A Reply To Citizen.

MR. EDITOR.—Some person signing "Citizen," being evidently ashamed of their name, suggested in the columns of last week's "Record" that the present Council Chamber was too small and that the room would get so stuffy as to befuddle the brains of our Village Fathers.

Pardon my dear "Citizen" but I feel sure that our present Council is too clear-headed to be bothered by such a slight inconvenience as you suggest and I feel equally sure that your minute brain would be muddled by the stuffiness in a Council Chamber twenty times as large provided such a calamity as your being elected a Councilman should ever fall upon this fair village of ours.

As to "Citizens" suggestion re the adornment of a new Council Chamber, I would say that if he could be induced to allow the Council to frame his signature, together with his Non de Plume and hang the same upon the walls of the new hall it would prove an interesting addition to his suggested decorations and be a constant reminder to the public that Shakespeare's "lean hungry Cassius" has been born again and is now in our midst.

Choosing A Profession

A Brief Outline of the Fourth Sermon in the Series "From the Cradle to the Grave."

Last Sunday morning Rev. D. M. Buchanan's subject was "Choosing a Profession" and he took as his text Gen. 4:2, "Able was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the soil." Division of labor began early in the human family. As ages advanced labor became more specialized. In our day we have a great many different modes and professions. As civilization has advanced there has arisen a greater division of labor and a young man, in this age, though he has a greater variety to select from, has also a greater problem to solve in determining his life's work.

There comes a time in the life of every thoughtful young man when he seriously considers what his future occupation is going to be. "What occupation shall I follow as my life's work?" he asks himself. This is an important issue in his life for on his decision depends to a great extent his future success. The important question to ask when starting out in life is "Am I a Christian?" Is my heart right with God? That was what was placed as the first thing to settle in this life "Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness." And any man makes a mistake that changes the order that Christ here lays down as the first thing to seek for in this world. But having put spiritual and eternal things first, the chief question as far as worldly success is concerned is "What occupation shall I follow?" What is the cause of such a large army of professional tramps as we have in this country? Intemperance has added its quota. A neglected youth and a wasted manhood explain the cause of many, but repeated failures in life caused by selecting occupations for which they were not adapted have been a prolific source. In the heart of very many of these tramps repeated failures have crushed out the last hope of success and finding themselves in a cold and unympathetic world they have begun a wandering life. How important then are the issues at stake when a young man stands at the cross roads in his life and decides what he is going to do? No young man need sit down in despair in this young country that is opening up to his view so many avenues of usefulness and such bright prospects of making life a grand success. Let me give you some principles to guide a young man in the choice of a profession or occupation. A young man's desire or natural inclination should be considered. Much harm has been done by parents unduly forcing their boys to go into certain kinds of employment which they dislike. God has implanted these tastes for special kinds of work in us, and to go contrary to one's natural inclination is, in many cases, to court failure in life. We are most likely to succeed in what we like and are most interested in. The successful merchant, machinist, farmer, physician, preacher or anything else is often seen in the boy. To subvert one's natural taste in this matter is like turning a river out of its course.

Again a rational consideration of all the circumstances should be taken before making a final decision. Some have had notions for certain kinds of work for which it was quite evident they were unfitted. Physical or mental incapacity renders it an unwise thing to pursue a course where in these are manifestly essential. Judicious consideration should be given in determining a thing of such vast importance as one's life work. The prospects of the trade or profession should be taken into consideration. It is folly to spend one's time and means in preparation for a profession that is not likely to yield adequate success.

Above all things, young man, ask God to direct you in this very important matter. Lay your care upon Him and ask Him to guide you. He will do so. That infallible guide will direct your footsteps if you commit the charge to Him.

There are three special objects to hold in view in the selection of an occupation.

- (1) Your usefulness to the world. The noblest life is not one spent for self but for the good of others. We should never go into a business that will do the world harm—that will cause others pain or tend to the ruin of any of our fellow men.
- (2) The glory of God should be sought in making choice of our life's work. It is only in that way we can fulfil the great purpose of human life—"Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever."
- (3) To gain an honest living and a reasonable competence for the declining years of our life are important objects to keep in view in contemplating our future life's work. "The laborer is worthy of his hire" is true in every useful employment.

Here are some things to avoid in the selection of a calling. Avoid having the making of money the sole object of your choice of work. There are many that will be eternally lost because they have made the making of money the sole object of their life. It is a snare that has a
