RHEUMATIC ANTHRITIS

Among elderly people, especially women, this is a disease frequently met with. The tissues of certain joints (most often the hip) become altered; the lining membrane being thickened, and the cartilages removed, the bone becoming bare, dense and hard and its surface polished. At the same time the head of the bone gets flattened out in the joint, new masses of bone grow out and surround it, often producing great deformity. The pain to which such alteration gives rise is very severe, and is worse in cold weather or with some patients in windy weather. The deformity of the joint and the masses of bone protruding from it can gradually be felt, but before that the joint feels stiff, and as it moves a creaking, grating sound is heard.

The best remedy that can be applied is heat in the form of baths. Turkish baths are often beneficial, but must only be taken on medical advice. A course of a dozen arsenical baths is strongly recommended by the eminent French authority, M. Gueneau de Mussy, and sulphur of potash will often give relief. Where possible sulphur ointment may be applied to the joint, or a lotion of equal parts of glycerine and tincture of iodine may be rubbed on the joint being afterwards in flannel.

No one who is troubled with chronic rheumatic inflammation should live in a house that is at all damp; woollen clothing must always be worn, summer and winter, and the patient should keep warm. Careful attention to diet is also necessary, plain food being most suitable, no pastry or heavy indigestible puddings are to be eaten, but plenty of vegetables and stewed fruit should find a place in the menu. These will help to regulate the action of the bowels, a point that must receive most careful attention. For this purpose Carlsbad salts may be recommended, either in the form of the water imported from the spring, or the artificial salts to be bought from the druggist and taken by the spoonful in ordinary water. Friedrichshall water or Hunyadi Janos are also good and may be taken instead of Carlsbad water.

THE SPLEEN

In the old days, when less was known than at present of the functions of our various organs, the spleen was considered to be responsible for ill-humor and melancholy, and even to-day we often find ourselves saying that a man has a fit of spleen, when he is not in the best of tempers. The spleen is a gland situated between the diaphragm and the stomach and somewhat to the left of the latter. It is a soft, spongy body placed above and in front of the left kidney, with which it is connected by small blood-vessels and by the cellular membrane. Its general size is about four inches long by three inches wide, and two inches thick. Sometimes when it has become greatly enlarged it can be felt below the ribs to the left of the stomach; this occurs occasionally in prolonged cases of ague after continued large doses of quinine. So far the real use of the spleen is very obscure, though its business apparently affects the quality of the blood; some physicians believe that old and worked-out red cells are removed from the blood in its passage through the spleen, others that its passive active white cells are added to the blood.

TO KEEP A BABY WELL

It is quite a mistake to think that fresh air, as soon as cold weather sets in, is no longer necessary for a baby. In a badly ventilated and overheated room the child is more likely to take cold than in a room full of fresh air and sunshine. The temperature of the room where most of the infant's time is spent should be 68 degrees Fahrenheit, and only just while the baby is being bathed should it be allowed to reach 70. After the bath take the child into another room, and cover him over warmly so that he may get his sleep; while he does that, air the room in which he was bathed, and bring it to its proper temperature. Whenever the child is out of his nursery for any length of time the window should be opened both top and bottom, to provide a complete change of air.

The bedroom where a baby sleeps should be at a temperature of 55 degrees F., and plenty of warm, light covering on the crib, with a good sweater to keep away any draughts will give plenty of warmth. In very cold weather a hot water bag may be used, but care must be taken to put it in a flannel case, and to place it at the bottom of the crib, so that it does not come in contact with the child's feet.

THE HABIT OF ILLNESS

Everyone who has mixed much with others will have been struck by the ease with which certain people succumb to illness, "give in to it" as we say familiarly, while others rarely complain or having anything the matter. I am not speaking now of total disease, for the healthy man may have a serious illness, but because of his healthy attitude of mind he leaves his illness behind when he gets on the way to recovery. On the other hand, it is quite common to find people saying, not without a certain amount of pleasure it is to be feared, "I had a severe illness last year, and I have never quite got over it." In many cases this has been brought about by their having allowed their nerves to form habits which they cannot now shake off without some effort. A patient who cheerfully turns his mind toward health has much in his favor, and what is more this habit of mind will often do as much to bring about the cure as the physic prescribed by the doctor.

