LESSON V.-OCT. SZ, ISHE. A Psalm of Deliverance.—Psa. 55:

Commentary.—I. Gratitude for Deliverance (vs. 1-3). I. Lord—Jehovah, the all-sufficient, the self-existing One, though hast been favorable—Here is a hearty recognition of God's power, authority and interest in the affairs of men, and an acknowledgement of his goodness in all his dealings with Israel, thy land—It was the land which God had provided as a dwelling-place for his people, from which they had been driven because of their sins, and to which they were being restored through the divine favor. "He chose it for his people, conveyed it to them by covenant, conquerable it by his power, and dwelt in the self-existing One. A friend advised me to try Cuticura Olintment, I got one box, and it took the pimples away before I had it all used up. I can say it is a wonderful remedy. Any sufferer who has pimples should use Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Aylmer Mathers, Parkhill, Ont., por the chose it for his people, conveyed it to them by covenant, conquerable it by his power, and dwelt in people, conveyed it to them by covenant, conquered it by his power, and dwelt in it by mercy." Spurgeon. "The land is mine" (Lev. 25: 23), thou hast brought back the entivity of Jacob—The pun-ishment foretold by the prophets had been inflicted, and the sin of idolatry, for which Israel was chastised, had been formken. The thing which to human reason seemed impossible had been accomplished. The passage agrees well with the description of the restoration given in Hara I: 2-4, and doubtless reference is made to the return of the exiles under the leadership of Zerubbabel.

The nation of Israel is designated by the name Jacob. 2. forgiven the iniquity-The Hebrew words describe sin (1) as depravity or moral distortion, (2) as a wandering from the way or missing the mark; and forgiveness (I) as the removal of a burden, (2) as a covering of the offence; which would otherwise meet the eye of the judge and call for punishment.— Cam. Bible. The Jews in captivity had humbled themselves before the Lord, and the burden of their guilt had been removed. covered all their sin-Christ "is the propitiation for our sins" (1 John 2:2). The atonement of Christ covers the sins of all who in the evengelical sense believe. "The Lord has put it so completely away, that even his omniscient eye sees it no more."-Spurgeon. selah-No satisfactory explanation has ever been given of the meaning of this word. Some of the explanations that have been suggested are: "A sign to elevate the voice," "A change of note," "A musical note," "Up, "An appeal, or summons, to my soul!" Jehovah." It seems to have been used to give some direction as to the way the portion of the psalm should be sung. 3. all thy wrath-The divine wrath or indignation had been let loose upon the nation because of sin, but now it was withdrawn, and the people were rejoicing in the divine favor. fierceness of thine anger—The sin of Israel was the occasion of God's displeasure, and now that the hin was removed the divine displeasure ceased. The severity of the punishment inflicted was the measure of the fierceness of God's anger. Punshment less severe would not have been sufficient to meet the demand. "Lord, thou hast been favorable unto thy land," s explained and enlarged by the subsequent expressions in verses I-3, each indicating a particular point in which recognize in worldly prosperity the only favor has been shown. Underneath all ground for rejoicing, while the spiritthese expressions is a current of thanks- unliy-minded followed of Jesus finds his

4. Turn us-Although much had already been done in the nation's restoration, much still remained to be done before they could enjoy full national prosperity. The captivity had been When a sinner realizes the enormity turned, but as yet only a small proportion of the Jews had returned from his rebellion truly deserves, his most Babylon to Jerusalem. The expression matural appeal is for mercy, and such a means "convert," and was applicable to Israel as a nation and as individuals, () God of our salvation-This was a fitting acknowledgment of them to make, that God was their sole hope and help. The prayer included in this hope is expressive of penitence, need and faith in God's mercy and power. 5. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt. We tried a great many remedies but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. their distresses. Draw not out thy anger against us from generation to generation. Clarke. The desolation visted upon Jerusalem and the land of Judah when the nation was taken into captivity was great, and conditions there grew worse during the seventy years of exile; consequently the process of restoration was slow and arduous. It was more than twenty years after the decress of Cyrus authorizing the return that the temple was restored, and nearly one hundred before the walls of Jerusalem were rebuilt. Sin works ruin and its consequences are likely to be longlived. 6. Revive us again-Wilt not thou return and quicken us, restore our national life according to the promises of the prohipets?—Kirkpatrick. Faith increased as the petitioner proceeded with the request. The need was great, but application was being made to the right source, and confidence was growing strong. The same prayer with offered by Habakkuk (iii. 2) when he foresaw this sad condition of Israel. That the people may rejoice in thee-A manifestation of the divine presence and favor is a ground for rejoicing. The prayer indicates that the rejoicing was not to be in the restored temple, city, nation or harvests, but in the Lord. Multitudes joy in the Lord. "If God is the II. Show us thy mercy—There had aftendy heen a large manifestation of God's mercy to Israel, yet there vels a need for a constant exercise of that mercy. of his offences against God and what ery is not disregarded.

