CANON MULCTED.

Slander Action Against Canon Plumptre by Blind Organist.

The London Daily Mail says: At the Wiltshire Assizes before Mr. Justice Ridley and a common jury, Charles Hammett, a blind musician, brought a slander action against the Rev. Canon Plumptre, rector of Toronto, Canada, (formerly of St. George's Church, Montreal). In the spring of last year Canon Plumptre was the Vicar of Redlynch, near Salisbury, and Hammett was the organist at his church. It was alleged that the vicar went to Mrs. Hammett and declared that her husband had been leading a double life .To a sidesman of the church it was alleged that the vicar said it was not good for the young men of the church to be associated with a man like Hammett.

Plaintiff's counsel said repeated efforts had been made by Hammett to get an explanation of these statements, but Mr. Plumptre had taken up the position that he would never explain or give Hammett a chance of meeting the accusations.

The defendant, whose evidence had been taken on commission in Canada, denied using certain of the words complained of, and stated that if he accused Hammett of leading a double life he had in his mind his hypocrisy towards the vicar, and not anything connected with crime.

The jury gave a verdict for plaintiff with £150 damages, and judgment was entered accordingly, but a stay of execution was granted.

A SAFE MEDICINE FOR ALL CHILDREN.

The mothers whose little ones are ill not only wish for a medicine that will make their babies better, but one that positively cannot do any harm. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are sold under the positive guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiate, narcotic or other harmful drug. They always do good; they cannot possibly do harm—not even to the new born baby. Concerning them Mrs. J. E. Z. Marchand, Ste. Anne de la Perade, Que., writes: "I find Baby's Own Tablets indispensible. As soon as I find one of my children not feeling well I administer the Tablets, and I am never disappointed in the result. I would not be without them and am enclosing fifty cents for two more boxes." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"OLD GLORY."

—Capt. William Driver.

The stars and stripes are so frequently referred to as "Old Glory" that that title attached to the American flag has become famous, yet few know the origin of this expressive term.

Nashville, Tenn., claims the honor of thus christening the national emblem. The term dates back to the entrance of the federal army into that city, after the fall of Fort Donelson, when the flag belonging to Capt. William Driver was hoisted over the capital. This same flag was used in the Whig convention of 1840, when William Henry Harrison was elected—the first Whig president.

Long years before this William Driver hailed from Salem, Mass., but like most boys born in that part of the country, at the age of 12 he went to sea, and at the age of 18 was master of his own ship with the flag flying at the mast head, which he even then called "Old Glory." It was his proud boast that the flag of his country had never been lowered or its honor tarnished, and he was privately called "Old Glory" by those who knew him intimately.

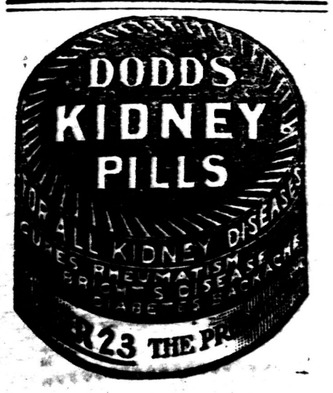
New Idea in Shopping.

"I can stand for some things, but not everything," said the clerk as he watched a stylishly dressed young woman leave the store.

"What is the matter?" asked the proprietor, who had walked up unobserved.

"That woman who just left hustled up to the counter and asked to see men's shirts. I spent twenty minutes showing her every style and color we carry. After inspecting the entire stock she rose and thanked me sweetly, adding: 'I didn't wish to purchase any. You see I am making my husband some summer shirts and I wanted to be sure I was doing them right. My husband is very particular about the finish of his shirts.' And they say married women are so considerate."

The boss smiled and walked away.—Boston Traveller.



HE KNEW NO KING.

His favorite terrier was led by a Highland soldier before the Imperial ensign —From despatch about funeral pageant of King Edward VII.

Doubtless it was a queer and fearsome experience for the terrier. Not his was the choice of being in the midst of such multitudes of people, and of such ceremonious pomp; but—he was led by a Highland soldier, and he went his way as calmly as he could, wondering. And he was not merely wondering at the multitude of people and the ceremonious pomp which tried his nerves, but he was wondering what had become of the man he had known so well, who had been his friend and companion, and whose friend and companion he had been. He knew no King; he knew no Emperor of India, he knew no Defender of the Faith; he only knew a man, to be sure, somewhat different from other men, because they understood each other—that was all. They may say "the King's favorite terrier," but conversely they cannot say more than the terrier's favorite man.