Many persons are the victims of a habit which makes them think they are ill, simply because they do not know how to cure themselves, but it is often a delicate task to help them. Lack of sympathy will only make matters worse, and the invalid will resent the suggestion that he has any control over his nerves. What we can do, however, is to make a suggestion here and there which will lead such a one to make the necessary effort, to take an interest in something outside himself, and in this way he may be brought back to the healthy frame of mind which does much to keep disease at bay.

SHE ASKED FOR A MIRROR

Mrs. Buell's Request When Admitted to Practice in Supreme Court.

"It was an interesting experience, but I must own to being a little shaky about the knees when the crucial moment arrived," said Mrs. Irene Buell, in discussing her recent visit in Washington, where she was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Of course," she continued, "the whole affair is much more awe inspiring than the State Supreme Court, because the Judges come in dressed in their imposing silk gowns, having been cried out by an impressive bailiff, who closes his remarks with a 'God save the United States.'"

Mrs. Buell spoke of the extreme formality observed and said she was asked to remove her hat before proceeding to the counsel table to take oath.

"The first thing I said when they asked me to do that was, 'But I don't see any mirror here.' It seemed the natural observation to make until I heard Senator Clapp, who was my sponsor, chuckle and murmur, 'The eternal feminine.' Then after a formal address had been made to me I took oath on the same Bible that Clay and Calhoun swore upon that I would defend the Constitution and conduct myself in every way as befitted my office."—From the St. Paul Dispatch.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. They return money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVES' signature is on each box.

SARDINE BAIT

Ducks and geese, fowls and pigeons were also represented, and there was a large number of rabbits. Donkeys and ponies included Jerry, a famous old donkey, the years of age, but still equal to a day's work. London Chronicle.

French sardine fishers use a bait the roes and other waste products of the Norwegian cod fisheries. This bait is expensive and its price is continually rising owing to the increasing demand. An artificial bait, which is much cheaper, has recently been employed, but with only partial success, as it sinks too quickly and often loses the sardines downward instead of drawing them up into the nets.

Attempts are now being made to remedy this defect. The success of these attempts would bring joy to the fishermen, but not to the dealers in Norwegian bait, who enjoy a very lucrative monopoly. The question is one of burning interest and has nearly led to open war between fishermen and bait dealers on the French coast.—Cosmos.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS

Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days.

KING'S GLOVE HAND

It is not generally known that King George's custom of appearing with his right hand gloved and the other bare has its origin in something more than a mere whim of fashion. The wearing of a glove on the right hand by a monarch is a fitting survival of the days when the sovereign's touch was held to be a peculiarly efficacious for all kinds of diseases, especially scrofula.

In the days when at certain dates it was customary for hundreds of sick men and mendicants of all kinds to be laid out in the courtyard of royal palaces awaiting the healing touch of the "anointed of the Lord" monarchs found it necessary to wear a glove in order to escape infection. Thus arose the habit which during modern times has passed into a mere fad of fashion, the significance of which has long been forgotten by the majority of people.—From M. A. P.

UNCLE NOTHING

"I'm afraid, Edward, you're marrying me only because I've inherited from my uncle 100,000 crowns."

"Why, Blanche, how can you think that of me? Your uncle is nothing to me. I would marry you no matter from whom you inherited the money."

"Your daughter looked very beautiful at the opera last night," said Mrs. Oldcastle. "I heard several people say they thought she was the best dressed person in any of the boxes." "Yes," replied her hostess as she hung her $20,000 dog collar over the back of a real Chippendale chair, "both me and Josiah could see that she was the sincere of all eyes."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE FRIENDS OF BRUGES

That the "friends of Bruges" have formed themselves into a society to protect the grand old city from vandals is an excellent piece of news, for their intention is to buy up every old house as it is put on sale and to let or make use of it for purposes not requiring any serious modification in the architecture.

