Who Will Weigh the Coal Then?

In a certain town where two brothers are engaged in a flourishing retail coal business, a series of revival meetings were held, and the elder brother of the firm was converted.

For weeks afterwards the brother who had lately "got religion" endeavored to persuade the other to join the church. One day, when the elder brother was making another effort, he asked: "Why can't you Richard join the church as I did?"

"It's all right for you to be a member of the church," replied Richard; "but if I join who's going to weigh the coal?"

Western Fair.

Sept. 9th to 17th, London, Ont.

The Management of the Western Fair, London, Ontario, have been making active preparations for months for their exhibition which takes place this year from Sept. 9th to 17th. The Prize List is printed and ready for distribution. $1000.00 has been added to the list this year in the Live Stock Departments. This advancement in prizes should make this popular Exhibition more attractive than ever for Live Stock breeders and dealers. Every effort will be made on the part of the management to provide suitable accommodation for Exhibits in all departments. If space is required in any of the buildings, other than for Live Stock, the Secretary should be communicated with at once in order that satisfactory arrangements may be made.

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information promptly given on application to A. M. Hunt, Secretary, London, Ontario.

Here is a bargain. The Jarvis Record to Jan. 1st 1911, for 50c. Cash in advance.

LYING KILLS SELF-RESPECT.

Pernicious Habit Warps Judgment and Weakens Character.

"All boys," an old philosopher says, "are born liars." Perhaps it is because lying is the diplomatic refuge of helplessness. The instant we learn to know punishment desire to escape it becomes a prime instinct.

Morality, like knowledge, is not hereditary, but attained. The child must learn that lying is a sin and a self-injury, just as it must learn by being burnt to avoid the fire.

Until this lesson is learned the child, youth, man, will continue to lie. Many never learn it. Perhaps none ever learn it very thoroughly.

Lying comes not of aggressive shrewdness, but of cowardice and a shallow cunning that is often treacherous and tricks the lie into transparency.

But it is not the danger of being found out by others that is most to be dreaded; far more dreaded is it that the liar must know himself to be a liar.

His self-respect suffers, the heaven in him loses strength and leaves him dead dough.

The cunning that leads to lying is a rot that must penetrate the whole character, and make a man ever uncertain of himself.

It distorts his perspective, obscures his vision, and warps his comprehension.

The habit of misrepresentation leads to misconception, the judgment becomes as erratic as the tongue, and there results the man who actually "couldn't tell the truth if he wanted to."

Nothing else so shakes the confidence of one's friends as known lying does; nothing so shatters one's own self-confidence as does lying, whether known to others or not.

The cowardice that fathers lying increases with the lie. Fear of detection joins with self-contempt in making the liar a greater coward than before. One lie calls for another in its defence, and as the poet said, "Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive!"

The tangled web makes it all the harder for the liar to succeed in even an honest undertaking. His lies are a ball and chain upon his foot. He flounders along, most of his energies being required to overcome the impediment, while the truthful man easily outstrips him.

The lying cheat is the "Vicar of Wakefield" who was always owing; lying everybody, went to jail for debt, while his honest neighbors, whom he swindled many times, steadily prospered and died rich and respected.

Fiction, eh? Well, it is immortal as fiction simply because it is true to life, the world over, all the time.

A Quick Wink.

The closing of the eye, the rest and the opening of it have been measured and are found to consume three hundred and ninety-five one-thousandths of a second. This is a quick wink, and winks have been measured that required forty-one thousandths of a second more time. For these measurements especially arranged photographic apparatus is required, and then when a bit of white paper is placed on the eyelid its motions can be accurately determined. In a quick wink the closing of the eye has been found to require seventy-five one-thousandths of a second, the rest twice as long and the opening one hundred and seventy-one one-thousandths of a second.

Origin of Music.

According to the old Greek legend as given in Apollodorus, music arose in the following way: The Nile after an overflow left on its shore a dead tortoise, the meat of which dried up, leaving nothing but the shell and the cartilages. These in the hot Egyptian sun were soon braced and contracted until they became sonorous. Mercury, walking by the river, happened to strike his foot against the shell and was so pleased with the sound produced that the idea of a harp came to him. He immediately constructed an instrument in the form of a tortoise and strung it with the sinews of dead animals, and so, says the legend, music was born.

The Oldest Game of Ball.

Court tennis is the oldest game of ball that we have—that is to say, it goes back further in its present form than any other.

Games of ball of some kind go back so far that there is no trace of their beginning. In their simplest form the ball was thrown from one man to another. If we carry the process one step further and imagine the ball, or whatever stood in its place, to be hit back with the hand instead of being caught and thrown we have at once handball, the original of all games like tennis, racket, etc. Indeed, the French name for tennis remains paume to this day, because the ball was struck with the palm of the hand.

Legend of the Wrekin.

For the benefit of those who do not know it may be worth while to tell the story of the Wrekin that great hill overlooking the Severn which is in the centre of Shropshire and therefore of the universe. It is said that so great was the flood of Welsh perjurors flowing down the Severn that the enemy of mankind found himself unable to deal with the supply, and to stop it he proceeded to dam the Severn, but the spadeful of earth slipped before he reached the river and former the Wrekin—London Black and White.

A Mean Revenge.

The Monday ministers' meeting has yielded a new story. A clergyman in order to avoid unnecessary calls withdrew his name from the telephone book. Soon a lumber merchant with a similar name complained that the calls came to him. The clergyman regretted his inability to do anything in the matter. The next parishioner who called up the lumberman was requested to go to another climate and not "interrupt my sermons."

The clergyman's name is now printed in the book.
