J. J. Hill on Good Roads

James J. Hill, the railway builder and developer of the North Western States has given his opinion on the good roads question in words that, because of their sound logic and the knowledge with which he speaks, will carry conviction wherever they are read.

"Next after the preservation of the productive power of the soil," said he, "I know of no material aid to the farming population so important as the creation and maintenance of good roads. What the telegraph is to general information and the railroad to commerce, that the country highway is to the agricultural interests. There are more than two million miles of roads in the United States. We spend on these from $30,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year. Less than 10 per cent. of the road surface has been permanently improved which would permit four bales of cotton to be hauled at one load instead of three, and 75 bushels of wheat instead of 55, would effect a saving of $10,000,000 on cost of hauling these two crops alone to market.

The enormous volume of commodities that finds either their origin or final destination on the farm or in the village must be transported over the dirt roads and pay toll to the obstructions which they offer to traffic. The average country highway makes country life more lonely and less profitable than it should be; wastes time, wastes labor, wastes money, wastes life. It helps to make the farm unattractive, promotes the drift of population cityward and disturbs still further the balance of employment. The two subjects upon which it is easiest to arouse public interest to-day are regulation of freight rates and improvement of waterways. Were all that is desired in either direction accomplished, the result could not be compared, in cash value or in its social effect upon country life, with the substantial improvement of the country road. Good roads are expensive; but it costs more money to do without them than to build them. The attempt to build the highways by the old system of local supervision, small appropriations, taxes worked out instead of paid in cash, and petty political control wastes every dollar so expended. Road building is a bit of technical engineering, where results will always be measured by the amount of money appropriated and the methods employed. Never was a problem simpler than that which the good roads movement presents. It consists in the provision and apportionment of resources and the enforcement of rules that will make it as strictly a business affair as if it were construction done for an individual or a corporation. Make a road so smooth and strong that a traction engine can run over it safely and easily at all seasons of the year, and you have done for the farm what the railroad does for the cities through which it runs; what the trolley does for the suburb. Wherever roads of this character are provided, the rise in the value of farm lands alone is greater in the aggregate than their entire cost of construction.

The Census Office issues to-day a bulletin on the crops of Canada as prepared from reports made up to the end of October. The closing months of the year give good reports for nearly all of the field crops of the Dominion. Potatoes alone indicate partial failure, and in all the provinces there are complaints of rot in the fields and in the heaps for winter storage. The area is 503,262 acres and the estimated yield 74,048,000 bushels, being an average of about 147 bushels per acre, which is nearly uniform for all the provinces. The quality is 84.42 per cent. Turnips and other field roots show a quality of 88.57, a yield per acre of 402 bushels and a total yield of 95,207,000 bushels for a crop of 236,622 acres. Hay and clover are computed for 8,516,400 bushels for a crop of 8,515,400 acres and a yield per acre of 1.92 tons. Fodder corn has an estimated yield per acre of 9.38 tons, which upon an area of 271,960 acres gives a product of 2,251,000 tons. Sugar beets are grown most extensively in Ontario and Alberta, where they supply roots for their sugar factories. The area in crop this year is 16,000 acres, which is a substantial increase upon last year. The yield per acre is 9.69 tons, the total yield 155,000 tons and the quality 93.15 per cent. The roots supplied to the Berlin factory are testing 17 per cent. of sugar and at the Wallaceburg factory 16 per cent; but a product of 5000 acres in Ontario is being shipped to factories in Michigan. The product of 8,200 acres in that province is marketed at Wallaceburg and Berlin where the average price is about $5.86 per ton or better than $57.80 per acre. Computed at the average local prices the market value of potatoes this year is $33,446,000, of turnips and other roots $21,444,000, of hay and clover $149,716,000, of fodder corn $11,957,000, and of Sugar beets $887,000. The report of fall wheat sown this year shows an area of 790,300 acres, whereof 692,500 acres are in Ontario and 107,800 acres in Alberta. Last year the area was 609,200 acres for Ontario and 98,000 in Alberta. The condition of the crop is reported at 93.40 per cent as compared with 93.60 last year. The per cent. of fall ploughing completed this year compared with the area planned for is less than last year, but the report is made for a period one month earlier. The per cent. of summer following compared in the same way is somewhat lower but increases are shown for Saskatchewan and Alberta.
