PLENTY OF ROOM.

No Trouble to Find a Place For This to Rest Its Head.

His blanket they could take along on the couch, but usually not his bed. George once makes the ground as soft as bed as he wants. The case is pretty nearly the same with the proprietor and the frontiersman. In writing of the "Highways and Byways of the Pacific Coast" Mr. Clifton Johnson tells of the practice on the ranches of the west. He was the guest of an early settler.

While we were chatting a lumber passed, overshadowing a roll of blankets. The butcher had come to the door, and he pointed to the passer and said: "You see that fellow, don't you? Well, when I first reached here from the east I thought a man with a bed on his back was the funniest thing I'd ever come across."

"A rancher in this country won't take his hired man into his house. They've got to furnish their own blankets and usually sleep on the hay in the barn."

"I know a fellow who, when he'd just arrived and didn't understand the way they manage, got a job harvesting on a big wheat ranch. The help usually sleep in the straw stacks then, and it's precious little time they get to sleep anywhere. But he didn't know anything about that, and he was sitting around in the evening and finally said to the rancher, 'Where am I to sleep tonight?'"

"Why, I don't care where you sleep," said the rancher. "I've got 800 acres of land around here, and if you can't find a place to sleep on that I'll get my next neighbor to lend me a place of his."

TOWER OF BABEL.

Traditions as to the Height of the Famous Structure.

The actual height at which the last stone of that famous structure, the tower of Babel, rested cannot, on account of the remoteness of the times at which it is said to have existed, ever become more than a matter of mere conjecture. Herodotus, who lived about 1,700 years after that "great spiral way to heaven" is said to have been attempted, says that he saw at Babylon a structure consisting of eight towers raised one above another, each seventy-five feet in height, but whether this ruin was the remains of the tower of Babel it was even then impossible to ascertain. Herodotus, usually minutely exact in his writing, leaves us in ignorance as to how the upper level of each of these seventy-five foot towers was reached from the level below.

As might be expected, even in tradition, a wide difference of opinion exists as to the height of the tower. Most orientals maintain that God did not put a stop to the work until the tower had reached a height of 10,000 feet, or about twelve miles. In European tradition it is said to have been as high as 20,000 elephants, each standing one above the other. St. Jerome asserts on the authority of persons who had examined the ruins that it did not reach a height exceeding four miles. Other statements are still more extravagant.—London Saturday Review.

Happy Events.

A teacher in one of the public schools of Vienna in order to test the ability of her junior class—girls eight to nine years old—in composition writing gave each little miss a subject to be discussed "at once without consultation and without help of any kind." The articles were found to be so interesting and amusing that they have been collected for publication. One article on "My Three Happiest Days" is notable in the unique collection. In well chosen words and clearly rounded sentences the little girl says that, being lost in the woods, having to run away from a fire which broke out in their house and watching a little boat as the wind tossed it on the waves and finally smashed it, were the most "happy events" that she could think of. Another in describing "fairytland" said that it must be a place where "everything is as it is here except that the lakes should be frozen half across at all times of the year so that we could take a swim and jump out and shake."

James I. and His Wife.

James I. appears to have inherited his mother's love of billiards. Among the payments from his privy purse noted in the exchequer records is one to "Henry Walker, our joyner, for a billiard board. Twelve foot long and four foot broad, the frame being walnuttree, well wrought and carved, with eight great staves and sixteen small staves." A statutory billiard rule is force in the days of the Stuart was one to the effect that no bystander, even though he was betting on the game, should be allowed to offer advice unless asked. If he did so it was provided that "he shall for every fault instantly forfeit twopence for the good of the company or not be suffered to stay in the room."—London Chronicle.

His Early Home Coming.

"Does your husband carry a hitch-hiker, Mrs. Hombody?"
"No, I never know him to."
"Oh, then he comes in early? That must be due to your training?"
"Not in the least. There is always some one up when he gets home in the morning."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SEED CORN!

IMPROVED LEAMING not Leaming fodder as a great many dealers sell.

MAMMOTH Southern Sweet, White

EROMPTON'S for Hill Corn.

ANGEL OF MIDNIGHT for Hill Corn.

We have a car of Seed Corn due to arrive about April 20th which is coming from E. B. Ulred a Son, Springfield, Ill., the largest seed corn dealers in America, and is fully guaranteed as to name and to be selected from only corn that has been fully matured.

Last year's corn crop was the worst in years for maturing, and you should be very careful in selecting your seed corn this year.
