Erickson's Pretty Bride Refused to Milk Cows.

Des Moines, Sept. 25.-Two Swedes. Olson and Erickson, bought adjoining farms in Central Iowa. Erickson wed a rosy cheeked Swedish girl, who had been in service in this country for a few weeks previous to her marriage.

Now, Hulda had ideas of her own She Now, Hulda had ideas of her own, She married Erickson in order to become "a real American lady."

The first difficulty arose when, much to the amazement of poor frickson; she refused to milk the cows. Her husband refused to milk the cows. Her husband waxed emphatic and punctured his remarks by kicking the new milk pail, beating the cow and threatening the bride, but all to no avail. Hulds would be a lady.

In desperation he appealed to Otson his friend and neighbor. The good Ol-son's frau was an able-bedied dame from Helland. Not only did she milk the cows and plough the corn, but upon well. Katrina, too, had reared three stalwart sons of Holland thrift, but Katring had not roses in her cheeks . Her nor her eyes an enticing blue.

Mr. Olson grew a bit far sighted. He could spy Hulda's blonds head and print dress across a ten acre field, henc he was most ready o faympathy when his friend Erickson approached him with tales of domestic woe. In fact, he en-gouraged the confidences and promised labor with Hulda concerning the man-