III. Assurance of prosp crity (vs. 8-13.) 8. Hear what God the Lord will speak There was a well-grounded expectation that the Lord would answer. Too often people offer up prayers, and then go their way without listening to hear what "the Lord will speak." will speak peace God's anger was turned away from Israel because of their changed artitude toward him, and in respones to their prayer of faith he would speak peace to them. His saints—Those who had set themselves apart for God's service. Let them not turn again to fo!ly In the past the Jewish nation had been unstable. They had repeatedly turned to the Lord and had as often forsaken him. "Those who would enjoy conscious communion with God must avoid al that would grieve the Holy Spirit; not only grosser sins, but even follies."-Spurgeon. It is the height of foily to Lord. 9. That glory may dwell in our was great prosperity in the nation, and the glory of the Lord was manifested in the temple at Jerusalem. "The 'giory' here is especially used in reference to the ark of the covenant, as formerly containing the holiest symbols of their religion, and the sign and pledge of Jehovah's prescence and favor."-Wheaton,

10. Mercy and truth are met together -God's words concerning lernet had been proved to be true, and his mercy had been shown in the nation's restoration from captivity. Israel had repented, and mercy had been granted in keeping with God's word of truth. Mercy and truth are inseparable. Righteousness and peace have kiesed each other-There ean he no peace in the highest sense but upon the basis of righteousness. Justice had been meted out to Israel and, in consequence of that, peace was bestowed. The elements of God's kingdom of grace are "righteousness, and peace, and jey" (Rom. 14: 17.) II. Truth shall spring out of the earth-There had been a period of spiritual dearth, but the truth of God would prevail in the hearts of men as a consequence of their turning to the Lord. Doubtless reference is also made to the time when Christ should appear on earth to establish his kingdom through his ministry and death. Rightcourness from heaven—A figure showin gthe prevalence of righteous-ness in the time to come when Israel should become prosperous, possibly look-ing forward also to Messianie times. 2. Our land shall yield her increase—fle-cause of laugel's sin the land had become barren, but with a return to righteensness its fertility would be restored, as an indication of God's favor, 13. I. Based upon God's past mercies.

II. Based upon God's present needs

III. Based upon God's ideal for man. l. Based upon God's mercies. Thou hast been favorable." The favor of God is the fountain of happiness to nations as well as to individuals. There is more in God to give cheer than in circumstan-ces to cause distress. Though Cyrus had proclaimed deliverance to the Jews they recognized God's hand in it, and in their restoration were assured of divine forgiveness for all past sins. In their captivity God had marked all their tendency and knew when they were healed of their tendency to idoltry. Then was he merciful and extended his power to bring them out of the land of captivity to their own land where they could again enter upon free and open devotion to God. The thought of all their sins and the boundless love and mercy of God filled the mind of the psalmist as he approached the Lord to ask for his special help in their new life in Canaan, He desired that they might realize the full blessings of restoration. The public interests lay upon the psalmist's heart, and his prayer was for the great congregation. His sense of their present afflictions did not obscure the remembrance of former mercies. II. Based upon man's present need. Though a representative number of the Jews were settled in their own land, they were surrounded by enemies and many evidences of their weakness were manifest. They were in a state of deep distress, such as is described in Ezra and Nehemiah. For them the psalmist sought forgiveness and consolation and prayed for a revival. His prayer expressed his dependence upon God, his confidence in God and his importunity with God. He looked to him alone as the source of reviving power and grace, since he only can speak true peace to the soul

III. Based upon God's ideal for man. When the psalmist reached the height of his pleading, his soul grew quiet in the presence of his Maker and he felt constrained to silence before him. A patient, attentive, obedient disposition possessed him and an expectant, waiting frame of mind enabled him to graspe the ideal, the plan of God for his needy people. The very approach to a true revival was conditioned on a convenant not to "turn again to folly." As God was the fountain of all their mercies. he must be the centre of all their pays. God had thought of peace in relation to his people and fulfilled them in conformity with his truth, but always in harmony with his righteourness. When mercy, truth and righteousness have a sovereign influence on men's hearts and lives all good maw be expected. Mercy and faithfulness blend together in all God's dealings with his people, and righteousness and peace are inseparable in their spiritual experiences. The divine purpose is to reverse the moral state of things so long prevalent among mankind. The psulmist foresaw a spir itual revival, a new realization of God, when doubt and weakness should give place to confidence and strength, when truth should cover the earth as righttousness clothes the heavens, when earth and heavens so long alienated in sympathy and character should be gie, when man should bear the image of God earth should be the reflection of heaven. A spiritual revival begins as a personal matter and the same standard must reach from individuals to na-tions. What a delight to discover, instead of a world of rebels against God. a world of loyal subjects! The earth quickened by the seeds of truth and watered by the rains of righteousness shall yield her increase. Truth shall spring up and flourish and so clothe this lower world as to make it the counterpart of that upper one. As the psalmist waited before the Lord he grasped the thought of fellowship and companionship with God, a place of safety for all who walk in the "way of his steps." There was revealed to him a higher standard for his people than any previous experience had reached. His vision embraced the dispensation of the gospel The possibility of divine life grew bright before his prayerful soul. T. R. A.
