"This sacrificing high places was not idolatry; they worshipped Jehovah, the true God, on elevated spots, and therefore by the high places so frequently mentioned we must not understand idolatrous shrines."

-Whedon, There was great danger of this worship becoming idolatrous from its resemblance to heathen customs. Jerusalem was designed to be the true centre of religious worship.

II. An attempt to repair the temple (vs. 4-8). 4. Jehonsh-Another form of Joach (2 Kings 11. 2). Said to the priests-The important work of collecting money for repairing the temple was committed to the priests. Joash must have been more than a mere child at the time he gave this 'order to the priests. He probably was a man grown. All the money of the dedicated things-This includes whatever was devoted to sacred uses. Money was not coined at that time, but the gold and silver were valued according to their weight. The latter clauses of this verse indicate the three sources of revenue for the support of the religious system among the Jews. The money of every one passeth the account-Rather, "that passeth the numbering," as in R. V. margin. This was the half-shekel required of all the men from twenty years old and upward, excepting old men and the Levice (Exod. 30, 12-16; Num. 1. 42, 45, 47), and was equivalent to about thirty-two cents. The money that every man is set at-The amount paid into the treasury of the temple in connection with special vows and estimated according to Lev. 27. 1-8. Cometh into any man's heart-Free-will offerings. 5. Every man of his acquaintance-From this verse and from 2 Chron. 24. 5,it seems clear that the priests and Levites were directed to go throughout Judah collecting money for repairing the temple. Repair the breaches of the house-The temple had been the home of Joash in his childhood, and he had opportunity to observe its condition. It had been neglected for years and had been broken sp by the sons of Athahah (2 Chron.

Receive no more the priests eight or ten years before this. - Their commission was withdrawn. We have no means of knowing exactly. The priests had not repaired-The be entrusted to them, and they were to the support of the priests and the temple service, and nothing was used to make repairs ordered by Joash. PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS.

"Jeheash did that which was right" (v. 2). Joash did what was right while Jehoisda instructed him. A bad adviser would have early proved his ruin. We can help others by encouraging words. A young teacher, coming wearied and discouraged from her day's work saw by the readside two of her little pupils. One had failed in her lessons that day, and was weeping bitterly. The other wiped away the tears of the grieved one, and said sweetly, "Try once more, and I will help you." Unnoticed by the little ones, their teacher passed on, her soul strengthened by the words of childish wisdom and the sight of tender sympathy. "Why repair ye not the breaches of the house?" v. 7). Solomon's temple, built and beautified at such immense cost, had fallen into decay. Money was needed to repair it. There is many a church whose walls are decaying, whose wership is a thing of the past. "Joash was minded to repair the house of the Lord." (2 Chron., 24:4), but the priestss who should have been intensely interested, seemed rather indifferent and he takes them to task about it. If there is need of earnestness in regard to temporal affairs, how much more is it necessary respecting our spiritual well-being. A lady stood at the close of a service, conversing with a poor man in reference to his soul's salvation. "Not to-night," was his repeated answer. But she pressed him. Again and again would he have turned away, but she held him. It was after ten o'clock and still she pleaded with him. At longth, he yielded, and tegether they knelt and prayed for his pardon. When he rose from his knees there was a happy smile on his face, as he said, "I am saved." They parted. The next morning word was brought to the lady that the man had died of heart disease at twelve o'clock, less than two hours after he had left

"The priest took a chest and bored a hole in the lid . . . and set it beside the altar" (v. 9). It is said that more money is spent unnually for chewing gum than for foreign missions. One hundred times as much is spent for tobacco as for the heathen. Nearly two hundred times as much is spent for licour to min the world as is spent for the gespei to save it. Women pay more for feathers and flowers than to save the world. If men professing Christianity would abstain from tobacco, and women from feathers and flowers and devote the money to missions, the glad tidings might be sent to every dark corner in the world.

"They gave . . . and repaired therewith the house of the Lord" (v. 14). "A cold, indifferent people will not be greatly interested in their house of worship, while a church, where warm and zenlous love prevails, will care for the holy place with as much enthusiasm as in providing for their homes." A great their personal interests ahead of the interests of God's cause.

"They reckoned not with the men . for they dealt faithfully" (v. 15). "A man diligent in his business . . . shall stand before kings" (Prov. 22 29), so a Christian man who is faithful in his probable that the income was not large first attempt of Jeash to accomplish a work both for God and his fellow men owing to the prevalence of idolatry and praiseworthy and very necessary task shall be accounted "worthy" praiseworthy and very necessary task shall be accounted "worthy . . . to stand before the Son of man" (Luke 21,

SEEDS.

Local seedmen have an army of drummers out in quest of business, and it is expected that some fair-sized lots will be disposed of. Farmers, it is said, are inclined to hold off until they are prepared for seeding, and the market at the present time is only moderately active. The best grades of seeds are very firm, but the trade has been granted a slight thing like 50 cents a gallon, and to one reduction in some of the inferior brands, such as the "Lynx." The weather is the principal factor with which wholesalers have to contend, and no great movement is probable until the temperature more favorable.