Bruges is, in the opinion of many, the most beautiful and suggestive of Europe's Old World towns so long as it is left as it stands now for the admiration of future generations and so long as its stones will hold together. To wield the pickaxe there is every what as cruel as it would be to lacerate the consecrated masterpieces which hang on museum walls.

Beautiful towns should be protected along with other works of art, and if for sanitary or other causes they become uninhabitable there is no reason why they should be inhabited. People must be made to pitch their tents elsewhere and the masonry they have vacated may be turned to other uses or simply put on one side and preserved for archaeological or artistic study.—Queen.

PRESS, PULPIT AND PLATFORM

A hearty laugh is one of the best soul-restorers in the world.—Sir George Reid at the Savoy Club.

The incoming tide of democracy is sweeping in like a tidal wave, but unlike the tide it will not recede.—Father Vaughan, at Pickering.

Nothing succeeds like advertising; it is as certain as the rising sun, but very unlike the tide it will not recede.—Father Vaughan, at Pickering.

Nature seems to be evolving a new species of man, and that very one like what we used to know as woman.—Mr. A. C. Plowden, at Marylebone Police Court.

"Girl art students seem more earnest and assiduous than men," remarked Sir Edward Poynter on Saturday, in presenting prizes to students of the Royal Academy of Arts.

The only way for a motorist to drive carefully in the streets is to drive as if every pedestrian were deaf or intending to commit suicide.—Mr. John Slater, at Edinburgh.

The great thing a playwright has to do is to consider the necessity of the man in the stalls, but the man in the pit and the gallery.—Mr. Alfred Sutro, at Hotel Cecil.

There is a certain force of public opinion, a desire to stand well with society, to say "the right thing," the thing expected of us, which levels people down to a dismal and vapid uniformity.—Bishop Gore, at Birmingham.

Young men and women who apply for theoretical engagements do not understand what a hard level the stage is for the successful, and what a terrible one it is for those who have to struggle.—Mr. George Alexander, at Seaford House.

"No, sir," whiffled the demanded the noisy visitor.

"Yes, I have," said the innkeeper, "but that's my license, not yours."

RHEUMATISM

Nervine Cures Quickly

Georgetown, May 15th, 1910. "Exposure to dampness and cold piercing winds brought on an attack of rheumatism. I didn't think much of it, as I was otherwise strong and healthy. Neglected, the rheumatic pains increased in severity and ultimately developed into Sciatica. My whole left side was affected. The doctors gave me tablets and pills, advised hot baths and electricity—but these measures were only temporary. I read in the 'Chronicle' of the wonderful pain relieving power of Nervine, and bought five bottles at the chemist's. I rubbed on Nervine several times a day and soon saw that it was going to help. I became quite enthusiastic and looked forward to soon being able to go to work again. It took many many bottles and such hard rubbing that Nervine did cure me and to-day I am well."

(Signed) Walter T. Warbridge. All dealers sell Nervine in 25c and 50c bottles.

THE VALUE OF THE BRIDE

A Methodist minister in Baltimore recently married a young man of the Bowery type, who asked him, at the conclusion of the ceremony in the parsonage, how much he "charge'd" for as a hint to the clergyman to keep his fee within reasonable limits, the young man drew a half dollar from his pocket while speaking. The minister explained that no "charge" was made for his services. Whereupon the delighted young husband exclaimed, "Do you hear that, Mag? He don't charge nothin'" and dropped the half dollar back into his pocket.

But the pastor had more to say. He told his visitor that the fee depended on the valuation he placed on the service rendered. If the young woman at his side, very good; but if he valued her fee would give some evidence of it. The groom was impressed. Slowly he produced the half dollar and hid it in the minister's hand. A $1 bill followed. Then he grasped his bride's arm and moved toward the door.—Frederic Walter Norcross, in The Christian Herald.

QUEER FRIENDS

On board the Union Castle R. M. S. Goth, on a voyage from the Cape to Tenerife was a little monkey belonging to one of the stewards. It was very fond of sitting on the back of a tortoise, and her ship's pet, while the latter crawled about the deck. Although rather ill-tempered and snappish with people, the monkey was always friendly with the tortoise, who made no objection to being used as her steed.—Wide World Magazine.

