The styles, quality and prices of the new Shoe stock are sold subject to The Right House guarantees which warrant the wearing power to be the greatest and the prices to be the lowest.

WORDS BENEFICIAL

Give me to die unwitting of the day, And stricken in Life's brave heat, with senses clear;
Not swathed and couched until the lines appear Of Death's wan mask upon this withering day,
But as that old man eloquent made way From Earth, a nation's conclave hush-er anear; Or as the chief whose fates, that he may hear
The victory, one glorious moment stay.
Or, if not thus, then with no cry in vain,
No ministrant beside to ward and weep,
Hand upon helm I would my quittance gain
In some wild turmoil of the waters deep,
And sink content into a dreamless sleep.
(Spared grave and shroud) know the ancient main. —E. C. Stedman.

MAKING A WINEGLASS.

It Takes Many Processes and the Work of Four Men.

The making of a wineglass is a fascinating sight to watch and a revelation to many. It requires the services of four men, and the processes are numerous. Inserting his hollow iron blowpipe into the mouth of one of the pots or crucibles, the blower collects sufficient "metal" to form the bowl of a wineglass.

This metal is a lump of hot, soft material and is, of course, molten glass. It is made from white sand, red lead, refined ash and salt-peter mixed in certain proportions, and then it has been resolved into molten glass, technically known as metal.
The lump of material on the end of the pipe is rolled to and fro on a polished table to obtain the desired smoothness and evenness of surface.

After swinging the hot glass rapidly through the air for some moments the worker then blows down the pipe until the lump of soft material has expanded to the desired size and shape, when he gauges it with his callipers to see that the dimensions are correct. It is now passed to a second man, who casts on sufficient metal to form the stem, while on to this again is added material for the foot. The processes now follow one another rapidly, the glass being passed from workman to workman and back again as each fulfills his particular task.

Over and over again the partially completed object is inserted into the furnace where there is a heat of 2,000 degrees F., held there for a few moments and then quickly withdrawn to be further treated. With a precision that only comes of long training, one man trims the bowl of the glass to the required size by cutting the superfluous material away with a pair of shears. The bowl then has to be opened out to the desired dimensions and measured to see that it is perfectly correct in size, when it is finally lifted by a boy from the workman's holder on the end of a forked stick a finished article, and placed in the oven to be annealed.

The Salted Thread.

Soak a piece of thread in strong salt water, dry it and repeat two or three times. When thoroughly dry, tie one end to a chandelier and on the other or lower end tie a ring or some small but not too heavy article.
It is now ready for the experiment.
Set fire to the thread, and behold the ring does not fall to the floor, nor does the thread break.

The explanation is: The thread has in reality been burned, but the salt with which the thread was saturated forms a solid column, and that supports the ring. Varied experiments can be made using several threads for one article and, in fact, many others which may suggest themselves to the readers.

A Dirtless Dutch City.

Rotterdam, the city of Erasmus, was described by Thomas Hood as "a sort of vulgar Venice." A more pleasing impression, however, is preserved in a letter from Lady Mary Wortley Montagu in 1716 to her friend, the Countess of Mar. "All the streets are paved with broad stones, and before the masons' artificers' door are seats of various colored marbles. The place is so neatly kept that I will assure you I walked all over the town yesterday in my slippers without receiving one spot of dirt, and you may see the Dutch maids washing the pavement of the street with more application than our maids bestow upon our bedchambers."

The Poet's Peacock.

Dante Gabriel Rossetti had an irresistible tendency to purchase rare and beautiful birds and beasts that appealed to his poetic or artistic fancy.
Ellen Terry tells in "The Story of My Life" of his once buying an exquisite white peacock, which very soon after its arrival at his home disappeared under the sofa. In vain did Rossetti "shoo" it out. It refused to budge.
This went on for days.

"The lovely creature won't respond to me," said Rossetti to a friend.
The friend dragged out the bird.
"No wonder," said he; "it's dead!"

A Quick Dodge.

Walking along Wall street the other day, he was accosted by a shabbily dressed man evidently armed with a hard luck story.

"I beg pardon, sir," began the stranger, "but could you help a poor man along? Now, I'm not looking for money, sir, but—"

"Well," came the almost breathless answer, "if you're not, I am. Good day."

And in a moment the young man was halfway down the street.

The Next Call.

Mrs. Sharpley—Next time you call I want you to give your opinion of the new dog we are going to get.
Mr. Bore—Delightful, I'm sure.
When do you expect it?
Mrs. Sharpley—Oh, not for twelve months at least!
