Often Seriously Ill.

Thousands are just on the edge of the crater—just ready to topple in the crater of ill-health and nervous breakdown. Such was the case with Mr. E. E. Follett, a well-known figure in all business and social circles of Grand Rapids.

"I had not been well for a year or more. I had lost in weight and could not pick up. I tired of my work—it seemed like drudgery—no pleasure in it like there used to be. When I got thin, I seemed to have little blood and my hands and feet were clammy and cold. To make matters worse I grew nervous and got irritable over mere trifles. I tried dieting and various medicines, but profited by none of them. I was on the verge of a breakdown when my friend recommended 'Ferrozine.' It wasn't very long before I felt it was a true blood and nerve builder. I was encouraged so much after the third box that I got six boxes more. In seven weeks I gained six pounds and was looking the picture of health. 'Ferrozine' has no tonic so quick and sure to build you up as Ferrozine—just one or two tablets to take at meal time, try it. Fifty cents a box, six for $2.50, all dealers or The Catarhoxo Co., Kingston, Canada.

FEROZINE BUILDS UP GIVES STRENGTH

When Beau Nash and Wesley Met. Beau Nash, though but an indifferent churchgoer, not only went to hear Whit field preach, but attended a service at Bath held by John Wesley. The incident is related in Southey's "Life of Wesley." While he was preaching this remarkable personage entered the room, came close to the preacher and demanded of him by what authority he was acting. Wesley made answer, "By that of Jesus Christ, conveyed to me by the present Archbishop of Canterbury, when he laid his hands upon me and said, 'Take thou authority to preach the Gospel.'" Nash then affirmed that he was acting contrary to the laws. "Besides," said he "your preaching frightens people out of their wits." "Sir," replied Wesley, "do you ever hear me preach?" "No," said the Master of the Ceremonies. "How then can you judge of what you never heard?" Nash made answer, "By common report." "Sir," said Wesley, "is not your name Nash?" "I dare not judge of you by common report; I think it not enough a judge by."—From the London Chronicle.

SWINGING THE ARMS.

A Relic of Prehistoric Days—New Brain Facts.

Sir Victor Horsley gave an explanation of a curious habit the other night when delivering the Cavendish lecture before the West London Medico-Chirurgical Society. Out habit of swinging the arms when walking—which, Sir Victor stated, is quite unnecessary—was a relic of the days when we walked on all fours. Then we had to use our arms as well as our legs. Although this now serves no purpose when walking upright, we still keep on moving all four limbs alternately in progression.

Sir Victor set forth some new facts concerning the functions of the cerebellum, the mysterious and little understood hind part of the brain. Primarily, the cerebellum must be regarded, said the lecturer, as a sensory organ which has an important part in the correct performance of many of our "automatic" actions. Standing, walking and running are good examples of such actions, which cannot be accurately carried out without normal, well-balanced cerebellum. New-born animals, the lecturer continued, cannot stand; they sprawl, and before they can stand, walk, or run they must acquire this power. For the convenience of life this ability to stand must be secured without the animal having consciously to think what he is doing. The fully developed cerebellum supplies this power unconsciously. In proof of this Sir Victor pointed out that the cerebellum of a full-grown cat showed fully developed cells and fibres, whereas in the newborn kitten's brain the cerebellar portion is not yet organized into active nerve tissue.

WATERING PLACES.

Places of Interest for Those in Search of Health.

Germany has many famous watering places, but none of them have become better known to Americans than Bad Ems, Bad Kissengen and Bad Neuenahr. Kissengen has had a rapid rise to popularity, as its visitors a century ago numbered only 151. In 1850 there were 4,281 and last season the number was not far from 50,000.

Bad Kissengen is situated in the north-western part of Bavaria in the province of Unterfranken. It is built on both sides of the Franconian Saale, which has an exceedingly romantic valley surrounded by thickly wooded hills and mountains and covered with green meadows. It is 670 feet above the sea and has an average temperature of 62 degrees. The climate is about the same as that of central Germany and is influenced somewhat by the surroundings of Kissengen. The valley of the Saale is crossed by two side valleys running from east to west, allowing fresh air to enter on all sides. Even after hot days a fresh breeze comes down from the Rhoen Mountains at sunset. The best months are May, June and September.

Bad Ems, in the district of Wiesbaden, and 1,250 feet above sea level, has been long renowned as a watering place. It is charmingly situated on both banks of the River Lahn, about eight miles from the outlet into the Rhine. The royal bathing establishments, supplied with thermal water from both banks of the Lahn, are divided into the Upper Royal Kurhaus, Lower Royal Kurhaus, Royal Cure Hotel, New Bath House, Four Towers and Steinernes Haus. Massages and all medically ordered baths are conscientiously carried out.

Many of the leading baths and hotels are owned by the State, which insures the visitor reasonable treatment in the way of charges. One of the features of the place is the climatic air cure, Hohenmullberg, 1,267 feet above sea level. This is reached by shady and gently ascending wooded paths or by means of a rope railway, a journey of six minutes. Here are verandas, reclining beds and hammocks, with forest walks for those in need of convalescence.

Neuenahr is one of the spots which nature has endowed with her richest gifts. It is situated where the Rhine takes leave of the mountains and enters on the last stretch of that panorama so often praised. It is in a broad valley on both banks of the Ahr at the foot of a splendid basalt peak, crowned with leafy forests. Its greatest treasure is the mineral springs at the foot of Mount Neuenahr, which have made the place famous. The weather is such that the visitor can spend about two-thirds of the summer days in the open air. The climate is also credited with being strengthening, stimulating and revivifying.

Uncle Sam's Telegraph.

The United States is easily as regards the length of her telegraph lines, being 1,180,955 miles, or about three times as much as Great Britain or France, which have 396,353 and 391,275 miles of wire, respectively. Germany has the largest telegraph system in Europe, 461,039 miles. Russia, with Siberia included, has only 402,371 miles of wire.

Programme of English Laborites.

May Day in London was the occasion of a labor demonstration in Hyde Park, which was more imposing than usual. About eight thousand persons marched from the Embankment with bands and banners, and some two thousand children were brought in brakes by the Socialist Sunday School Union. Messrs. Herbert Burrows, Ben Tillett and Victor Grayson were the chief speakers. The resolution carried unanimously at all the platforms demanded "free maintenance of all children in the national schools, the organization of unemployed labor on useful and productive work, an eight hour working day, such amendment of the old age pension act as will secure adequate pensions for the aged and incapable, universal adult suffrage, payment of members and election expenses, and proportional representation." The inclusion of proportional representation in a resolution of this kind is very interesting and marks the rapid progress which the idea of this most desirable reform is making.—The Spectator.