Warren, Ont. Feb. 11th. "I had a horse that had a Spavin for a long time and I had tried nearly every kind of medicine when a neighbor told me to use Kendall's Spavin Cure, which I did and it cured me."

M. ROSENTHAL. Kendall's Spavin Cure is no ordinary experiment, but is the world's standard remedy for all Swellings, Soft Bunches and Lameness in horse and man.

Every farmer, stockman, expressman, livery proprietor and horse owner generally should keep it always on hand.

KNEW ITS PROTECTOR

In spite of his well-known marksmanship a certain Englishman was invited to the country for a day's shooting. The attendant in great disgust witnessed miss after miss.

"Dear me," at last said the sportsman, "that bird seem exceptionally strong on the wing this year."

"Not all of them, sir," came the remark. "You've shot at the same bird this last dozen times. It's tollering you about, sir."

"Following me about. Nonsense. Why should a bird do that?"

"I dunno, sir, I'm sure," replied the man, "unless it's angling round for safety."

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 8, Windsor, Ont., writes: "I used to give my child a severe home treatment, with full instructions. Send me money, but write her to-day if you children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night."

WHERE ONCE I WAS HAPPY

There is no strength in my heart, And cold are the depths of my soul; Ebbing is the tide of my life, And now in my heart is a hole.

I watch the gentle mirth That others have here to-night, And my limbs so suddenly numb, Touched by a vague affliction.

Here was a land of song, And of pressure of hands and lips; Now Memory's soft chant a dirge, And her sorrowful hair hangs to her lips.

The glimmering light still slips In the waters, in the sky; But she who was more than sunlight— It is dark, she is not by.

LIKE A MAN

(Boston Transcript.) She—I don't see why you should hesitate to marry on $3,000 a year. Papa says my gowns never cost more than that.

He—But, my dear, we must have something to eat.

She (pecutantly)—Isn't that just like a man? Always thinking of his stomach.

Honor is a luxury to a millionaire, but a cold necessity to a poor man.

New Life for Old Ionia

The city of Ionia—the ancient Ionia, once pagan, then Christian, and now Mohammedan, the scene of Paul's labors and once the capital of the Seljuian empire, estimated to have to-day a population of 60,000—is rising again to prominence through the opening of railroad communication to Constantinople.

The city of Ionia is the centre of a rich agricultural and pastoral province, which politically is considered to be of almost the first rank in the Turkish Empire, since more than once the office of Governor of the province of Ionia has proved to be the stepping stone to that of Grand Vizier in Constantinople. Linked to Constantinople and Smyrna by railway, Ionia is seizing upon western methods and improvements faster than any other city in the interior of Asia Minor.

A closed aqueduct now brings excellent water from a lake 100 miles distant, a street car line is in operation in the city itself and some of the streets are electric lighted. In the country surrounding McCormick reapers are now at work. A German company has already expended about $3,250,000 towards a huge irrigation scheme by which water from the hills may be made available for 1,000 square miles of adjoining territory. These are simply a few of the indications of the material progress already begun.—Zion's Herald.

THE METHODICAL MAN

Glad When a Holiday is Over and He Can Get Back to Routine.

"I don't like holidays," said the methodical man; "they interfere with my work. I recognize fully the fact that days off, days of abstinence from labor, are necessary for our bodily and mental welfare, and I take a day off weekly, my day being Sunday, but for many years I have worked on every other day in the week regardless of holidays. Anything that breaks in on me in this observance is disturbing."

"To begin with, we get up and have breakfast an hour later than usual. There's an hour lost for me. And then on holidays we have dinner in the middle of the day, this being a further disruption of our usual routine, and then who can work after a hearty midday holiday dinner? And then, besides, the whole atmosphere of the day is changed."

"So I am glad to have the day over and to get back to work in my systematic, orderly, methodical way. It is in work in my regular, accustomed manner that I find my great pleasure, with my regularly recurring day of rest on Sunday. Even after that day I am glad to take up work again, and I have no use at all for holidays."
