PHOTOGRAPHY IS A MIRROR

Which held up to life, throws back a permanent reflection. Just as a poor mirror gives a distorted likeness, does an inferior photograph liberal its original. Good mirrors cost a little more money, so do artistic photographs. Art in photography is simply the truthful reproduction of nature, that my photographs show at least a fair measure of artistic merit is due simply to an ability to cause the sitter to momentarily forget the camera.

Successful Candidates

The Department of Education on Saturday announced the results of the middle school examination for entrance into the Normal schools. The appeal examiners have already reread the papers of each candidate whose marks would in former years have justified an appeal. Where such a candidate has still failed his statement of marks will be stamped as reread, and no further appeal will be allowed. In all other cases of failure appeals will not be refused, if made before September 1st, and accompanied by the fee of $2. In view of all the precautions taken, however it is most unlikely that such appeals would succeed. Successful candidates who desire to attend the coming session of the Normal schools are notified that their applications for admission must be made to the Deputy Minister of Education not later than Tuesday, September 3rd. The Normal schools will open on Tuesday, September 24th, at 9 a.m., at which time all candidates must present themselves. Applicants are required to be at least eighteen years of age before October 1st. Further information regarding the conditions of admission may be obtained from sections 4 and 5 of the syllabus, copies of which may be obtained on application of the Deputy Minister of Education. No candidate will be admitted who does not comply fully with the conditions of these sections. The result for Haldimand are:—L. Anderson (hon.), E. E. Beattie, E. J. Brown (hon.), E. G. Campbell (hon.), C. Comfort, H. E. Corman (hon.), H. Cox, E. H. Culler (hon.), F. W. Dohm, E. Dougherty (hon.), M. E. Donaldson, J. E. Downey, R. G. Elder, I. E. Fathers (hon.), W. R. Ferguson, N. M. NORWAY'S INCOME TAX.

It Reaches All Income in Excess of $83.08 Per Year.
How should you like to pay an income tax on next to nothing? If you were a Norwegian living at home and earning $134 a year you would be taxed on one-tenth of it if you were unmarried; on about one-twentieth of it if you were married and had no children. If you had children you still would be taxed on one-fiftieth of it.
With an income of $536 a year you would be taxed if unmarried on more than half of your income, if married and having no children on about 46 per cent of your income, having one child on about 37 per cent, two children on about 31 per cent.
Unmarried and having an income of $2,680 a year in Norway your income tax payment would be $421.22; married, with one child, $380.94; married, with six children, $355.17. All that you would get off your income tax (married for having six children would be $66; all that you would get off by having five more children would be $44 and six bits).
Married or unmarried in Norway, you could escape paying an income tax only by having an income less than $83.08 a year. Think of paying an income tax out of earnings of $7 a month!—New York Press.

THEY PLAYED CHESS.

The Loser Afterward Learned Without Asking Why He Lost.
Baron Hengelmueller, the Austrian diplomat, a man famous for his chess ability, one day at a house in Washington met a young man whose name he did not catch when the introductions were made. Chess was the topic of the conversation by all those in the company, and presently the young man suggested diffidently that he would be highly honored if the baron would play a game with him.
The baron consented. They sat down. After a few moves the baron looked up from the table checkedmate and found the young man reading a paper. The chessmen were placed again and, after not so many moves as before, the baron looked up to find the young man reading the paper and himself checkedmate.
After his dinner the baron came back. He wanted another game, being somewhat chagrined at the ease with which he had been beaten. As he came in he found the young man who had played with him that afternoon blindfolded and playing against sixteen opponents at the same time. The young man was Pillsbury, Saturday Evening Post.

Our Sleep.

As a race we sleep too little. An infant's life is nearly all sleep. Gradually as the child grows older the hours of sleep are shortened to half the day or about eight hours. Youth until the age of twenty is reached requires fully ten hours' sleep. Although nature demands fewer hours' sleep in summer than in winter, it has been proved that eight hours of sleep are required for the average adult in good health. By this, explains the Pittsburgh Dispatch, is meant not simply eight hours in bed, but that amount of good, sound, restful sleep right after night. Our power to work is intimately related to our ability to sleep, and there is no more reliable indication of sound health than the capacity to sleep naturally, and the more active and energetic the waking life the deeper the sleep.

His Light Diet.

The actor's sense of humor is always uppermost. He will jest about his hard luck, his ill luck or almost anything that offers an opportunity for a joke. Generally, too, he has courage—the courage to smile when his heart is heavy. A comedian, who was known to be in desperate straits, was invited to a social gathering one evening. When the poor actor arrived he was seen to be thinly clad, although the weather was bitter cold. He looked also as if he had not had any too much nourishment for some time. The hostess greeted him cordially.
"How well you are looking!"
"Yes," replied the comedian; "the wind has been very nutritious of late."

A Kicking Deferred.

Aunt Clara (to her young nephew, who has just brought a bucket into the parlor where she is sitting)—Good gracious, Tommy! What are you doing with that bucket? Take it down to the kitchen at once, Tommy—I want you to kick it. Aunt Clara, "cause I heard papa saying when you kick the bucket we'd get at the very least $25,000.

His Objection.