The man who knows a dog, and has seen his distress when death has taken from him the man whom he regarded as his best friend—sometimes mistakenly called his master—can understand something of the feeling of that terrier. Since the midnight passing of the soul of Edward VII.—oh, ever so many days ago! —that dog's soul has not been at peace. It has not understood. Something was missing from his life. The friend and companion this dog had known was gone, had disappeared in some mysterious way. The voice that made him prick up his ears and wag his tail he heard no more—and he knew not why. If he had fawned, he had fawned as a dog fawns, honestly and seeking only kindness and friendship, of which he had stores to give in fair exchange. He was no courtier. He had no ulterior motive. He sought favor for love's sake, and for that only. And he won it by his personality—the term is fit—for was he not the King's favorite terrier?

There are a few people who do not like dogs, and, it is noted, dogs do not like them, either. But most of us like dogs, and at some time in our lives have had a dog of which we thought a great deal. Likewise we were proud to realize that that dog thought a great deal of us. Those who have had this exize that that dog thought a great deal of us. Those who have had this experience—and those who have not have missed much of what this world affords —and have seen that dog pass to the great beyond, can understand something of what the King's favorite terrier felt when he took his lonely part submissively—led by a Highland soldier —in the pageant that passed between the multitudes. He had lost a friend who was merely a man as other men, except that he was to the dog's understanding lovingly different for the dog knows not kings.

Girl Athletes.

At Vassar College on Saturday Miss Stephanie English ran seventy-five yards in 9 4-5 seconds, which just equals the best 100 yard record for men. Miss English holds the Vassar record only. There may be exceptional women who can do better. The men and boys in the community who can even equal this speed would be called fairly good runners.

Other college records which fell were the fence vault, 5 feet 3⅛ inches; the running high jump, 4 feet 4½ inches, and the hop, step and jump, 29 feet 6½ inches. As always happens, the baseball throw was the poorest performance; it was 152 feet, against 400 feet, the best distance for men. If swimming were feasible as a field day sport girls might be expected to do seventy-five yards in better than men's championship time for 100 yards. Baseball, on the other hand, is not a sport for girls; the Barnard field day game Friday, though close and exciting, with a score of 15 to 14, was hardly a well played contest.

But was not the best part of the Vassar performance the marching and singing of the classes, and the traditional May pole dance and crowning of the May queen? The ancient Greeks never undervalued, and the best modern authorities highly praise those exercises which promote in both men and women health, ability and grace, rather than extreme speed at the possible price of a weakened heart, or massive, muscle bound strength.—New York World.

Brightness of the Sun.

How bright is the sun? No two authorities agree, says The Scientific American. Another estimate has recently been made by C. Nordmann. The effective temperature has been determined with his pyrometer was found to be about 5320 deg. absolute. Now, the brightness of an incandescent body emitting white light varies serially as a function of the temperature, and this law has been verified by comparison with numerous terrestrial light sources. Taking into consideration the absorption of the solar atmosphere, the effective temperature of the photosphere is probably about 6420 deg. absolute. The corresponding brightness of the mean effective layer is then about 319,000 decimal candle power.

Krupp Works Growing.

The Krupp Works, in Essen, in Germany, are constantly increasing in size. The number of men employed by the company at its works in Essen and elsewhere increased during 1909 by nearly 4,000, so that at the end of 1909 about 67,000 men were in the employ of the the company. At the Essen works a total horsepower of over 73,000 is used, this power operating over 7,000 separate machine tools, over 900 cranes, 187 trip hammers and 81 hydraulic presses.

Soda in Uganda.

A deposit of soda has been found at the terminus of the projected line of the Uganda Railway. It is described by the discoverer as being a lake about ten miles long by two or three wide. The water is only a few inches deep and covers a hard surface of soda resembling pink marble. The soda was found to be of considerable depth.

Wine 1,900 Years Old.

Bottles of wine 1,900 years old have been found in a sarcophagus dating from the first century of the Christian era in a graveyard at Bordeaux. That is to say the bottles had once contained wine, for according to the workmen who discovered them they were completely dried up inside when uncorked. A chemist, without suspecting the workmen of having dried the contents up themselves, analyzed a deposit at the bottom of the bottles and pronounced it to be the residue of what had originally been very good wine. It appears to have been so good that the owner 1,900 years ago decided to be buried with it.—London Telegraph.

Work and Wages.

Lord Macdonnell, umpire of the Conciliation Board of the Durham coal trade, has awarded the miners an advance of 2 1-4 per cent., making the wages of the underground men, engine men and coke men 41 1-4 per cent. above the basis of 1879.

At the annual council meeting in Newcastle of the Northumberland Miners' Association a resolution was defeated, by 44 against 25 votes, that two candidates should be selected in the place of Messrs. Burt and Fenwick for the next Parliamentary contests at Morpeth and Wansbeck.

The Newport dockers repudiated at a mass meeting held on Sunday morning the alteration in their working agreement signed by Messrs. Ben Tillett and J. Twomey at the conference called by the Mayor of Newport on Saturday. They decided not to return to work except under the old system of payment by tonnage.

