little washing soda in the water will be found a further help.

Spring is a coy maiden this year.
She advances a step and then recede, but she is coming. Already a walk about the town or out into the woods will reveal signs of returning life and beauty. Naturally people are impatient that this renewal of the vegetable world is so slow in coming, for as the years increase with men they welcome the approach of spring more ardently, and see in nature a fresh beauty. There is no need of impatience, however.
We cannot hasten the vernal season, and it is well that it is not left to human wisdom to determine the length of the recurring seasons.

No woman should be allowed to marry a man until she has learned how to cook properly. They may not know it, but half the young wives of the world kill the heart throbs of the husband by giving him uncooked or tasteless food. A man shows his critical faculty in food more than anything else. He can, and he does, change his restaurant and his waiter if things go wrong, but he can't change his wife so easily. A waiter must not answer back, a wife will. Not that she wants to, but she knows a new cook is just as hard to get as the keeping of a husband. No sane woman should go through the world without teaching her daughter this first element of success in keeping a husband.

Pretty Weddings

On Saturday the home of Mrs. Ward was all astir and it became quite evident that something unusual was about to take place. Everyone was radiant and happy, and well they might for a wedding was taking place that day, it being Miss Anne Gertrude Ward and C. Rossel Burnham, a prosperous young farmer of Delhi. At 6:00 o'clock p.m., Miss Ethel Snyder herealed the coming of the bridal party by rending the wedding march. The bride looked pretty and very bewitching, being attired in a gown of cream voile over silk and carried a bridal bouquet of white nations. She was attended by Miss Leita Curtis, who was also daintily attired.
The groom was ably supported by Lloyd Kelly, while Rev. J. W. Haith of Delhi pronounced the mystic words that made these two one. During the signing of the register Miss Snyder sang most beautifully "Abide with me" At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests, to the number of thirty, sat down to a most tempting and sumptuous wedding supper.
The gifts received by the bride will be everlasting and fitting tokens of the high esteem and love and honor in which she was held by her many friends. The bride and groom left on the evening train for their future home near Delhi. The bride's going-away gown was navy blue which was neat and very becoming. They entered their new home with the wish accompanying them that the bright prospects ahead of them may ever be realized and may they find the matrimonial sea pleasant and smooth.

One of those interesting events which in human life mark the parting of the ways and open the portals to domestic felicity and future happiness occurred at the residence of Lewis Miller, on Tuesday, April 30th, 1912. It was the marriage of their most estimable daughter, M. Luella, to Andrew L. Smith, our popular young miller and eldest son of R. W.
Smith. Old Sol shed its rays and beamed most graciously on the happy couple as at 11.30 the marriage vows were pledged.
Rev. McElroy of Hagersville performing the ceremony (towed in a simple but dainty gown of white embroidery, the bride looked the picture of loveliness as she was led to the parlor by her father, on whose arm she reclined, where the groom awaited her. Her bridesmaid was Miss Nora Erwin of Waterford who was attired in a cream costume. J. F. Smith, brother of the groom did the duties of best man. After the blushing bride was kissed and hearty congratulation extended, the guests, which were the immediate relatives of the family, repaired to the dining room, where a most bountiful, delicious and dainty wedding dinner was served, the table being prettily laid and artistically decorated with different tints of carnations. The bridal gifts were of a high order and were not only numerous but costly and useful, an emblem of the esteem in which the bride is held.
Mr. and Mrs. Smith drove to Hagersville where they took the train for Buffalo where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride's travelling dress was very pretty, it being fawn whipcord, with black hat.
As the young couple are widely known and highly esteemed their host of friends wish for them a life of peace and prosperity and as they journey through life together may dark clouds may fit across their pathway but may they ever behold the silver lining in the cloud.

Birthday Party

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Peart, it being in honor of their son Henry's birthday. Owing to the very inclement weather and illness of some of the friends only eighteen were able to respond to the invitations. A most sumptuous repast was served and which was thoroughly enjoyed, Miss Ethel Snyder presiding with her gracious manner and kindly smiles and was assisted by Mrs. Peart.
Before being seated all joined in singing the doxology, led by Miss Snyder. After tea the evening was spent in different kinds of games interspersed with several selections from the gramophone. The presents were inspected which were lovely including a bill for Edgar Machel and cheques from his parents and brother Will in the West. At a reasonable hour the company dispersed after wishing Henry many happy returns of the day.

What Would You Do?

We are all heroes in imagination. But none of us know how we would act when the crisis arises. We are all ready to acclaim the men who went down to death with the Titanic, and have a sort of pity for some of those who came ashore.
But the question is, would you have refused to save your life if you saw the chance to do so? Then it all depends on circumstances. A man may be brave as a lion and face death with stoical indifference if he only had himself to consider.
But most men have more than themselves to think of. There were men on that fatted vessel, no doubt, who obeyed the cry "women first!" and were swallowed up in the icy water whose last thought was for some helpless children, or aged parents who look for their return in vain. Who could blame such men in making one last desperate effort to save themselves for the sake of their loved ones? It is no reflection on the dead to say that had they known that the Titanic was to go down as she did, few boats would have left untitled.

License Commissioners Meet

The License Commissioners for the County of Haldimand met at the Court House, Cayuga, on Tuesday, April 23, to consider the granting of liquor licenses for the ensuing year. The licenses granted were the same as those of last year, with the exception of the Jarvis licenses. (Mr.
Wendland having thirty days in which to sell out.) The Commissioners will meet in Jarvis on May 13th to consider these licenses. In Cayuga the Mansion House license was granted a three months' license, but it is expected that this will be continued for the full year as the proprietor is preparing to erect a fine new hotel on the site of the present building. Several hotelkeepers will be warned that they must keep hotel, not simply barrooms, by providing better accommodation to the travelling public. G. L. Miller is Chairman of the Commission and the other members as well as
