SOWING HIS WILD OATS REAPING A HARVEST OF SORROW

How many young men can look back on their early life and regret their wild oats? "Sowing their wild oats" in various ways. To Drain Or Not To Drain.

Prof. W. H. Day has recently been making some calculations on the financial side of drainage. A farmer has 50 acres that is rather wet but although not drained gives say $15 per acre. The value of the crop for five years in succession, together with compound interest, would be $4144 at the end of five years. If however he were to drain 10 acres of the land each year, and if the drainage increased the value of the crop by $10 per acre (which is a low estimate) then the value of the crop, for five years, with interest, would be $5748. After paying for the drainage, with interest, he would have left $4124, the same within $20 as if he had not drained, but if he drained the whole 50 acres at once then the five crops, with interest, would be worth $6908. This after paying for the drainage would leave him a balance of $5121, which is $977 more than if he had not drained. During the next five-year period drainage by the installment plan would net him $1604 more than not to drain at all, and the complete drainage would enrich him by $2764 more than no drainage.

The price allowed for drainage in the calculation was $28 per acre, and the increase in the crop was placed at $10 per acre. As a matter of fact the increase is usually worth much more than this, so that the computation is somewhat unfair to drainage, however it is better to err on the safe side.

But the increase in crop is not the only return from drainage; the value of the land is largely increased. This is illustrated in the case of a certain farm in Lincoln County. It was bought for $6000 about two years ago. Last year $2000 was spent in draining, and it has since been sold for $12000.

The Department of Physics, O. A. C., over which Professor Day has charge has a large staff engaged in making drainage surveys for farmers wishing to drain, but they are kept very busy. Those who wish surveys made this fall should apply at once, as there are nearly as many applications in as can be attended to this season.

The terms on which surveys are made are explained in Bulletins 174 and 175, which may be had free from the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

How Census Will Figure Out.

The authorities at Ottawa have figured out pretty accurately how the census is going to affect the seating capacity of the ensuing Parliament at Ottawa. From what information can be obtained, Ontario is to lose five seats, and one of these is to be the seat held by W. F. McLean, whose riding will be split up between Toronto and the other two Yorks. There will be but one Huron and probably only two Middlesexes. The Maritime provinces are to lose three of their present seats, and British Columbia is to be practically what it is now. The big additions will be made in the North-western provinces, where there are to be 25 new seats. The basis of representation will be one member to every 33,000, instead of 25,000 on the last census.

Sprains require careful treatment. Keep quiet and apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely. It will remove the soreness and quickly restore the parts to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.
