Synod Demands Clean Elections

London, Ont., Sept. 14—Canada's bishops of the Church of England made a direct appeal to the electorate of Canada at the closing session of the general Synod this afternoon, to make individual efforts to command a high standard of political morality at the coming election and to go to the polls with a full and sensitive understanding of their responsibility.

The Synod, which has been as successful and satisfactory as any which has been held in Canada, closed shortly after 6 o'clock tonight with silent prayer and the benediction of Archbishop Matheson Primate of all Canada.

The appeal of the House of Bishops to the voters of Canada follows:—

"In view of the near approach of election day, the bishops of the Church of England in Canada hereby appeal to the Christian public throughout the Dominion to promote, at this time, by every means at its command a high standard of political morality and a greater sensitiveness of conscience respecting the exercise of a voter's rights.

"If this Dominion is to attain true and lasting greatness and to achieve the position of influence which would appear to be offered it by Divine Providence, it must set its face against all practices that threaten the foundations of truth and righteousness amongst us.

"The bishops therefore desire at this time to remind men of all political views and parties that political purity is one of the essential foundation stones upon which national greatness and prosperity must rest and in particular that to buy or sell a vote is to act the part of a traitor to your country, to violate a first principle of righteousness, and to invite the just contempt and condemnation of all good men.

S. P. Rupert's Land, Primate; Charles Ottawa, Metropolitan and Archbishop.

"I have a world of confidence in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for I have used it with perfect success," writes Mrs. M. I. Bedford, Poolville, N.D. For sale by all dealers.

RACHEL'S GUITAR

In What Time to Play a Gently Airy Piece

Rachel, the famous actress, did not neglect any means of turning a score or two honest penny. In her new life of her Francis Gibble tells the following story of a guitar.

Rachel first saw and admired it in an artist's studio. "Give it to me," she said. "I want to pretend that it is the guitar on which I earned my living as a street singer."

The just seemed a pleasant one, and the artist handed over the instrument. Rachel embellished it with ribbons and hung it in her own apartment, where it duly attracted the attention of Achille Fould, the banker. Hearing its story, he expressed the wish to possess it. "Very well," said Rachel, "you can have it for a thousand louis."

"Five hundred," said the banker, trying to bargain.

"No, a thousand," said Rachel, expressing her disdain for those who haggle.

And the banker actually paid a thousand louis for the worthless kitchen-knack. It is said that he learned the truth when he tried to sell his treasure at the Hotel Drouot and that the discovery of the hoax nearly sent him into a fit on the floor.

MEASURING THE EARTH.

Erastosthenes Made the First Attempt and Did Fairly Well.

The earliest attempt to measure the circumference of the earth was made by a Greek, Erastosthenes, who was born 276 B. C. He found that at Syene the gnomon, or upright pillar, used by the Greeks to measure the height of the sun in the sky, showed the sun to be exactly overhead at midday at the time of the summer solstice, while at Alexandria the gnomon cast a shadow upon the same date, showing that the latter point was one-fifth of the earth's circumference north of Syene.

Erastosthenes reasoned correctly that the length of the shadow at Alexandria bore the same relation to the circumference of the small circle described from the top of the gnomon as a center that the distance between the two cities bore to the circumference of the globe. This latter was 5,000 stadia, or about 625 miles, which when multiplied by fifty gives 31,250 miles as the circumference of the earth. This result is not quite correct, but as nearly so as could be expected from the first rough attempt to estimate it. —New York Mail.

Mexico's Way With Women.

Woman's place in Mexican life is the inevitable mingling of the Moorish ideas of the Spanish conquerors and the savage ideas of the natives, the Milwaukee Sentinel says. The Castilian hides his wife and daughters behind stone walls and the picturesque lattices of romance, and he is their lord and master. On the other hand, the Indian tribes are, of course, still bound by the spirit of the ancient savage customs. Historians tell of one of the baptismal ceremonies of the Mexican tribes, who fought their way to supremacy long before the Spanish arrived on the scene. To each boy baby the priests chanted this command: "Thy profession and faculty is war, thy obligation to give the sun to drink blood of the enemies and the earth corpses of the foe." To the girl baby they said with far less ceremonial: "You are to stay within the house, as the heart does within the body. Our Lord enshrines you in that place, and your office is to fetch and to grind maize in the metate."

Jokai's Joke.

At a banquet held in his honor in Toronto, Masius Jokai was called upon to propose the toast of "The Ladies." He made an excellent speech, during which he continually toyed with the brown curls upon his forehead. Finally he said: "I raise my glass in honor of the gracious ladies of Toronto. May they all live until my hair grows gray." His audience drank to the toast, but it was easy to see by the faces of the ladies present that they did not think much of the compliment. Jokai rose again from his seat and took from his head a magnificent brown wig, showing an entirely bald head beneath it. "My hair," he added, "will never grow gray." And the ladies, who had not known of his baldness, were more than pacified.

Plants Without Roots.

The "flower of the air" is a curious plant found in China and Japan. It is so called because it appears to have no root and is never fixed to the earth. It twines around a dry tree or sterile rock. Each shoot produces two or three flowers like a lily—white, transparent and odoriferous. It is capable of being transported 600 or 700 miles, and it grows as it travels, suspended on a twig.

A Fidgety Age.

Repose of manner was considered at one time essential to the well bred woman, but this is an ideal long consigned to the past. Every one fidgets in these restless days, no one has time to sit still nor to listen for more than a minute at a time without being bored and showing it.—London Queen.
