

BANK OF HAMILTON

THRIFT is rightly described as "Economic Management." A shrewd business man is spoken of as thrifty because he saves. Perhaps only a dollar at a time—perhaps more—but the real secret of his success lies in the principal of saving. One dollar will start an account with the bank of Hamilton.

Buying From Home Merchants

The Dry Goods Record makes the comment below on an advertisement of a Cornwall firm. The wording of the advertisement is not given, but from the criticism it will be seen that an important point in an advertisement is to impress the reader with the line of goods, advertised and the advantages following home trading. The Record says: "Every owner of property in Cornwall or in the district is directly interested in the suggestion thrown out in that advertisement, and it applies to every other business in town. When the people of any town or district send money to the departmental stores of Toronto and Montreal, as the case may be, for goods that can be purchased just as cheaply and much more satisfactorily at home, they are assisting in building up those cities, to the detriment of their own interests. The value of property in a town increases in proportion to the business done in the place, and every dollar withdrawn from circulation in a community detracts to that extent from the business of that locality and consequently depreciates the value of every foot of property, not only in the town, but in the neighboring districts. The prospect of a slight saving in the cost of certain articles in the inducement that attracts most of the people who send their orders to the city stores. But it is doubtful if in the long run their is no actual saving. The advantage of seeing an article, and being satisfied before paying out the money for it will more than offset the difference in price that may be found in occasional instances, while the circulation of the money in their own community will add to the general prosperity. Do not be misled by the tempting baits held out by the mail order catalogues. If you are thinking of sending an order make out your list and take it to some of the local merchants and give them an opportunity to figure on it. In nine cases out of ten you will find that you can do as well in regard to price right at home and you will have the great additional advantage of knowing exactly what you are to get before you pay your good money. Try it."

Tea Cup Invades the Office

An old Country Business Practice Making Headway in Toronto.

(Special from Toronto Nov. 11th)

A reporter called yesterday afternoon shortly before four o'clock on a department manager of one of Toronto's large industrial concerns and promptly at four o'clock a young lady brought in two cups of tea. The reporter was invited to partake of what proved a most delicious and refreshing beverage, and business being laid aside for a moment, the manager explained that a few months before he had been to England where he had found the 4 o'clock tea custom practically universal among business houses. He had enjoyed it so much and it had seemed to fit in so well that after coming home he had adopted it in his own office. He said he always used Red Rose Tea because it had the fine flavor and smooth richness of some of the choicer kinds he has got in the old country.

Upon enquiry at the office of the Red Rose Tea Co. it was found that the practice had been begun there only a few days ago, and that with their usual ambition to be a little ahead of the procession they serve a cup of delicious tea not only to every member of the office and warehouse staffs but to every stranger who happened to be within the gates at the appointed hour. The tea is served to every one at his or her desk, the drinking occupies only a minute or two and the tea is so deliciously refreshing and stimulating that the working efficiency of the staff is increased for the rest of the day.

The remarkable success of Red Rose Tea and the high esteem in which the firm is held by the trade throughout Canada is a striking tribute to the forceful and progressive business methods steadily pursued by Mr. T. H. Eastbrooks of St. John, N. B., the proprietor of Red Rose Tea. This success has made Mr. Eastbrooks a national figure in the tea business.

Give Prisoners Wages

The United States is taking the lead in prison reform movements and many very radical changes are being made there in the treatment of prisoners.

In this connection it is interesting to note what has been done by the State of Vermont in the way of allowing prisoners to go outside the jail alone and work without guards upon their honor. At first the wages were turned over to the state and the plan was a failure. Then the experiment of giving the prisoner a part of his earnings was adopted, with such good results that it is in full operation in the state to-day. For three years now the state has taken $1 a day for the services of these men, and has allowed them the balance of what they have earned. As the average wage has been $1.75, this has given the prisoner 75 cents a day for his own use. The prisoners go to their work unguarded, and of the 700 different men who have been sent out in this way during the last three years, only two have attempted to escape. They have always worn plain clothing, with nothing to distinguish them should they attempt to escape, but their pledge of honor has always been observed.

Vermont has found that the greatest benefit of all comes from the fact that the men have had a chance to help themselves and in many cases those dependent upon them.

Ontario has made a start with its prison farm at Guelph, and if this works out well no doubt other reforms will follow.

There seems no sensible reason why prisoners should not be made to support themselves and contribute something to the costly institutions necessary for the detection and punishment of criminals, and probably the time is coming when the law-abiding, industrious part of the population will insist that the burden of the maintenance of the prison population shall be removed from their shoulders.

The fact is that the thrifty citizen does not know what a large burden he is bearing in supporting the prisons and asylums or he would be more anxious than he is for not prison reform but the removal of the causes that create the greater portion of the criminal and insane population, which, investigation shows, is largely due to the too excessive use of alcohol.

Advice to a Young Man

Remember, my son, you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, dig ditches or edit a paper, ring an auction bell or write funny things, you must work. If you look around, you will see the men who are the most able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who work the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. It is beyond your power to do that on the sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes but it is because they quit work at 6 p.m. and don't get home till 2 a.m. It's the interval that kills, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers; it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even; it simply speaks of them as "Old So-and-So's boys." Nobody likes them; the great busy world doesn't know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less harm you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied the world will be with you.

The Marvels of Electricity

Some twenty years ago one of the foremost authorities on the subject expressed the opinion that eight or ten miles was the maximum distance over which electrical energy could be transmitted without ruinous loss. To-day the fluid is being transmitted over wires 200 miles long. It is but yesterday that the mysterious current was used only for lighting, and even for this purpose its use was limited to a very moderate scale. To-day it is difficult to enumerate any considerable list of services to which electricity, in an experimental way at least, is not being applied. It is being used to operate a potato peeler and to smelt iron ore; it runs the washing machine in the home and, by magnetic attraction, carries tons of steel rails or scrap iron from the railway track to the dump heap. It is used for heat in ironing in the domestic laundry in cooking and in pumping water.

In view of what has been accomplished the prophecy is not an idle one that house-keeping and factory operations in cities will ere long consist in large part of pushing a series of buttons. Nor will these things be confined to cities. In New York State, along power lines, there are many farmers who are using this new agent in driving separators, operating feed cutters, in lighting their premises and in operating the milking machine. A beginning has been made in the same direction in Ontario. On more than one farm electrical energy is being made use of in this Province to-day and on hundreds of farms the example will be followed before the present decade ends. Indeed farmers in Waterloo county are always taking steps to secure a share in the power which the Hydro-Electric is furnishing for the town of Berlin.