Mrs. Richquick—John, I want you to buy a new parlor suit. Mr. Richquick—Maria, I've been agreeable enough so far to get different clothes for morning, noon, afternoon and night, but I'm consumed if I'll change 'em every time I go into a different room.—Brooklyn Life.

Her Gain.

Mrs. Jones—Does your husband remember your wedding anniversary? Mrs. Smith—No; so I remind him of it in January and June and get two presents.—Harper's Bazar.

Feminine Ideals.

I look for the day when women will cease to be imitative, copying men, but will become completely, perfectly and proudly women.—A Woman's Letter in London Times.

ROYAL PERSONS FREQUENTLY RECEIVE LEGACIES FROM STRANGERS.

Legacies bequeathed by subjects of whose existence they have known nothing, have frequently been the portion of European rulers. Many of these testimonials were received by the late King Edward. Among living rulers, the Kaiser and the Emperor of Russia must be set down as the principal legatees of admirers.
Not long ago William had left him by a Munich testator the sum of $25,000, "as a humble subject's mark of appreciation of the splendid monarchic and statesmanlike qualities which his majesty has displayed, and to signify dissent from the criticisms that are from time to time levelled against him." The majority of the many legacies left the Kaiser came just after the efforts which he made a few years ago in support of The Hague Peace Convention.
Edward VII. was the possessor of a portrait that served as a constant reminder of the most curious will ever made in favor of a royal family. The picture was that of Henry W. Gibbs, Q.C., C.B., who, for a period of six years, in the 50's, was the private tutor of Edward, then Prince of Wales. In the will Mr. Gibbs also left to Queen Victoria a packet of letters "in the red box that contained my patent as Queen's counsel." To the present King, George V. (then Duke of York), and to the then Duchess of Fife, he left the sum of 100 guineas each. In the case of the latter, however, the will was revoked on the occasion of her marriage to Prince Charles of Denmark, but a codicil made her the recipient of 100 guineas, so that it should not appear that she was forgotten.
An odd feature of legacies left to royalty is that they sometimes come from misers, who either through enmity toward their own kinsfolk or because they are friendless, make their sovereign their heir. Such was the case of "Daddy East," as he was well known to Londoners who frequented the Bloomsbury region. It is said that he was the most successful beggar that ever prowled that quarter. He lived in a dirty cellar, and dressed in rags, a circumstance that led no one to suspect that he was the possessor of quite a fortune.
The police, however, had their suspicion, for, when he tried, a search was made of his cellar, with the result that over 500 pounds in gold was found hidden under the floor. There was also unearthed a will, carefully drawn up by a lawyer and properly attested. It consisted of but two lines, requesting that the money that was found should be handed over to her Majesty Queen Victoria for her own use.

Allan Day.

If you should ever be in Cornwall, in old England, and should rise some morning before the sun peers over the low eastern hills, and should see a fair maiden, clad only in her night-dress, sedately seated beneath a tree and solemnly eating a large apple, be not startled, but merely admire; for it is Allan Day.
Allan Day is the nearest Saturday to Halloween, and is a great children's festival in Cornwall, and St. Ives in Cornwall. Everywhere are exposed for sale huge apples known as "Allan apples," and the eating of them brings good luck. Girls and boys put them under their pillows at night and dream of their future husbands and wives.
To make the dream come true, one must rise at dawn and, in perfect silence and clothed only in a night-dress, go out and sit beneath a tree, and eat the apple on which one has dreamed, whereupon the future consort will make his or her appearance—a consummation that to folks outside of Cornwall would appear slightly embarrassing. Moreover, if one does not become cold, he will remain immune from chill throughout the year.

Antarctic History.

Shackleton's discoveries, as interpreted by geologists, throw some interesting light on the past and the present of the Antarctic continent. It has long been surmised that certain south polar lands at one time may have formed a connection between the chief continental regions of the earth, Wilkes Land, South Victoria Land and Graham Land, with other regions more recently named, have been conceived as forming a continent which in remote periods may have stretched its shores to connections with the other continents of the southern hemisphere. These suppositions have been placed beyond doubt by Shackleton. Parts of the Antarctic continent have been submerged, but it was originally a continuous land surface of vast extent. Africa was connected with it, and through it with South America and Australia.

A Turner Problem.

She was a dainty thing in pink, he a magnificent specimen in zebra; and they stood in the Tate Gallery before Turner's "Petworth Sunrise." He went into raptures over it to her. He explained it to her. He told her what was what. And as he talked he glanced from time to time at his fair listener, to find her, apparently, lost in rapture. At last he came to the end of his tether of adjectives. And still she gazed.
"Well," he exclaimed, "I never before knew you were so interested in Art!"
For a moment longer she continued to gaze at the picture. Then, with a tremulous little sigh, she turned to him.
"I have been wondering," she murmured, "how many pieces it would make if cut up into one of those jigsaw picture-puzzles."

The Water Cure.

From the advertisement columns of the Young Woman:
"Quiet, refined home offered lady by another living alone with maid. Large, sunny bedroom. Near church and station. Eleven miles from Bath."
"I thought cleanliness was next to godliness," remarks the friend who sends us the cutting.—London News.
