

BEAR WIT

"Did she love him long?" "He was short." — Baltimore American.

Wise—This is certainly a good cigar you've given me, old chap. Guy—Shucks! I bet I've gone and given you the wrong one.—Judge.

"Do you believe in heredity?" "To some extent, yes." "In what way, for instance?" "Well, I believe in inheriting money." — Boston Transcript.

"Pa, will you tell me one thing about profane history?" "What is that, my son?" "Is it what you call a cursory study?" — Baltimore American.

"Scribbler must have unusual powers of imagination." "Yes, otherwise he would not regard most of his writings as poetry." — Buffalo Express.

Ernest Fan—Is your wife interested in the game? Little Fan—Interested! She'd give anything to know now whether I'm here or at the office.—New York Globe.

"I wish that old dodger would give me a tip on the stock market." "He should do so, you'd next be wishing you knew whether the tip was straight or not." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

Patron (to very slow waiter)—Bring me some salad, please. And you might just send me a postcard every now and then while you're away.—Judge.

"Why does Miss Schroecker close her eyes when she sings?" "Perhaps she has a tender heart." "I don't quite understand." "Maybe she can't bear to see how we suffer." — Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Geese are supposed to be symbols of all that is foolish." "Well, go on." "But you never see an old gander board a million kernels of corn and then go around trying to meet with a gosling." — Kansas City Journal.

Judge—So you admit you were going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. Chauffeur—Yes, your honor. Judge—Well, a man should pay as he goes. I'll fine you $25.—Yonkers Statesman.

Campaign Manager — I hear poor Jobb has lost his memory. Can't remember a thing from one day to another. Secretary—Wouldn't it be a good man to take charge of the campaign contributions? — Baltimore American.

The New Arrival
They suffer was a baby list
He smart as ours—now, sir!
An' my paw—yes, an' my maw, think
A nufol lot uv her.

Bumbuddy foun' her, my paw
In a ole holler tree;
An' they ist tho't they'd bring home,
He companee fer me.

Her teeth is all wore off—they are
A-chawin' bark, paw sed;
An' they aint hardly enny hair
A-tall upon her hed.

She likes t' squall most enny time
But when it's nite th' best;
Cuz then nobuddy in th' house
Kin git a bit uv rest.

Unless she is a better qual—
Nen you'ist bet she'll see—
Cuz she'll ist git put back into Ananother holler tree.
—New Orleans Picayune.

The Hats
See the latest style in hats,
Awful hats!
Every freakish brand of bonnet
That was ever made to sell.
Each with something spiky on it,
That will make you when you see it
Fit to fill a padded cell.
Twisted up and deated down,
Shrunken brim and swollen
crowns,
Made of felt and silk and velvet,
and the fur of dogs and cats,
Oh, the hats, hats, hats, hats,
Oh the kinky little, dinky little hats.

Watch the passing show of hats,
Brazen hats,
Every one enough to stagger
Even Hottentots or Turks
Aiming to be smart and swagger.
With a hatpin like a dagger,
And a lot of quilts like dirty
Culver crazy, red and blue,
Yellow, green, and purple, too,
Combinations and questions that would clear a house of rats.
Oh, the hats, hats, hats, hats,
Oh the mad chaotic, idiotic hats.
—Minaa Irving, in New York Sun.

A New Version
Fleahy Miss Muffet
Sat down on Tuffet,
A very good dog in his way,
When she saw what she'd do,
She started to run—
And Tuffet was buried next day.
—Lippincott's Magazine.

Arthur Kasehard, who spent much of his time traveling over the country for the government, was sent behind a bride and groom in a Pullman car one afternoon when the train went through a long tunnel. When it emerged into the light of day the bride was gazing desperately at her hat and fighting three fast runners with one or two hairpins which had become loosened. In order to relieve the situation and inject some humorous conversation into the party, Kasehard remarked: "This tunnel cost twelve million dollars." "Well," said the bride judiciously, "it was worth it."