Although their own wages were not reduced by the eight hours act, the miners at Ashington, Northumberland, reduced the salary of their check weighman because his hours were reduced. This created such an amount of indignation in the county that a second vote has been taken, and by 850 to 253 the old standard has been restored.

KING EDWARD.

Peacemaker Was Pride and Exemplar of Freemasons.

Lord Ampthill, who presided at an especial Grand Lodge of Freemasons at Freemasons' Hall, when an address of condolence with the Royal family was adopted, said that they were proud and thankful that King Edward was a Freemason and their Grand Master and protector. It was hardly possible to estimate how much the craft owed, not only to that circumstance, but also in a far greater degree to the Masonic life of King Edward VII. His Majesty's connection with Freemasonry was not merely titular and sentimental. They knew how often and how well he took part in their work. The many brilliant occasions on which he associated himself openly with Freemasons were familiar history to every zealous brother. Their late Grand Master had taught them that greater results could arise from personality of individual men, and from the example of their everyday lives, than from all the machinations of statesmen, diplomatists, and politicians, controlling great public resources and wielding official power.

Only Way to Breathe Properly.

Did you ever stop to think how you breathe? Do you know that, as a rule, we are actually too lazy to breathe properly? Well, we are, and so we do much to impair the beauty of both form and figure.

Have you not often noticed the ugly mouth breather? This habit of breathing through the mouth is unattractive enough in children, but it is even more so in grown people.

I shall never forget the impression left on me by the son of a distinguished novelist who had this wretched habit in its most pronounced form. The prominent teeth which so often go with this deformity, for it is hardly less, always come up in my mind when I think of this man. And it was all so unnecessary. He could either have overcome it by his own efforts or medical attention could have come to his aid.

It was one of the trials of my youthful days when I was out walking in the evening with my father to have him say, as he always did when I began to talk, "Keep your mouth shut in the night air." I have often thanked him for it since from the bottom of my heart.

Nose breathing and deep breathing are most important and magical aids to health and beauty. There is a little volume published with the title, "Shut Your Mouth and Save Your Life."

Rather startling, isn't it? But it is as true as startling things often are. Deep nose breathing cannot be too often practiced when in the open air, and the purer and clearer the air the deeper you should breathe. Try this once, and it will really become a pleasant pastime, and its results will soon become apparent in your straighter shoulders, better developed chest, clearer skin, and sweeter breath. It is really better than any magic youth restorer in the market. It is truly the best "elixir of life" that we can use, while it will not encroach upon the purse at all. Just give this a fair trial and see how easy the habit becomes.

You must also make a point of getting all the sunshine possible. Human beings need the sunshine as much as plants do.

Don't be afraid of it causing freckles, for we have the best authority that it does not do anything of the kind.

What man has done man can do, but there are lots of things that he shouldn't.

THE GERMAN SCARE.

(Farmers' Sun.)

What has become of the German scare? A little over twelve months ago this Scare bulked larger in popular imagination than Halley's Comet did three months since. For a time it was practically the one topic of discussion in Parliament, in the press, and on the platform; in many cases it replaced the gospel of epace in the pulpit. The Beresfords and the Roberts in England and the colonels and brigadiers in Canada, were bidding us prepare for a conflict that we were assured would be upon us before the snow melted with the then coming spring. The British Isles and the Dominions beyond the seas were literally filled with the clamor of the alarm drum.

If every housekeeper would use Wilson's Fly Pads freely during the coming summer, the house fly peril would soon cease to exist, or be greatly diminished.

Father of Laughing-Gas.

A monument was unveiled in the Placedes Etats Unis, Paris, not long ago, in honor of the American surgeon and dentist, Horace Wells, the discoverer of nitrous oxide, or "laughing" gas. Although its properties had been made known as early as the year 1800, says Leslie's Weekly, Wells was the first to employ it in dentistry. He made a visit to Paris, where he communicated his discovery to the French medical societies A dispute arose as to who might claim the credit of the discovery of anaesthesia, and Wells, rendered insane by constant experiments upon himself with chloroform, committed suicide in 1848 at the age of 33.

Novel Salvage Device.

An extremely novel salvage arrangement has been adopted by the United States Steel Company in the recovery of a cargo of nails which was sunk in the Mississippi River at New Orleans. Ordinarily a dredge would have been used for this purpose, and it would have been necessary to send a diver down first to break open the kegs, but the up-to-date method followed in this instance was in making use of a magnet for the purpose.

This magnet was three and a half feet in diameter and weighed 3,000 pounds. It raised five or six kegs at one time. The magnet will soon be tried on some sunken wire and metal bailing strips which are under water in the same vicinity.
