Let In the Air

It is a law of nature that air is always in motion, and because this is true, we have only to leave our windows a little from the top to give them a little from the bottom, and the process of ventilation will go on without our thought or care. It is impossible to estimate the amount of injury, suffering, disease and death caused by impure air. If you would escape the winter season, you must see to it that you get at all times a plentiful supply of fresh air. It is free. It is your right to have it. It is the best thing you can get to keep well.

A Tribute

The following verses are a tender tribute to the memory of Chas. W. Steele, a young attorney, (nephew of Dan Steele of town) who passed away at Beatrice, Neb., on Nov. 1st, 1911, after an illness of about two weeks of typhoid fever and inflammatory rheumatism. He was aged 25 years, 2 months, 7 days.

God still reigns above in heaven
And our Charles has gone to Him;
We alone must bear the burden
Of the longing without him.
Tis the missing and the wishing,
His dear face and smile to see,
And the eager waiting, listening,
For his footsteps close to be.
But we know if we are watching
And our lives keep pure as gold,
We will meet again in heaven,
And our forms once more enfold.
So our Charles we bid good-bye to,
Only for a few short years,
And his memory still we cling to,
But must brush away our tears.
One good life can leave a message
That can live for many days,
And can help the young and aged
To be careful of their ways.
