

THE RIGHT HOUSE

Hamilton's Favorite Shopping Place.

The Semi-Annual Sale of Men's Shirts At 65c Starts Next Friday.

Thousands of New, Large Bodied, handsomely designed shirts

All sizes from 14 to 18—No Gaudy, cheaply-made items in the sale—Every one is the type of Good Wearing, Good Laundering, Nicely Colored Shirt That You Like and pay $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 for.

It is safe to say that every man in Jarvis who likes lots of good Shirts has heard of the Semi-Annual Sale of Men's Shirts that always occurs in the summer or winter at The Right House.

The third such sale starts here next Friday. More than 4,000 fresh, new Shirts will be concerned in this event. Don't mistake us—these Shirts are fresh and new—they are not old Shirts that could not be sold to anyone else—every design is very new—every Shirt is large bodied, well reinforced and fast colored. Sixty-five cents would not begin to buy any of them if it were not for the fact that a prominent Shirt Maker manufactures them in his dull season.

Plenty of whites with new narrow stripes, every shirt worth at the very least $1.00 and $1.25. Don't confuse The Right House sale with any other that may spring up in imitation. This is the genuine 65c Shirt sale that started men to talking about The Right House last year.

"Thirst" Incidents Which "Have Come Down in History."

The proposal of the Dutch to erect at Zutphen a statue to Sir Philip Sidney recalls to mind the world-famed episode of the dying soldier, with which his death is inseparably connected. It occurred when that Paladin on September 23, 1585, received his death wound before the walls of Zutphen. Parched with thirst, he called for a drink.

As he was putting the bottle to his mouth his eyes fell upon a desperately wounded soldier, who as he was being carried past threw him longing glances, "which Sir Philip perceiving, took the bottle from his lips before he drank and delivered it to the poor man with these words: "Thy necessity is yet greater than mine."

In the murder of Edward the Martyr in 979 a cup of wine played a tragic part. Wearied with the hunting, the young monarch was persuaded to seek refreshment at Corfe Castle, in Dorsetshire, the abode of his step-mother, the widowed Queen Elfrida. Upon his entrance she greeted him with a kiss and then, as he resisted her invitation to dismount, brought from the castle a goblet of wine. Even as the King raised it to his lips one of her retainers drew his dagger and with fatal effect plunged it into his back.

Every June the quaint old town of Rothenburg celebrates by a costume festival which goes by the name of "Meister-Drank" the mighty feat of a former town councillor who in 1691 saved the town from destruction. In that year Rothenburg fell before the arms of the savage Tilly, who at the head of the forces entered the vanquished town, where at the town hall he gave orders for the execution of the civic magistrates. Before, however, the doomed men were led forth to the scaffold the burgomaster's daughter presented herself bearing an immense flagon of wine, out of which the conqueror drank and passed it around to his officers.

All quenching thirst and yet the flagon was not half empty. Seeing this, the fair Heroess requested the aid of the councillors present who were able to empty the stupor at a draught. "If such be the case," cried Tilly, turning to the condemned magistrates, "I will pardon you all for the drinker's sake. Fill the flagon to the brim."

This was done, and then one of the city's magistrates, stepping forward seized the vessel, raised it to his lips, and neither drew breath nor set it down until he had quaffed its contents to the last drop. Then only did he reverse the flagon in proof that the feat had been accomplished. Tilly kept his word, and every year in commemoration of their deliverance do the citizens of Rothenburg enact over again this famous event in their town's history.

The Correspondence of Royalty.

If one were asked to speculate as to the sovereign whose daily mail bag was the greatest one would hazard the Kaiser, says The London Globe. But no. The most will say it ought to be the Pope. On the unimpeachable authority of a Paris contemporary we learn that the Pope is the recipient of the greatest number of missives. The mail of his holiness consists on the average of 23,000 letters, newspapers, etc. To go through this mass 35 secretaries are kept employed. The President of the United States receives nearly 1,000 letters daily and about 4,000 journals and books. The Kaiser's mail consists of 4,000 letters and frequently the same number of books and papers. Our King, we learn, is favored with 1,000 letters a day and over 2,000 newspapers and books. The Czar is not overworked in this respect for a sovereign, his majesty's mail being given at 650 letters, etc., per day. The kings of Italy and Spain have to deal with about 300 letters each. Queen Wilhelmina is still more favored, with 150 letters, etc. But President Fallieres is still more fortunate, for we are told that he receives few letters and hardly any papers.

Knill's Favorite Duty.

Sir John Knill, the retiring Lord Mayor of London, has been very popular during his year at the Mansion House.

The duties of a Lord Mayor are manifold. Some chief magistrates may find their principal interest in the numerous brilliant banquets they have to attend—some costing as much as $50,000, and on rare occasions no less than $250,000; others take great delight in organizing gigantic charity undertakings; but Sir John Knill's favorite duty has been presiding at the Mansion House Police Court. He takes the keenest interest in this work, and has never, unavoidably, missed a day's sitting.

It is not generally known that the Lord Mayor has to attend at the Old Bailey on the opening day of each session, the Sword of Justice being placed behind him.

For Dainty Handkerchiefs.

Delicate handkerchiefs can be done up easily at home, and careful handling causes them to wear much better. Wet them, rub each gently over with good white soap and soak in tepid water overnight. Squeeze out (do not wring), put them in a small enameled pan and cover with cold water and half a teaspoonful of powdered borax. Boil slowly, pour into a basin, add cold water and squeeze out all soap.

Next immerse them in clear tepid water and rinse about in this; then plunge into cold water tinged with blue. Leave in this for half an hour, squeeze and dip into a slight stiffening (one teaspoonful of corn flour to a breakfast cupful of boiling water).

Squeeze and roll carefully each handkerchief in a towel and iron with a moderately hot iron.

Of Some Benefit.

Barber—Did that bottle of hair restorer I sold you do any good?
Customer—Yes, indeed. It kept me from wasting my money on any more.

Old Fashioned.

"Old fashioned people?"
"Very. He and his wife are chums."

97 Fine Navy and Black Serge, Colored Worsted and Imported Tweed Suits for Men that are Worth "Measured by our own Standard" $17, 18 and 20, Ready This Week at $13.50

"If you knew these Suits as we know them they would be gone in a day."

You Have A Right To Know The Reason

When The H. S. Falls Co. of Simcoe sells Men's Suits at $13.50 that are worth $17, 18 and 20 there is bound to be something back of it, some remarkable reason.

The H. S. Falls Co. cannot afford to sell Suits of such value at $13.50 all the time. A sound clothing store cannot sell clothing at a loss, and an honest clothing store will not pretend to.

But the "Progress Brand" people had ninety-seven fine suits that were made to order for a person that was apparently "all right" when they placed the order, when the suits were ready to ship the "Progress Brand" people "heard something" and they concluded it wouldn't be good business to ship the suits to the firm in question.

We Have A Seat "Right Up With The Driver" With The Man Who Makes "Progress Brand" Clothing

He wrote us explaining the situation and added "We have decided to do you a good turn"—and HE DID. This is the reason we are going to sell $17, 18 and 20 suits for $13.50. What more could there be to say.
