PULLMAN CAR TRAV

A Britisher Writes His Impressi Concerning It

Yet I confess, writes an English in Harper's Weekly, even bankru seems welcome as an escape from horrors of a Pullman, where you tra by day with two or three scores people, at least one of whom is c tain to be a squalling infant and other a ubiquitous youngster w lungs and legs in an equal state activity; where you have to re yourself every few minutes to ra the carboy's pestiferous attentio and where the buzz of an incess movement and conversation mak reading and dozing alike impossi But even that pales before the ter that await one at bedtime.

A Pullman car at night is the un uncivilized thing on the American c tinent, and one of the most in It quite fascinates my blushi enthralled as the darky porter my seat with other people's ings, holds a pillow-case in his te and squeezes the pillow into it, a hurls sheets and mattresses about, s pulls at chains and sliding doors a levers and curtains. And what can more enchanting than to hear husba and wife discussing how they sh dispose of themselves for the nigh whether they shall share the low berth or whether he shall be banish to the nest above?

And what pleasanter than to made conscious by the writhings a heavings and vigorous protuberanc of the curtains that just across t aisle some good lady is engaged the fearsome struggle to undress. T walk the length of a Pullman car about 10.30 p.m., when most of th berths are made up, and when th curtained contortions of those who a in the agony of "retiring" are at worst, and when you butt into st projections of humanity, and st over shoes and watch someone ing the heights of an upper b on the whole the most chilling sence I have ever encountered.

NAPOLEON'S [illegible]

The "Ugliest Woman in Paris" of a Strange Ap[illegible]

Mlle. Polaire, long k ugliest woman in Paris tress with the small proudly declares that become the owner of mansion in the aristocr St. Germain, she has a visit of the spirit of the Jean, who first met Jos harnais within the walls of sion. Mlle. Polaire relate wards sunset, a few week was reclining on a couch in ing-room. "Suddenly I aware," she says, "that a m approaching me in the half looked at him steadily, with but without fear. He was a strange, old-fashioned, mi form. As I scrutinized him nized the features of the gr leon, as they have been made to me by David's portrait of peror as a youth. As the appeared to me, he was as as a young Greek god, full fire. It is thus that he appeared at the time of his with Josephine, on the eve second glorious campaign in Ita I looked at him I was thrilled joy. I felt that I was in the of the greatest man that ever His face was thin, with the pure line of a Greek. His great deep, eyes radiated love, passion, embracing ambition. His beau face seemed to be appealing for He pressed his hands together, bent forward, as if imploring me without saying a word. Three the same apparition presented to me at the same hour and Was he brought back by memories of Josephine, or did he come to see I can hardly tell."

A French paper suggests that Polaire try the cure.

THE GIRL WITH A GROUCH

She is always selfish, unhappy and discontented.

The most selfish girl in the world is the girl with a grouch. The most unhappy girl in the whole world is the girl with a grouch. The effect would not be so disastrous if it ended with her own feelings. She not only injures herself, but she injures every one about her, because she seems to enjoy her grouch most when she sees those about her most unhappy. With some girls, this disposition is chronic—the attacks last from four days to four weeks. Girls subject to the grouch, spend much all their time thinking of themselves. They also spend much of their time smoothing out with cosmetics the wrinkles that these grouches bring to their faces. They cannot, however, change the facial expression that this disposition cultivates. Miss Janis, who is famous for her youthful beauty, says: "A sweet disposition does more toward promoting good looks than any other thing. Never think unkind thoughts of anybody, never sulk, never get into a temper. You can't have a nice, frank expression half of the time, if, during the other half of the time you are wearing a frown. Keep your temper and think kind thoughts. Temper is a great wrinkle producer, and a cross expression adds years to your looks." It is considered a valuable asset nowadays for a young girl to have a good disposition, and even Lady Diana Manners, who is a recent London debutante, has been named Lady Perfection because of her beautiful disposition.

WHITE! WHITE!

This 1912 February Sale of Whitewear is White in More Senses Than One

When one man says to another "He is a white man" what does that mean? It means that the man is square, honorable, upright, that you can turn any light you please upon his actions and they will show no dark spots, that you can depend upon him to do the right thing every time.

Here is the kind of white we think of from beginning to end when we plan our Annual February White Sale. Every garment we order for it must be the kind that a woman can examine up and down and across, inside and out with her critical eyes and then can feel satisfied with.

In a word, the undermuslin in this White Sale must first be sound merchandise and next, honestly priced, AN AVERAGE THIRD BELOW THE ORDINARY FIGURES. These prices strengthen the argument.
