New and Terrible Danger Confronts Society in Poisonous Microbe, Says Scientific Writer.

Within the past two months two phymeians have been put upon their trial charged with murdering people by inocwlating them with deadly disease germs, says Pearson's Weekly. In the one case the microbe of typhoid was used, in the ther that of diphtheria. It is a new and terrible danger that confronts so-

Every infectious disease has its own particular microbe, and most of these can be cultivated artificially almost as easily as can grapes or pineapples, and in much the same way. A proper soil under glass and a moist, warm temperature are all that is needed.

Only, of course, the vegetable organisms that produce disease by multiplying within the human system are as tiny which they are grown, are proportiona-tely small. They are, in fact, merely tubes about the thickness of a lead pencil and closed at the ends with wads of sterilized cotton wool.

Diside these the microbes thrive and flourish in a "soil"—bacteriologists call it the "nutrient media"—composed of som kind of fellylike substance, such, as for example, congealed blood, beef juice wear give in solution. Cultivated in this way they attain to such a high degree of deadliness as to leave but little doubt of fatal issue once they are introduced to the human system.

Microbes trained to murder they night very well be termed. O single one might easily be a fatal dose, for the one might have multiplied to millions in few days.

Moreover, there is an added danger attaching to their use, and one which is as yet hardly understool, and but little ap-nectated. It is this: The microbes disthe out of their bodies, as it were, after their brief lives, certain deadly poisons. These poisons are tasteless, colorless and choriess, and they leave no trace behind. The connoisseur in microbe murder, therefore, would probably use one of these by products of the disease germs hardead of the actual germ itself, and so Yer der himself secure against detection.

The deadliness of these terrible toxins (1905) is terrible to dream of. The iriest scratch from the point of a needle that been previously dipped in one them would probably mean certain

Or they might have used the dried germ seeds, or spores, as scientists call them. These can be kept alive for almost any length of time. Indeed, most scientists hold that it is well nigh impossible to kill the spores of certain microbes, and these the deadliest of their kind. Heat, extreme cold, poison and the other agents which are destructive to the full grown mi-crobes have no effect whatever upon the

They can be kept for years, and when seen under the microscope, appear harm-less atoms of dead dust. Yet immediately the conditions are favorable each individnal sport bursts its coat, just like an ornary seed, and begins, ready to spread death and destruction all round. Given a sufficient supply or spores, the microbe murderer could sow a cholera crep in the human system as easily as farmer could plant his fields with wheat, and with almost equal assurance of a shuccessful issue.

Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W., S, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child; the chances are it ean't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

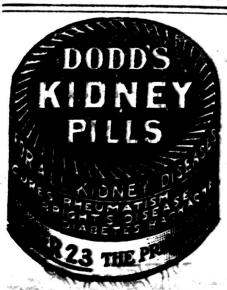

WINDOW BOXES.

"Swe t Are the Uses of Adversity" Does Not Apply to Gardening.

It is time to get out our window boxes for summer. Of course many have been rejoicing in window bexes for some jour Belgrade correspondent. The detime, but these early birds will hardly last through the summer without repleasting. And one must remember that window boy's require constant odorous Hayana. cure. "Sweet are the uses of adversily" may apply to some things, but never to window boxes, nor, indeed, to plants in any situation whatsnever. To began with the boy, it is usually too wide and toe shallow. The wood should not be too talek, and there amet be three to five holes for drainage. Pieces of broken flower pots should be placed in the bottom to a depth of one or two inches. Plants require air as nell as water, and the sir follows the water. Hence the drainage must be perfect.

One expert says people who paint to inside of a window box greatly endinger their plants; the offs and temperature may de actual chemical injury.

The Box Color-As to painting the outside, a dull stain is best. Anything bright is ugir. Bright green puts the rich greens of the foliage out of country. snee, and bright red (another e dor toe often seem outshines the flowers. One meet learn that the box itself is not the attraction. As a rule, it is safe to match the color against waich the box rests. But under no eireumstances should it be brighter, whether it be matched to the ground color or the win-dow trimmings. Weathered effects are delightfully easy, backing floral beauty to perfection.

A Problem-The red brick house is a problem. If there are brown stone window sills, the boxes should be stained a dull brown, and, in any ease, for this red brick house, it is safe to confine them to foliage plants, having vines cover the boxes and away as far below as they will grow. With foliage plants and ferns standing above the boxes, too, the ugliest house will take on beauty.

Flower Beauty-All told, geraniums are the most popular blossoming plants for window loxes. To be sure, begonais and fuchsias are often used to charming advantage on the north side of the house, but the geranium is the stand-by. Most of us find that single geraniums do best-that is, blossom most freely, One should be sure to have them in the same shade, else they will look mismatched. Petunia boxes make a good showing to some southern windows. If grown to their fullest, they serve both for plants and vines.

And, speaking of vines, vines (periwinkle) is the favorite with red geraniums, the variegated fradescantia looking handsomer with pink ones.

The Wooden Box-One who has given this sort of gardening much attention says: "An ideal inner surface of a window box is obtained by charring it Wash the box with kerosene, throw in a little excessior and set it on fire. The charred surface is in itself a protection, having the effect of killing any fungous growths that may rot the wood." This may be idea!, but only adults with good judgment should experiment, and ther at a goodly distance from the house and the source of supply. Undoubtedly this charred surface makes for the health of SINGING SANDS. The attention of the public has recenty been directed to those curious freaks nature. "singing sands," says The Engineer. When a small quantity of this sand is clapped between the hands, it is said to give forth a sound so shrill as actually to resemble a hoot. Put into a bag and violently shaken, the sand emits a noise strangely like the bark of a dog. The most notable of these sands are those of the Hawaiian islands of Kanaui. Similar sands also occur in the Colorado deserrt, where are to be found those curious moving sands that continually thavel hither and thither over the vast blain of clay. Their movements are induced by the winds, and when a strong breeze is blowing the particles of which they are copposed give out an audible humming or singing. Under the microscope these sands show an almost perfectly spherical form, so that they roll on each other at the slightest impulse, a circumstance that also accounts for the rapidity with which the sands travel over the desert. One theory advanced with respect to the "singing" of these sands respect to the "singing" of these sands is that it is due to an exceedingly thin film of gas that covers the grains. Gathered and removed from the desert, the sands lose their vocal properties.

Megacles liked his paedogogus when he helped him model animals out of fruit peel or clay; and he felt a great swell the first morning he set out to school at surrise with his old slave friend carrying his books and his writing tablets. At school little Megacles learned his A B C hy chanting his letters with the rest; and the way he learned to write was strange. He had a wax tablet on which his teacher first faintly traced letters with a sharp instrument, and then guided his hand as they deepened each letter.
